Boasts 136 Ranking Military Figures

Back to St. Paul

Washington, D. C., July 14 (AP)—The surgeon general's office today said Maj. Wallace P. Ritchie, 40, of St. Paul, Minn., will be the first medical officer to leave the army under the point discharge system.

He has 121 points, having served 33 months overseas in England, North Africa, and in Italy. Maj. Ritchie plans to resume practice in St. Paul and to teach at the University of Minnesota.

Ritchie is the father of three children. He will be processed for discharge at Fort Sheridan, Ill., where he was ordered today.

A survey of home towns of 459 leading figures of the war—active generals, admirals, air aces, and medal of honor winners—indicates that approximately 57 per cent of them were born in the west or middle west. This area includes less than 47 per cent of the population.

Tracing the birthplace of the heroes thru newspaper clips, the Army and Navy Journal, official records, and reference books, it was found that 101 of the ranking war leaders came from the eastern states, 97 from the southern states, 125 from the western states, and 136 from the middle western states.

51 Medal of Honor Winners

Of the 156 congressional medal of honor winners traced, nearly a third—51—were from the middle west. Thirty of the medals in the group surveyed have been awarded to soldiers, sailors, and marines from the south, 42 to men from the west, and 33 to service men from the east. Records of the 76 other winners of the nation's highest medal were unavailable in Chicago.

The midwest also led the rest of the nation in fathering the greatest number of high ranking officers on the army general staff. Thirty-four of the group surveyed came from the middle west, 27 from the west, 29 from the south, and 21 from the east.

Included in this group are Gen. Bradley, commander of the 12th army group, whose home is in Missouri; Maj. Gen. C. R. Huebner, commander of the 5th corps of the 1st army, who lives in Kansas; Lt. Gen. Eichelberger, commander of the 8th army, whose home state is Ohio, and Maj. Gen. Hodge of the 14th corps of the 6th army, who was born in Illinois.

Eisenhower, Nimitz Are Texans

Some other ranking generals and their home states are Gen. MacArthur, Arkansas; Gen. Eisenhower, Texas; Gen. Marshall, Pennsylvania; Gen. Arnold, California; Gen. Stilwell, Florida; Gen. Patton, California, and Lt. Gen. Patch, Arizona.

The top ranking navy personnel and their birth places are Adm. King, Ohio; Adm. Stark, Pennsylvania; Adm. Nimitz, Texas; Adm. Ingersoll, Kentucky; Adm. Halsey, West Virginia; Adm. Spruance,

BRITISH LINE FLIES MAIL FROM AMERICA TO BRITAIN IN 3 DAYS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, July 14—Air mail flown by the British Overseas Airways corporation planes is reaching Britain from New York in three days, it was reported today. This rapid service, contrasted to the week to 10 days required for American army postal service air mail, is attributed to BOAC'S 22 weekly Atlantic crossings.

BOAK makes each week seven round trips by land planes between Montreal and Prestwick, Scotland, and four round trips by flying boats from Baltimore, Md. Pan-American makes only two round trips and American Export one round trip between New York and Foynes, Ireland, it was said.

Neither American firm has a base in the United Kingdom and has to rely on BOAC to get mail and passengers from Ireland.

88 JAP SUICIDE PLANES DOWNED IN 105 MIN. FIGHT

Capt. Archer

Washington, D. C., July 14 (AP)—The destroyers Hugh W. Hadley and Evans knocked down 38 Japanese suicide planes in an hour and 45 minute battle off Okinawa on May 11, the navy disclosed tonight.

The bag, the navy said, was the largest ever reported for ships of their size during a single action.

Altogether, 88 enemy planes were destroyed in the epic struggle with marine Corsair pilots shooting down an additional 50 from the attacking force of more than 150.

The 2,050 ton Evans, smaller of the team, got 15 planes and was credited with four assists in 73 minutes before its guns were silenced.

The 2,200 ton Hadley established an all time record for destroyers by bringing down 23 Japanese planes in 105 minutes. In the last 30 minutes the Hadley protected the crippled Evans altho the Hadley itself was damaged.

Four Hit Evans' Deck

The Nips struck in groups of four to six at a time. The battle reached such ferocity at one time that the Evans was bringing down suicide planes diving on the Hadley, as well as protecting herself.

Lt. James M. Smith of New Freedom, Pa., the Evans' surgeon, said guns were firing so rapidly and so long that relief had to be provided for exhausted ammunition loaders.

Four suicide planes crashed on the Evans' decks and hull and the Hadley took hits that flooded both engine rooms and one fire room and knocked out its main battery.

The first Kamikaze pilot crashed into the Evans' bow an hour after the battle started. In quick succession, three more hit her.

One resulting explosion blew the executive officer, Lt. John W. Gilpin of Windsor, Vt., over the side. A seaman, Pat J. Macciocca of Baltimore, Md., plunged into the water and supported him until both were picked up.

Wounded Taken Off Hadley

A few minutes later the Evans' guns went out of action and the Hadley alone took over the job of fending off the Japanese planes. Sensing a kill, 10 suicide planes struck simultaneously. All were shot down, but the Hadley was damaged and most of her guns were knocked out.

As the attack began to taper off, many of the Corsair pilots ran out of ammunition but continued to shield the battered destroyers by riding the enemy planes into the water.

When the Hadley threatened to capsize, the wounded were taken over the side to life rafts and floats.

The remainder of the crews, however, managed to keep the craft afloat and both destroyers reached harbor the next day.

The skipper of the Evans is Capt. Robert John Archer of Piedmont, Cal. Capt. Baron Joseph Mullaney of New Bedford, Mass., is captain of the Hadley.

The Evans was commissioned in December, 1943, the Hadley last November.

MOTHER RACES TO STOP TRAIN, FAILS; 2 KILLED

Medford, Minn., July 14 (AP)—Two children were killed today after their mother had made a vain effort to halt the speeding northbound Rock Island railroad Rocket and it struck the auto in which they were riding, stalled on the tracks at a grade crossing here.

Victims were Patrick Wayne Hayes, 4, and his brother, Bruce Edward, 3, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Hayes, living on a nearby farm.

Witnesses said Mrs. Hayes apparently became confused and after making a futile effort to restart the engine of the car, leaped from it in the hopeless attempt to halt the train.

NAVY'S BIGGEST SHIPS BOMBARD HOKKAIDO PORT

1,000 Carrier Planes Renew Attack

GUAM, July 15 (Sunday)—(AP)—The newest, most powerful battleships in the United States navy are shelling the Hokkaido steel mill port of Muroran, more than 250 miles north of the scene of the fleet's bombardment on Honshu yesterday, and 1,000 carrier planes are striking northern Japan.

Announcing this second day of the air and sea bombardment of the Japanese islands, Adm. Nimitz said today that the battleships Iowa, Missouri, and Wisconsin are participating, and that the action is continuing.

Second Force Engaged

With the battleships are the destroyers McGowan, Norman Scott, and Remey, a special bulletin said. They are bombarding in the vicinity of Muroran while the heavy ships strike directly at the city's steel plants.

Naming of these vessels indicated that at least two mighty task forces are roaming practically at will up and down the Japanese coasts. Yesterday Nimitz announced the bombardment of Kamaishi on Honshu Island by the battleships Massachusetts, Indiana, and South Dakota, two heavy cruisers, and four destroyers.

87 Planes Blasted

Those ships and the carrier planes of the fleet set Kamaishi afire, destroyed or damaged 87 Japanese planes, and destroyed or damaged 39 enemy ships, 27 locomotives and railway facilities in yesterday's strikes, Nimitz said.

Locations of today's air strikes were not disclosed. Nimitz in an earlier bulletin, however, had said that both the surface forces and the planes were hitting the enemy again.

Actually, he announced the shore bombardment hours before it was confirmed by reports from the fleet—boldly telling the Japanese that the United States fleet was going to strike again.

Adm. Badger Commands

The bombardment then began at 9:35 a. m. (Japanese time—7:35 p. m., Saturday, Chicago time.)

The new bombardment force is commanded by Rear Adm. O. C. Badger.

The target, Muroran, is at the entrance to Uchiura bay on

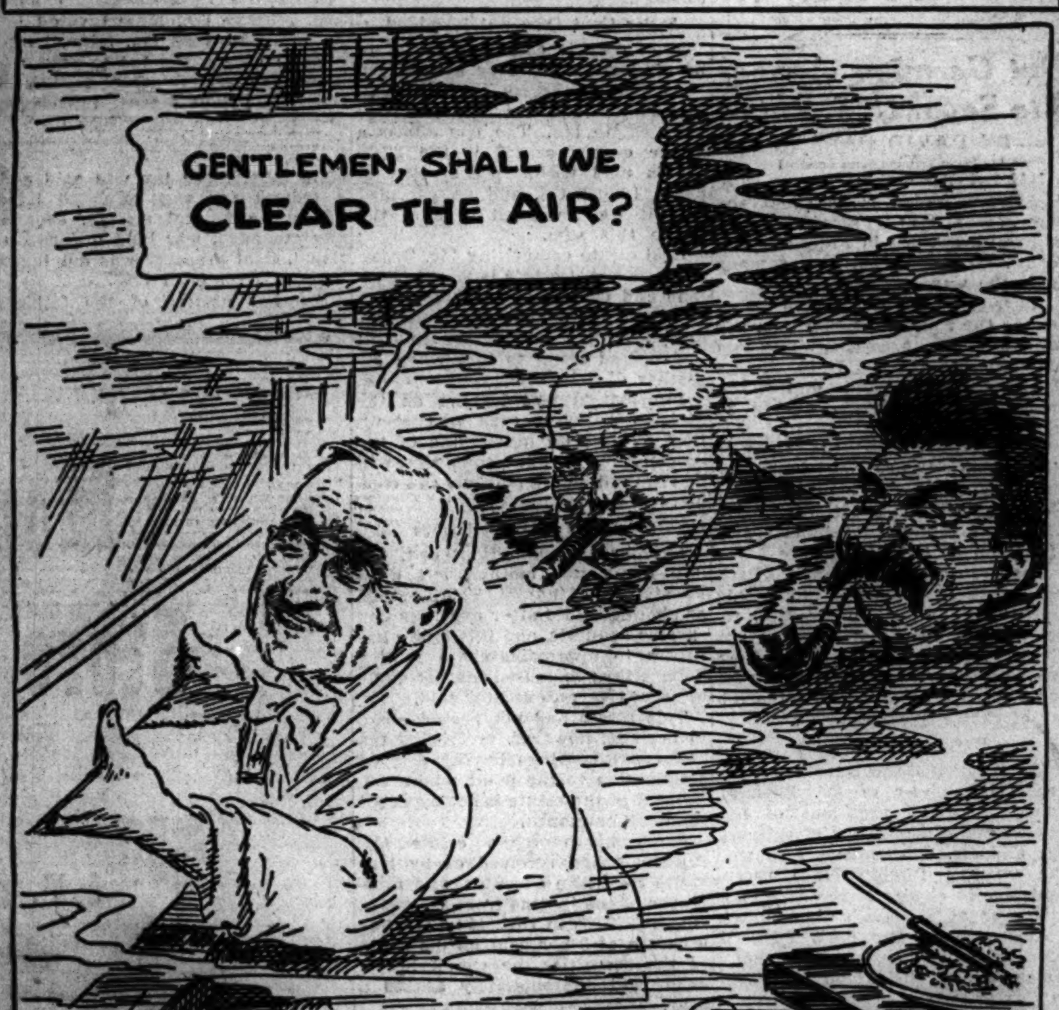
THE NON-SMOKER



GENTLEMEN, SHALL WE CLEAR THE AIR?

Soap, He Says! 1,000 Women Mob Druggist

Jacksonville, Fla., July 14 [Special]—L. M. Lippman, manager of a drug company here, had a sale on soap flakes today and when it was over he felt as tho he had been shoved thru a wringer.

Lippman had inserted a three inch ad in a morning newspaper saying the drug store, owned by him and Gabe Lippman, would have soap flakes on hand—two boxes to a customer. When he arrived at the store to open up at 8:30 a. m., he saw a crowd of about a thousand persons, mostly women, congregated around it.

"What's the matter?" he asked a woman. "Has there been an accident?"

"No," she replied. "There's going to be a sale on soap flakes."

The Rush Begins

"I'm the manager," he said. "You'll have to let me in first."

The women cried, "Here comes the manager!"

Lippman squeezed himself to the door and opened it. In a twinkling 14 women were in the narrow store and Lippman had been shoved up against a wall. He pleaded with them to slam the door shut. They put their weight behind it and managed to lock it.

Resentful of this exclusion act, the crowd pressed up against a plate glass window and it broke. Lippman telephoned for police. Soon four policemen arrived and stationed themselves at the door.

After explaining to the crowd the customers would be let in two at a time, the policemen cautiously opened the door. They were engulfed at once in a wave of shoppers, bowled over, and were not seen again until the debris was cleared away.

Women Take Over

Women ran behind the counters, pushed over show cases, clambered over each other, opened boxes, upset tables, and broke two more windows. Their hats were knocked off, their dresses were torn, and their hair-do's became undone. Caught in the crowd outside, Lippman's eight clerks took one look at the maelstrom and decided to stay out.

Within two hours, 3,000 boxes of soap flakes priced at 23 cents each, had been distributed, but Lippman, who had taken refuge on top of a show case, said very little cash had been collected.

"This was the first soap flakes I've had in months," he said, surveying his wrecked store, "and I don't care if I never have any more."

And This Little Pig Did Not Stay at Home

This little pig did not stay home. If it has not been found by strangers and cut up into chops and sausage, it is a white, purebred Poland China, six weeks old, and weighs 25 pounds. It was reported lost yesterday by Lyle Johnson, 14, who lives on Bitler rd., two miles north of Aurora. Lyle said he pitched hay for a week on a neighbor's farm and asked for the pig instead of pay.

REPORTS REDS GET BILLION FROM ADDED U. S. GLOBAL FUNDS

Washington, D. C., July 14 (AP)—One billion dollars of the administration's requested expansion in the export bank's lending power was reported today to be already earmarked for Russia.

A senator, asking not to be quoted by name, told a reporter he had received this information directly from one of the highest administration figures.

He said the Russians were reported seeking a total of $6,000,000,000 in credits.

Legislation for expansion of the bank's loan powers from $700,000,000 to $3,500,000,000 sailed thru the house yesterday by a 12 to 6 vote.

Senate leaders have put it down as "must legislation" to follow action on the Bretton Woods agreements and the allied nations charter.

U. S. MUST RULE SEIZED PACIFIC ISLES, SAYS HART

Washington, D. C., July 14 [Special]—Sen. Hart [R., Conn., tonight said islands wrested from Japan in the Pacific "should be governed as one unit, and we are the ones to do the job."

Hart, former commander in chief of the Pacific fleet in the far east, advanced this view in participating with Sen. Thomas [D., Utah] in a broadcast on far eastern policy.

Hart said Japan must be recognized "without the imperial system and its tied-in Shintoism, tyranny, corruption, secret nationalistic societies, and gangsterism in general."

Hart said the American government has some responsibility in helping restore Philippine war damage, "but Philippine leaders must realize they must make their own way in the world."

British Censor Egypt 'Puppet Role' Charge

LONDON, July 14 (AP)—Civilian censorship delayed the distribution outside of Egypt today of court testimony that Britain "pressured" Egypt into a declaration of war against the axis.

George Palmer, Associated Press correspondent, reported tonight from Cairo that the first 82 words had been deleted from a cabled dispatch in which he reported defense testimony at the trial of a young Egyptian lawyer, Mahmud Issawy, who pleaded guilty to assassinating Egyptian Premier Ahmed Maher Pasha after the premier announced Egypt's war declaration.

Controled by British

"The substance of my cable which was stopped by censors was that Issawy's testimony said Britain pressured Egypt into a declaration of war," Palmer advised the Associated Press' London bureau later today.

"Censorship is presented here as Egyptian but actually it is controled by a British civilian censor. It is a strictly civilian censorship.

"Local papers were permitted to publish full extracts of the testimony but all outgoing cables were subject to censorship."

Court Answers Defendant

After hearing Issawy's charge, Palmer reported, the court told the defendant that Egypt's war declaration was in accordance with a Yalta conference agreement.

A spokesman for the British ministry of information said here that "there is nothing we can do about" censorship in the Issawy trial and added:

"After all, the war's over and if we persuaded Egypt to get into it what's the difference?"

PETAIN'S DEATH TO BE DEMANDED BY PROSECUTOR

PARIS, July 14 [Reuters]—Andre Mornet, white haired French state attorney who convicted Mata Hari, the French dancer shot for espionage in the last war, will ask for the death penalty for Marshal Petain, former Vichy chief of state, whose trial for high treason is due to start July 23.

"Petain acceded to his powers as a result of the defeat of France," Mornet said today. "Only because of that defeat was he able to remain in power. That will be the basis of the case I am preparing.

"In treason there can be no distinctions, and none can be made between the period of German occupation of northern France and the time they occupied the free zone."

Mornet plans to call some 15 witnesses, including Albert Lebrun, president of France at the time of France's fall, and former premiers, Paul Reynaud, Edouard Deladier, Leon Blum, Edouard Herriot, and Pierre Etienne Flandin.

GI GUARD IN ANTWERP GREETS TRUMAN TODAY

YANKS IN BERLIN YEARN FOR HOME OR PACIFIC AREA

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

BERLIN, Germany, July 14—The majority of Americans in Berlin want to go home or go on and fight Japan.

They figure that "the fellows who have not been over so long or who are so interested in Europe that they are willing to volunteer for service should take on the occupation job and let the men who did the fighting return home."

Scores of men and officers I have interviewed since we entered Berlin say: "If we had marched into Berlin when Germany was collapsing, it would have been a great thrill. Now, after weeks of drilling and furbishing for the entry into Berlin, the joy is somewhat stale."

Eager for Parade

Only the prospect of the final big victory parade before President Truman, Prime Minister Churchill, and Generalissimo Stalin arouses their interest, "because we want to show those Europeans what a snappy American parade can be."

Yet, wherever they turn United States soldiers and officers in Berlin have ample opportunity to devote themselves to pastimes or take up new studies. In their working hours they mount guard, drill, or go off on special detached assignments. When they are thru with work, movies and service centers are in readiness to provide relaxation.

The vast majority are established either in private homes or in huge barracks which the nazis built with one aim in mind—to keep a soldier satisfied. The men talk longingly of fresh vegetables and fruit they'll eat when they get home, but there is less complaining here than in other sectors of Germany.

Women Pursue Yanks

The Berliners are making sure we know they feel the pinch of short rations. There is a strict order that no rations can be given away or bartered, yet wherever there is a chow line youngsters turn up with a tiny pail or a small plate and scamper away in triumph. The children know a friendly GI with the same unerring instinct as the lean, sad-eyed pups who appear in the wake of the American troops.

The troops have few illusions about their German foes. The Berliners, both male and female, charge that "those barbarian Russians raped women of all ages when they entered Berlin." But when our men appeared in Berlin, the women pursued them with determination.

In the suburbs in which we are billeted girls parade the streets in their Sunday best evidently in quest of company for their evening stroll. Some bring along little tots to try and bridge the gap.

$30 for a Bottle

After the rate of venereal disease rose so rapidly in the Rhineland and other German areas in May and June, doctors, members of the hospital staffs, and others addressed many groups of our men. But these preachings had a less restraining effect than did the boldness of the German women, which the men resent.

There is little liquor in the capital. A private said today he paid 300 marks [$30] for a bottle of vodka. He could afford it because he had sold his watch to a Russian soldier. It was a watch with a Mickey Mouse on it, which entranced the Russian. The American said he tried to make the Russian understand it was not an expensive watch, but the Russian finally bid 3,000 marks [$300] and that sealed the bargain.

SALAD POISONS 800 DINERS AT MAYO HOSPITAL

Galesburg, Ill., July 14 [Special]—Approximately 800 of the patients and personnel at Mayo General hospital became ill this afternoon from food infection, it was stated tonight by Col. Henry L. Krafft, commanding officer.

All persons affected are confined to beds and are receiving medical attention. So far as is known, none is in serious condition, it was stated.

The infection was traced to ham salad served at the noon meal today in one of three mess halls.

British Navy Pays President Honor in Channel

ABOARD THE CRUISER AUGUSTA WITH PRESIDENT TRUMAN, July 14 (AP)—President Truman, en route to the Big Three meeting at Potsdam, will arrive at Antwerp, Belgium, at 10 a. m. [British double summer time], Sunday [4 a. m. Chicago time], at the end of a 3,800 mile voyage.

This was disclosed tonight as the President's two ship task force steamed thru the calm, but misty English channel under escort of the British cruiser Birmingham and six destroyers.

Two floating mines were sighted near the convoy, reminders of the European war whose aftermath is a prime concern of the Potsdam conference.

The British men of war suddenly appeared suddenly out of the mist over the channel at 7 a. m. [Greenwich mean time], to accord Mr. Truman the honors of the royal navy.

Three Cheers for President

The British sailors sounded out the traditional three cheers as their ships moved past the President's ship.

A broad smile on his face, his hat across his heart, the President stood beside James F. Byrnes, secretary of state, to acknowledge the salute.

The seven ships returned to their posts of duty and three smaller escort destroyers took their place as the Augusta and the escorting cruiser, Philadelphia, moved on past the white cliffs of Dover where many people of that oft bombed and shelled port gathered to see the President's ship.

Simple Ceremonies

Mr. Truman, finishing work on United States proposals to be made to Premier Stalin and Prime Minister Churchill at sessions starting Monday, decreed the simplest of ceremonies for tomorrow's debarkation.

He will be met by Charles Sawyer, United States ambassador to Belgium, and an honor guard from the 35th division as he walks down the gangplank with Byrnes.

Upon leaving the ship two hours after it lands, the President and his party will enter automobiles for a 45 to 60 minute drive to Brussels where they will board the Presidential C-54 plane for the two and a half hour flight to Potsdam, near Berlin.

The route from Antwerp to Brussels will be guarded by American soldiers. There will be no reception by the Belgium government since the area is included in the allied military zone.

30 Room Residence

The President's top ranking party will be quartered in a 30 room residence only a 10 minute drive from the former castle of Ex-Kaiser Wilhelm at Potsdam.

While the Presidential quarters will be guarded by American troopers and secret service men, Russian troops will guard the route from the residence to the palace.

The President slipped out of Washington the night of July 6, going by train to Newport News, Va., where he boarded the Augusta the next day. Unusually fine weather has been the lot of the party from the start.

Churchill May Leave Today

SAINT JEAN DE LUZ, France, July 14 [Reuters]—Prime Minister Churchill will probably leave his holiday castle at Bordaberry tomorrow for the Big Three meeting at Potsdam.

He went up the River Nivelle this afternoon to complete his painting of "The Black Prince's House." Last night he attended the fireworks display on Hendaye beach—a combined tribute to Churchill and Bastille day. There was thunderous applause when Churchill rose and said: "I am going to make a speech." And then, after a long pause, "Vive La France."

Reds and China Agree

MOSCOW, July 14 (AP)—The soviet union and China have reached a broad mutual understanding on important questions involving relations between the two countries, a joint bulletin reported today. The discussions were suspended for the impending Big Three meeting.

Chinese Premier T. V. Soong left for Chungking after a visit here while Premier Stalin and Foreign Commissar Molotov departed for Potsdam to confer with President Truman and Prime Minister Churchill. The conversations with the Chinese will be resumed in the near future, the bulletin said.

A high foreign diplomatic authority said, "I am sure the whole democratic world will greet the progress that has been made between these two great nations."

Eden Confers on Turkey

LONDON, July 14 (AP)—Indicating that the question of future soviet-Turkish relations would have a high place on the agenda at Potsdam, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden met a second time today with Turkish Foreign Minister Hasan Saka.

BRITISH TO GET 5 DAY HOLIDAYS IN DANISH TOWN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, July 14—Field Marshal Montgomery has devised a plan for ameliorating the hardships imposed by nonfraternization by choosing the Danish city of Aarhus, capital of Jutland, as a holiday town for the entire 21st army group. During the next three months, 5,000 members of the 21st will arrive in Aarhus every fifth day for a five day holiday until the entire 100,000 men have been there.

SECRET SERVICE VEILS TRUMAN'S BELGIAN PLANS

BY HAL FOUST

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

BRUSSELS, Belgium, July 14—Arrangements for President Truman's arrival at Antwerp tomorrow morning and his departure by plane for Potsdam were obscured by semi-secrecy this evening. United States secret service men, responsible for the President's safety, arrived here this morning and protested against yesterday's publicity which was passed by military censors. This closed the mouths of civilian as well as military authorities.

Admiral Stark, chief of the United States navy in the European theater, arrived here this afternoon en route to Antwerp. He said that Gen. Eisenhower, a few hours earlier, was not sure whether he would meet his commander in chief at the Antwerp dock.

The President's arrival may, by coincidence, take place simultaneously with announcement of King Leopold III.'s abdication.

BAR FARM OWNER FROM EATING HIS OWN MEAT

Milwaukee, Wis., July 14 [Special]—Because he gave 200 pounds of beef to a friend and the USO, Albert Trostel Jr., president of Albert Trostel and Sons company, tanners, today was barred for the next two months by Thomas E. Fairchild, OPA hearing commissioner, from using any meat from his own farm.

The prohibition also includes any one "who eats at his table." Fairchild acquitted Trostel of OPA charges of illegally acquiring 1,434 pounds of meat without surrendering ration points. Fairchild found defense evidence upheld Trostel's contention he had a right to the meat because he actually supervised his farms in Chenequa and Hartland, Waukesha county.

Trostel testified he raised beef cattle for home consumption for several years. Should Trostel violate certain directives in the decision, the two months prohibition will be extended for the duration of meat rationing, Fairchild ruled.

ITALY DECLARES WAR ON JAPAN, FORMER ALLY

ROME, Italy, July 14 (AP)—The foreign ministry announced today that Italy had declared war on her former axis partner, Japan, effective tomorrow. The action presumably had the approval of the allies. Premier Ferruccio Parri had announced that such approval would be necessary under the Italian armistice terms.

SYLVAN SETTING AMID WAR'S RUIN AWAITS BIG 3

Europe and Asia Look Toward Potsdam

POTSDAM, Germany, July 14 (AP)—Here in a wodland setting still strewn with the wreckage of the German army are Versailles of 1919 and Tehran of 1943 rolled into one. Europe and Asia alike look to it for help.

From Moscow, London, and Washington have come forecasts of problems to be laid before the Big Three next week.

With Europe's chaotic peace and Asia's warfare inextricably linked, the soviet union's position toward Japan is described as similar to that of the United States toward Germany before Pearl Harbor.

Big News May Come Late

That is why the most important news of all may not be known about the Potsdam conference for a considerable time to come.

All that remained was for the three principals to take their places in Germanic versions of the White House, the Kremlin, and No. 10 Downing street, sheltered behind lines of allied guards several miles deep.

The American and British groups are housed in little territorial islands well within the soviet zone in greater Berlin. Traffic on the broad highway to Potsdam is a cosmopolitan collection of "high brass" from Moscow, London, and Washington.

Little round faced Sgt. Valentina Semenovna Bespilova twirls her red and yellow flags almost like batons and gives the smartest salute this side of Buckingham palace. Her heart's in her lost home in Stalingrad, but her mind is in the Potsdam traffic.

Food and Wine Flown In

Several thousand elite, green capped soviet frontier guardsmen compose the force chiefly responsible for policing the "Potsdam conference." If you do not have exactly the right pass—you don't take a step forward and live.

To refresh the historical figures who are gathering here, expert caterers have had fine foods and wines flown in during the last few days. At Yalta last winter the Big Three feasted on the luxuries of the soviet union. The United States and the British empire are contributing to the Potsdam functions.

BERLIN MAKES READY

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

BERLIN, July 14—Many of the state department's experts on Germany were in Berlin today perfecting final preparations for the Big Three conference. Some of them are attached to the group control council which opened its Berlin offices in the former "airdistric headquarters" of Hermann Goering on the Kronprinzenallee, but they are rarely there. They spend most of their time in the "meeting city," the restricted area where the Big Three will meet and live.

Meanwhile, the American military governor of Berlin continued negotiations with the British, French, and Russians to find headquarters and joint methods of procedure for the "komandantur" in which the four powers will coöperate to administrate and supply what is left of Berlin.

Religious School Reopens

In what is considered a move to counteract the impression that the Russians are anti-religious, Red officials have allowed the University of Berlin to reopen its theological school. To date it is the only department operating in the university. Prof. Q. Dilschneider of St. Paul's church in Zehlendorf [a suburb] said he had received the fullest support of the Russians in his effort to repair the organ and parts of his church to enable him to resume services.

BADEN BADEN LITTLE CHANGED UNDER FRENCH

But Germans Appear to Favor U. S. Rule

BY DAVID DARRAH

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

BADEN BADEN, Germany, July 14—Baden Baden looks about the same, except that its streets are full of French soldiers in American uniforms. It has suffered no damage from the war.

American built trucks and jeeps, lent to the French, rumble thru the streets where American diplomats and consuls assigned to Vichy, France, once walked under the guard of the Gestapo during 13 months of internment.

Baden Baden is now the center of the French military government for the zone of Germany occupied by Gen. De Tassigny's 1st army. De Tassigny's military headquarters is at Lindau on Lake Constance.

The French occupy Brenner's Park hotel, where American diplomats were locked up while awaiting repatriation. The hotel has not changed. It is still run by Herr Brenner, who complains only that the French confiscated his wine cellar of choice French wines.

Barman Still There

Many personalities remain, including a brother of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, former president of the reichsbank and minister of economics, and Dr. Schliemann, who was the German foreign office representative in charge of the American internees at Brenner's Park hotel.

Also still at Brenner's Park is Charlie the barman, known to many Americans at the Adlon in Berlin in former years.

The Germans one sees are sorry American troops do not occupy Baden. Baden seems to fare as well as any other part of Germany, so far as food is concerned. But the Germans complain, and say they fear the coming winter.

The French rule at first was severe, but now it does not seem to differ from that of any other zone.

Still Maintain Curfew

The French still maintain a curfew, altho it has been abolished in the American zone. They also make local Germans post the names of every occupant of a house beside the door.

The French have rid the town of Nazis. The former Nazi burgomaster, named Burgler, who used to make things as tough as he could for the American diplomats, died in a hospital. The French say that many German civilians pester them with claims of being Americans.

The streets are more animated and the people look less despondent and bewildered than when I saw them two months ago just after the French had taken over the city.

Karlsruhe in Ruins

One comes down this way from Mannheim thru Heidelberg, Karlsruhe, and Rastatt. Our forces have Mannheim and Heidelberg. The 7th army headquarters is at the famous university town of Heidelberg, which seems almost undamaged except for destroyed bridges.

Mannheim, on the other hand, has been badly damaged. Karlsruhe is in ruins from saturation bombing by the royal air force. Some 20,000 persons were killed. The magnificent schools were destroyed.

ESTIMATE PUTS F. D. R.'S ESTATE AT 2 MILLIONS

BY CHARLES GOTTHART

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., July 14—The late President Roosevelt's estate was estimated at 2 million dollars by interests closely identified with his family here today.

His personal fortune was placed at $900,000 in cash, stocks and bonds, and $100,000 in real estate, with another million dollars inherited from his mother contributing to the total.

Figures approximating 2 millions are expected to be filed with the collector of internal revenue at Albany by Sept. 3, preparatory to payment of the federal estate tax. The will was admitted to probate here July 5 and the law requires the filing of an estimated return within 60 days.

5 Per Cent Discount Provided

More specific data is expected to be disclosed some time before Oct. 12, when the executors under Mr. Roosevelt's will act on the New York estate tax. The law allows a 5 per cent discount if the state tax is paid within six months of death [April 12], and an executor said it was intended to save the estate this sum.

Real estate comprising Mr. Roosevelt's personal estate is largely farm land and wooded acres surrounding the Hyde Park lands and homes acquired by his late father in 1867 and passed along to him when his mother died in 1941.

Information was lacking on the division between cash and securities making up nine-tenths of the personal fortune, and some time will be required before auditors can complete the inventory.

Mother's Bequest Grows

Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, the late President's mother, left him nine-tenths of her $1,089,872 estate, or about $915,000 after expenses and specific bequests, and this figure has grown to approximately a million dollars thru increased market value of securities, an executor said.

This estate had not passed along to her son, however, protracted tax and court hearings having delayed distribution to the point where settlement of the estate is not expected for another month.

From his mother's estate Mr. Roosevelt had received only his $5,000 fee as an executor, and nine-tenths of the income from securities worth $939,993 in 1941. If he realized a return of 3 per cent on his share of the securities, he would have been paid approximately $25,000 a year.

Escaped Heavy Taxes

Until now, the Roosevelt family fortunes have escaped heavy taxation on estates passed along from one generation to another, for after the death of Mr. Roosevelt's mother, the rambling stone mansion at Hyde Park and 430.9 surrounding acres were willed to him free of inheritance taxes.

Upon the death of James Roosevelt, the father, in 1901, a small state inheritance tax was paid and a federal tax was refunded later because a federal statute, eventually amended, was held unconstitutional. Real property was not taxed in New York until 1903.

Another portion of the father's estate also passed to the late President tax free. This was one of three parts into which the remaining estate was divided, the tax on which was paid by the estate.

Subject to Federal Levy

The remainder of the inherited estate was subject to federal inheritance taxes on the portion of the legacy exceeding $40,000, and to state taxes on the portion exceeding $5,000. Since 1941 the federal exemption has been increased to $60,000.

Assuming the present 2 million dollar estate would be trimmed to $1,750,000 net after payment of debts and administration expenses including executors' commissions, the estate would be subject to federal and New York estate taxes totaling $634,900.

The late President in his will directed that his residuary estate be held in trust for his widow, Mrs. Anna Eleanor Roosevelt, for her lifetime and then passed to their children, Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Boettiger and James, Elliott, Franklin Jr., and John Roosevelt.

SEN. HIRAM JOHNSON VOTES NO ON WORLD CHARTER APPROVAL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., July 14—Sen. Hiram Johnson [R., Cal.], venerable opponent of foreign entanglements, went on record today against the international security charter written at San Francisco. He cast a negative vote against the recommendation made by the senate foreign relations committee yesterday for senate ratification of the charter.

Sen. Johnson

The committee vote for recommending ratification was originally 20 to 0. Three members of the committee were absent. The count was changed to 21 to 1 today when Johnson, one of the absentees, voted against the recommendation and Sen. Murray [D., Mont.] voted for it. Sen. Shipstead [R., Minn.], who is out of town, has yet to vote.

Johnson was one of the leaders in the senate fight against the league of nations after World War I.

Grocer Penalized; Extra Points Sent by Mistake

James F. Riley, Chicago area director of the office of price administration, said yesterday that he has asked ration board 45-7 at Crown Point, Ind., to recall 4.750 red points which he said had been mistakenly issued to James Babola, grocer at Cedar Lake, Ind., whose account had been debited by that amount. Compliance with the request was promised, he added. The OPA verification center here had found that bogus coupons for 4,750 points had been turned in by the grocer.

OFFICIALS STUDY ESCALATOR FOR N. W. STATION

Plan Called Possible Post-War Project

BY ARTHUR EVANS

Possibilities of an escalator for North Western railroad station as a post-war project are being studied by the road's officials. The engineering studies, which have been under way for months, are part of a general plan for rehabilitation and improvement of the station. Officials said plans will not be completed until after the war.

North Western officials appear receptive to the idea of a moving stairway but point out that any decision may not be reached until the war time pressure of keeping trains moving has eased.

Would Save Considerable Climb

The grand staircase leading from the first floor to the waiting room and train platform is regarded by road officials as the most practical place for an escalator. This would save passengers a considerable climb.

The North Western, some experts have said, handles more passengers a day than any of the other five downtown passenger terminals.

The Illinois Central has more suburban traffic, but comparatively few of the commuters go thru the Central terminal. The Union station has more thru passengers. The North Western estimates its traffic at around 100,000, five days a week. Of these between 75 and 80 thousand are suburban passengers. Most of them use a ramp from the Madison st. level, over the bridge across Canal st. into the station at train shed level. An average of 250 trains a day move in and out of the North Western station.

Must Keep Trains Moving

R. L. Williams, president of the North Western, said the improvement plans "are all matters for the reconversion period when the lines can again get what they want and are able to do things they want. Our job now is to keep the trains moving—we can't get men enough for normal operation."

Some experts believe escalator building may advance as rapidly as did air conditioning of trains and buildings before the war. The Kansas City Terminal Railway company recently signed a contract in Chicago with the Otis Elevator company for post-war installation of escalators to cost $480,000.

Many Cities Have Them

The Pennsylvania station in New York put in 13 escalators before the war. In Philadelphia, the Pennsylvania has escalators. In Omaha, Neb., the Union Pacific and the Burlington stations have them. St. Paul, Minn., rail officials are considering escalators for the Union depot.

One engineer has figured how much energy an escalator in the North Western station would save in terms of horse power. The vertical lift would be about 20 feet. A 150 pound person climbing the stairway would lift 20 times 150 pounds, or the equivalent of 3,000 foot pounds.

The stairway has about 33 steps and it would take him about half a minute to make the climb. His power rate would be about 6,000 foot pounds raised in one minute.

2,000 N. Y. FOOD STORES TO CLOSE IN OPA PROTEST

New York, July 14 [Special]—The stores of 2,000 independent fruit and vegetable retailers in Brooklyn and part of Queens will remain closed beginning Monday in protest against OPA regulations they charge have made it impossible for merchants to operate legitimately, Abraham Zion, president of the Associated Retail Fruit and Vegetable Merchants, declared today. Chain stores will not be affected.

The question of extending the closings to Manhattan and the Bronx will be considered Monday at a meeting of the board of the Allboro Retail Merchants.

Zion said merchants are unable to conduct their affairs on a profitable basis without resorting to black market operations. The merchants want either the elimination of ceiling prices or a mark-up between wholesale and retail ceilings sufficient to insure a profit. He said present mark-ups do not allow leeway to cover spoilage and left overs of perishable items. He charged the mark-ups were established by persons who do not understand the retail business.

Protest Ban on Produce Grown by Jap-Americans

Washington, D. C., July 14 (AP)—Agriculture Secretary Anderson today said he had received numerous complaints that produce firms in Seattle, Wash., are refusing to handle produce grown by Japanese Americans in that area. He said such discrimination is unjustified. He sent a telegram to the Northwestern Produce Dealers' association urging that the situation be corrected.

TUGWELL LAYS SUGAR DROUTH TO U. S. AGENCIES

Failed to Revive Production

BY RUSS SYMONTOWNE

[N. Y. News Staff Correspondent]

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico, July 14—After the Anglo-American commission, of which he is a member, drastically curtailed West Indian sugar production for 1943, thus laying the groundwork for today's sugar famine, it was "just nobody's business" to reëstablish production, according to Gov. Rec. G. Tugwell of Puerto Rico.

I had a long talk with Tugwell here just before he left for Washington, D. C. I told him I had seen a copy of the commission's secret report, and that, so far as I could determine, he was one of the men chiefly responsible for America's sugar shortage.

"That's not quite true," Tugwell replied. "It is true that the commission did recommend the curtailing of sugar growing in 1943. But that was the last thing we had to do with sugar. Production should have been fully resumed the following year, but that wasn't our business. As it turns out, it appears to have been nobody's business."

Sought to Raise Food

Tugwell explained that when the commission met in Jamaica in June, 1942, food conditions in the islands were becoming serious.

"In Puerto Rico we had had no food ships for 41 days, and rice riots were taking place," he said. "The commission had just one job to do and that was to find food for these people to keep them from starving and from rioting.

"We had a joint memorandum from the state, war, navy, and interior departments telling us there were ample supplies of sugar in the United States and that there would be no shipping available to move sugar crops.

"Therefore, we decided to curtail sugar production and to try to raise food on some of the sugar land."

Scheme a Failure

Tugwell admitted that the scheme to raise food on sugar lands had been a failure, intimating that sugar producers who opposed the plan had deliberately sabotaged the program.

"We did very well with a sort of large scale victory garden program on other lands, however," he said. "By the following year the shipping shortage had eased and the submarine menace had largely passed. Full sugar production should then have been reëstablished, but that wasn't the business of the commission. Our work was done."

Tugwell declared that after 1943, as governor of Puerto Rico, he had waged a continuous battle with various Washington agencies to get the fertilizer which is essential to sugar production on this island.

"I have never been able to get a reply to our questions as to how much sugar is needed," he said. "And I could never convince them that sugar cane can't be raised overnight, but is really a three year crop."

I told him I had been informed that within two weeks there would be 50,000 tons of fertilizer on the island, or twice as much as there has ever been at this time of the year. I also was told that it was being rationed so that some land which should have 1,200 pounds of fertilizer will get only 600 pounds.

That's Business of AAA

"Don't ask me," he said. "That's the business of the agricultural adjustment administration which is part of the department of agriculture and doesn't come under my jurisdiction."

At Hato Rey, a suburb of San Juan, I saw a long line of peasant farmers patiently waiting for clerks to help them make out the endless forms required by the AAA before it will dole out fertilizer to them.

There is a rough rule of thumb which says that it requires a pound of fertilizer to raise a pound of sugar. For the first time since 1941 there is enough fertilizer available to permit Puerto Rico to raise a full crop of sugar—perhaps as much as 1,300,000 tons for 1946 — and yet on orders from Washington that fertilizer is being rationed on the same basis that was used to raise a scant 900,000 tons this year. I could get no official explanation for this situation here.

"The regulations are made in Washington," is the reply I get.

RATIONING OF UNSOLD '42 MODEL CARS TO BE DROPPED SOON BY OPA

Washington, D. C., July 14 (AP)—All remaining new 1942 passenger automobiles — about 6,000 — will be removed from rationing to clear the way for new models, it was learned tonight.

Similar curbs are being drawn up, however, for new models manufacturers are just beginning to produce. Rationing of these is expected to last until at least early in 1946.

Removal of new 1942 models from rationing was decided upon because dealers believe these cars may not sell or that prices would drop if they were available when the new cars arrive.

CLOTHING STOLEN OFF CLEANER'S TRUCK

Five parcels of clothing were stolen from a truck parked at 2224 Maypole av. yesterday while Lawrence O'Brien, 2847 Madison st., driver for a cleaning shop at 2954 Madison st., was making a delivery, police were told.

BUTTER RATION POINTS REDUCED TO 16 PER POUND

A reduction from 24 points to 16 in the ration value of butter, effective at 12:01 a. m. today, was announced yesterday by the office of price administration after New York merchants recommended the 8 point cut to prevent spoilage of accumulated stocks.

Reduced military requirements will add about 10 million pounds of butter to the civilian supply during August, said OPA. The red point reduction had been expected a week later.

"It is believed that with the set-aside reduced, there will be enough butter to permit the point reduction, at the same time maintaining the good distribution that has enabled consumers to find butter in most stores thruout the country in the last several months," OPA said.

Country butter will remain at 12 points a pound.

The OPA statement took note of the danger of deterioration of butter held too long in retail stores where customers don't have enough red points to purchase meat.

The agriculture department in an effort to increase the shipment of meat to shortage areas announced that effective tomorrow nonfederally inspected slaughterers will be allowed to move meat across state lines, provided they meet sanitary standards and certain other conditions.

An OPA regulation limiting the hours of labor that an automobile owner can be charged for common types of repair work will be put into effect Sept. 1, James F. Riley, acting director of the office of price administration in metropolitan Chicago, said yesterday. He said the new order is expected to end complaints of overcharges.

OPA ASKS $7,116 TREBLE PENALTY IN UPGRADE SUIT

Rae E. Walters, regional OPA administrator, yesterday filed suit in federal District court charging that Darling & Co., 4201 S. Ashland av., had upgraded a carload of calfskins and is asking $7,116 treble damages.

Federal District Judge William J. Campbell entered consent injunctions and judgments against two clothing wholesalers charged by the OPA with over ceiling sales. The defendants were Charles and Dan Cohen, doing business as Adams Dress company, 318 W. Adams st., assessed $1,057, and Meta Nugent, 310 W. Jackson blvd., $422.

Unestimated treble damages were asked in an OPA complaint that over ceiling sewing machine prices had been charged by Herman and Daniel Dickstein, owners of Joseph Saltzman & Co., 571 W. Van Buren st.

SHOE STORE LOOT TOTALS $2,613

Burglars took 650 pairs of rationed shoes, 10 pairs of slippers, and a case of rubbers, all valued at $2,613.50, from his shoe store at 1939 E. 71st st., Sterling Reames told police yesterday.

OPA WILL STOP 'C' CARD RATION TO MOTORISTS

Fort Worth, Tex., July 14 (AP)—The "C" gasoline coupon will pass out of the rationing picture Oct. 1 but the change will have no effect on mileage granted to motorists, two Washington OPA officials said here.

The two, T. K. Tindale, assistant to the deputy OPA administrator in charge of rationing, and Don Leach, assistant to Tindale, who were in Fort Worth yesterday, said the action would mean all gasoline rations above an "A" book would be issued in the form of "B" coupons.

They said recent changes in the gasoline rationing program had tended to eliminate the difference between "B" and "C" drivers; that the use of only one kind of supplemental gasoline rationing coupon would simplify record keeping.

895 PULLMANS SET ASIDE FOR GI USE TODAY

Last Civilian Sleeper Runs in Area Made

The Pullman company today will remove 895 cars from regularly scheduled train sleeper service trips of less than 450 miles and assign them on army orders to troop trains.

B. E. Dewey, superintendent of car service for the company, will be in charge of dispatching the Pullmans all over the United States from the pool headquarters in Chicago. Some orders for Pullmans will be given by the army on a week's notice, and some will be given 24 hours in advance.

Army Needs Sleepers

The office of defense transportation ordered railroads to cancel sleeper runs of less than 450 miles, beginning at noon today, in an effort to give some relief to the military transportation problem. Redeployment of troops from Europe to the Pacific has created an extraordinary demand for sleeper accommodations by the army.

Civilian Pullman passengers traveling within the 450 mile zone left Chicago railroad stations last night for their last sleeper rides to Detroit, Mich.; St. Louis, Mo., and other war production centers. Civilians can expect no relief for at least six months, rail officials predicted.

The ODT order will remove Pullmans from overnight trains from Chicago to Akron, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus, Dayton, Springfield, and Toledo, in Ohio; Evansville and Indianapolis, Ind.; Cedar Rapids, Davenport, Des Moines, and Waterloo, Ia.; Bay City, Calumet, Detroit, Grand Rapids, Green Bay, Ishpeming, Lansing, Saginaw, Muskegon, Petoskey, Port Huron, Traverse City, and Watersmeet, Mich.; Louisville, Ky.; Rochester, Mankato, St. Paul, and Minneapolis, Minn.; Nashville, Tenn.; St. Louis, Mo., and Harrisburg, Peoria, and Quincy, Ill.

No Trains Discontinued

Railroads have reported none of their trains will be discontinued. Night trains will continue to carry coaches, mail, express, and baggage cars, and occasionally troop cars.

Overnight coach space will be increased on some trains, but the reduction of sleeper service is expected to add to the already overcrowded coach situation on many lines. Service men being transferred in small groups, or traveling on furloughs, will suffer with the civilians. A recent survey disclosed that service men on furlough make up 20 to 50 per cent of all travelers on "civilian" trains.

Greater demands will be made on day and twilight trains in the 450 mile zone, and a heavier burden will be thrown on hotels, it is expected, when travelers who customarily sleep in Pullmans on their trips begin demanding hotel rooms.

SET $13,040,700 COMMUNITY AND WAR FUND GOAL

A goal of $13,040,700 has been set by the Community and War Fund of metropolitan Chicago for the appeal for funds which will be started Oct. 1, Walter P. Paepcke, campaign chairman, said yesterday.

The 1944 goal was $12,980,000 and was met successfully. Paepcke said the goal has been increased this year because the fund will support more services at higher costs. A larger allocation also will be made to the 187 health and welfare agencies of the Chicago area which receive help from the fund.

G. I. Joe in the Pacific

By ARTHUR VEYSEY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

WITH 7TH FLEET SUBMARINES, July 14—What submarine boys do most while at sea is sleep and eat. It's surprising how much sleeping and eating a guy can do. It's pleasant and not very hard work.

Some crew members work two hours and then get six off. Others work four hours at a stretch and then take eight off. The subs' kitchens never close which makes the cooks, like Michael Palowy, 5811 S. McVicker av., Chicago, among the hardest working men.

Submarines, unlike many places in the army and navy, are just about as democratic as the dreams of idealists. Officers have their staterooms—about the size of a railroad compartment—and their own messroom, but except for eating and sleeping, a happy sub is just one big family. When you have to live for weeks in a small group with hardly room to turn around you have to get along.

Every Inch Is Used

Every square inch of a submarine is allotted to something or some one. Many spaces do double or triple duty. There are not enough bunks to go around, so the beds, when not folded up against the wall, are full of whoever is off duty.

Some bunks are tucked in among torpedoes. Sleeping with several hundred pounds of explosives under you and some more atop you does not seem to bother, after you get used to it.

Most subs are loaded with harmonicas. One sub boasts an orchestra composed of a guitar, accordion, and piccolo. The accordionist is Lt. Herb Hansen, 229 N. Grove, Elgin, Ill. You should hear him sing "Roll Me Over," one of the many songs that grow like ballads of old during long cruises under sea.

The climax of every patrol comes when the sub surfaces and the men come topside to watch the victim burn. Tanks are favorites. You just stand there on deck with the waves washing over your feet and cheer and shout and laugh. You don't seem to think that fire and explosions mean death.

Mix Oil and Water

Submariners seldom come within the touch of death. Once in a while a sub comes up amid the bodies of Japs killed on a ship, and then, even tho the bodies are those of the enemy, there is no cheering and laughing.

Subs have their minor tragedies. Like the time the potatoes and meat spoiled and the crew went two weeks with only one meal a day. And another time some one turned the wrong knob—subs are stupendous plumbing jobs full of knobs and pipes and valves—and fuel oil poured into the drinking water. Mixed drinks of oil and water are not too popular.

For years sub crews spent much of their waking hours making lists of things they were going to do when they hit port. But nowadays port is likely to be some isolated bay, and about all there is to do is wade thru the mud, get in revolving beer lines, write letters, read accumulated mail, take in a few movies and wait to go back to sea.

Dr. G. A. Kline, U.S. Merit Board Aid, to Leave City

Dr. George A. Kline, medical examiner in Chicago for the 7th regional headquarters of the United States civil service commission, will leave tomorrow for Los Angeles, Cal., where he has been transferred at his own request. A resident of Chicago for 35 years, Dr. Kline formerly was with the state board of health and city health department. He said he requested the transfer because of his wife's health.

ACCUSED JUDGE RENOUNCES HIS PENSION RIGHTS

Washington, D. C., July 14 (AP)—A congressional inquiry into the conduct of former Federal Judge Albert W. Johnson came to an abrupt close today when the jurist removed himself as a witness and then renounced claim to a $10,000 annual pension.

Johnson, 72, resigned from the Pennsylvania middle district court bench last month, giving his age as the reason. A house judiciary subcommittee was questioning him, to the time of his withdrawal from the hearing, concerning charges of fee splitting in receivership cases under his jurisdiction. He also was being questioned on sources of $39,000 he allegedly spent above income over the past 10 years.

A Voluntary Witness

The former Lewisburg, Pa., judge was a voluntary witness before the committee. When his attorney, John H. Bigelow, stated the judge has "no desire to offer further testimony," Chairman Kefauver [D., Tenn.] declared:

"In fairness to the judge, we wanted to give him every opportunity to make any explanation for the testimony which has been given here. If the judge does not want to testify any further the committee feels it must accede to his wishes."

Johnson submitted to the subcommittee a letter which stated::

"I herewith renounce and relinquish any right, including financial benefits, that I may have under the retirement provision of the act of congress, judicial code section 260, cited in title 28, U. S. C. section 375, as amended."

The committee had intended cross-examining him today at great length but when the committee convened at 11:30 a. m. Bigelow announced the withdrawal.

"We were prepared for a full day's cross-examination," said Committee Counsel M. H. Goldshein.

Hearings Ended

Johnson's withdrawal ended public hearings by the subcommittee. They began Tuesday and have featured testimony of kick-backs and fee splits in receivership cases in Johnson's court.

Chairman Kefauver said the subcommittee would prepare its report and transmit it to the full committee for later presentation to the house.

The committee was empowered by the house to investigate Johnson and Judge Albert L. Watson, of the same court, to determine if impeachment proceedings were warranted.

The committee inquiry has been conducted for more than a year. A federal grand jury in Scranton, Pa., also has been investigating the court and has indicted nine persons.

In testimony before the committee Johnson denied he participated in or knew of alleged kick-backs and fee splits in receivership cases handled in his court.

When the committee asked that he account for a deficit of $39,000 between the income reflected over a 10 year period in his books and his expenditures as reflected by the same books Johnson said he had many sources of income that he had not reported all of them.

One witness, Atty. John Memolo of Scranton, Pa., testified he gave $34,000 in fee splits from a receivership case to Jacob Greenes, Scranton beer salesman. Greenes testified he in turn gave the money to Johnson's son, Donald.

Delmar K. Townsend of Hughesville, Pa., appointed by Johnson in 1934 as a receiver for a wire company, testified that in the next three years he gave $17,000—half his fees—to another son of the judge, Albert.

MAC ARTHUR HAILED AS OPTIMISTIC AND FORCEFUL GENERAL

G. G. Von Eberstein

Gen. MacArthur is a quiet, forceful man who earns the liking of everybody around him by his pleasant manners and his sturdy optimism. Warrant Officer [j. g.] George G. Von Eberstein, who served MacArthur for 23 months, said in Chicago yesterday. Von Eberstein was on his way from Camp Atterbury, Ind., to Salt Lake City, Utah, on a furlough trip.

"I never once saw Gen. MacArthur depressed," Von Eberstein declared, "not even in the months when the war was going badly for us and the Japanese were hammering away at Australia. He was always composed, always working calmly on his plan to return to the Philippines."

Von Eberstein, 24, was secretary to Gen. MacArthur for about six months and spent another 17 months attached to his headquarters. This was in Australia, long before the now successful Philippines campaign was launched.

"When I got to know Gen. MacArthur I knew that if he said he would return to the Philippines, he definitely would," Von Eberstein declared. "The Japs had bitten off more than they could chew when they undertook to expel him from the islands."

IRISH TO MARK NATIONAL FEIS HERE ON AUG. 15

Ireland's national Feis, a music festival which originated in the Hill of Slane 1,512 years ago, will be held for the first time in Chicago on Aug. 15 at Pilsen park, 26th st. and Albany av. The date is the anniversary of Ireland's national holiday, Lady Day in Harvest. The festival will open at noon and close at midnight.

Fifty Irish song and dance contests of the festival are expected to attract 1,000 entries—all amateurs, because professional entertainers are ineligible. Winners of the Feis festival at Fordham university will compete to qualify as United States' champions and the right to take part in the Dublin festival in 1946.

The Harp and Shamrock club of Chicago is sponsoring the festival. The Rev. Patrick J. Molloy of Annuncation church is honorary chairman, and Dean William F. Clarke of De Paul university law school is chairman. Their assistants include John P. Butler, Michael J. Gearaghty, Dr. Thomas E. Hardy, Sheriff Michael F. Mulcahy, Mique Malloy, John J. McGinnis, Thomas F. McInerney, and Joseph P. Neary.

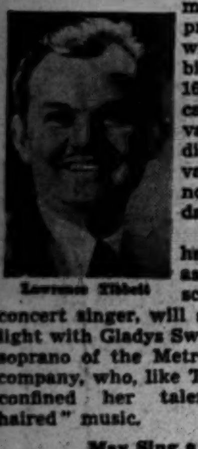
MUSIC FESTIVAL CROWD TO HEAR TIBBETT SING

His Is Real American Success Story

Lawrence Tibbett long has been one of the nation's big stars in the music world. Appropriately, he will be one of the big names at the 16th annual Chicago Music Festival Aug. 18 in Soldier's field, Festival officials announced yesterday.



Lawrence Tibbett

Tibbett, who has gained fame as an opera, screen, radio, and concert singer, will share the limelight with Gladys Swarthout, mezzo-soprano of the Metropolitan Opera company, who, like Tibbett, has not confined her talent to "long haired" music.

May Sing a Duet

In addition to their own numbers, the two will be asked to blend their voices in a duet. Both will be accompanied by the Festival Symphony orchestra under the direction of Henry Weber, the general musical director.

Tibbett's rich baritone will bring out the haunting beauty of his now famous "De Glory Road," by Jacques Wolfe, composer, and Clement Wood, lyricist. A democratic performer, Tibbett probably will select his other numbers at popular request.

It was in 1925 that Tibbett caused one of the greatest ovations in the history of the Metropolitan Opera company. He stopped the show with his interpretation of the role of Ford in Verdi's "Falstaff." Since then he has proved his versatility on the screen and on the radio. His most recent activity—a "daring" engagement for an opera star—was to succeed Frank Sinatra as singer on the Hit Parade radio show.

Real American Story

Tibbett's story is as American as Main st.

Not shy to confess his age, Tibbett freely admits that he was born Nov. 16, 1896, in Bakersfield, Cal. His father, a sheriff, was killed in the line of duty there when Tibbett was only 7. The family moved about, finally settling in Los Angeles where Tibbett took to drama like a duck to water.

But the magnificent voice, which has frequently pierced soundproof walls, was not to be hidden for long. Naval service in World War I. halted his career for a time.

Light opera followed. Then the east beckoned. Tibbett studied under Frank La Farge in New York. Singing in a church in New Rochelle, N. Y., helped him continue his studies. It was not until his mid-twenties that he won an audition with the Metropolitan. The first audition in April, 1923, went unnoticed—giving a typical touch to his success story. The second, several weeks later, hit the jack pot. Tibbett was in.

OPEN AIR OPERA GIVEN IN RAIN AT MICHIGAN CITY

More than 2,500 persons braved a drizzling rain in the open air at International Friendship Gardens at Michigan City, Ind., last night, to hear Joanne Jennings, 17, of Whitewater, Wis., make her operatic debut in "Rigoletto." She sang the role of Gilda.

The performance marked the opening of the 1945 summer musical season at the Gardens under the direction of Anna Fitzu.

George Czaplicki sang the title role, and Michael Bartlett that of the duke. The presentation also included the Bernice Holmes ballet and Chicago opera chorus.

2 Seized Here in Stolen Car Admit $5,200 Holdup

Donald McNeely, 24, and Raymond Comello, 24, both of Columbus, O., arrested here Thursday in a stolen car, confessed yesterday that they stole the car, $200 and $5,000 in jewelry in the holdup of a Columbus society woman June 30, police said. Both waived extradition. McNeely's wife, Marie, 22, and a James Dempsey, 26, also of Columbus, who accompanied McNeely and Comello to Chicago, have disappeared, police said.

Vet Goes Back

New York, July 14 [Special]—Tired of hanging around these United States, "where you can't get cigarets, can't get anything to eat," a navy veteran discharged only last month sailed today for Europe "where there's plenty of that stuff."

The veteran is former Electrician's Mate 1st Class T. P. Williams of Hartford, Conn. He is sailing as a stagehand with a U. S. O. contingent of 212, the largest U. S. O. camp shows group ever to go over on one vessel, on the navy transport James Parker.

Aboard the transport there were also a Radio City Music Hall group; Shep Fields and his orchestra; Clara Roesch and her all girl Sinfonetta; casts of "Blythe Spirit," "Kind Lady," "Arsenic and Old Lace," and "The Late Christopher Bean"; a brother and sister act, Joe and Jane McKenna, who were captured by the Germans last September; the parents of Lt. Arthur Jarrett, former band leader on duty in the South Pacific, and 25 "Sons of Fun" personnel. They will be abroad six months.

The committee, to be composed of from 5 to 20 persons, will be empowered to take any steps necessary to aid the school board and to enlist legal counsel or make expenditures in connection with the suit filed against the board by Mrs. Vashti McCollum. WIDEN FERRIES' USE, ASKS HEAD OF MOTOR CLUB

BY GEORGE TAGGE

Improved post-war motoring conditions will result from development of lake ferry service after the war, Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor club, said yesterday.

Much more use should be made of the great expanse of Lake Michigan by motorists, truckers, and shippers, Hayes said. It offers pleasure, profit, and a reduced highway accident rate, according to the head of this organization which has branches in near-by states.

"Crowded highways around the end of Lake Michigan should be avoided when possible thru the use of lake ferries," Hayes said. "Not only should private motorists consider using ferry service when it attains post-war growth, but so should truckers and shippers.

Urges Use of Waterways

"Automobile manufacturers shipping from Detroit to or thru Chicago and western points ought to supplement highways with waterways. At Muskegon, Mich., the trailers piled high with new automobiles can be loaded on freighters bound for Chicago.

"It would be a great help to motorists to get most of the huge trailer trucks off the roads wherever possible."

Hayes also said that the enormous consumption of petroleum during the war suggests that in the future we should conserve it in any sensible way.

Only one trip weekly between Chicago and Muskegon is offered by the boat lines now. The Milwaukee Clipper leaves here Friday night and returns on Monday. On Saturday and Sunday it plies between Milwaukee and Muskegon. Lower decks have a capacity of 68 automobiles.

Round trip mileage saving is 410 miles, at a cost of $14 for shipping a passenger car.

Plan Expanded Service

T. J. McGuire, principal owner of the C and B Line, said he intends to offer expanded services after the war, including ferrying of automobiles. At present the company has one ship, City of Grand Rapids, operating between Chicago and St. Joseph, Mich. The other, S. S. Theodore Roosevelt, runs between Cleveland and Cedar Point, O.

Alert for chances of getting army or navy ships of practical use on the lake, McGuire does not yet know what the navy will do with the S. S. Seeandbee.

BALIKPAPAN OIL HARBOR OPENED TO ALLIED SHIPS

Aussies Push 14 Miles Up Coast

MANILA, July 15 [Sunday] (AP)—Balikpapan harbor, greatest oil port of Borneo, was open to allied shipping today, while Australian amphibious forces pushed 14 miles up the east coast of Balikpapan bay and seized a former Japanese seaplane base.

The enemy did not resist the new landing. Some naval supplies were captured but the base itself had been demolished by the retiring Japanese.

Another Australian 7th division force advanced a mile northward within about eight miles of the big East Borneo oil field district of Sambodja on Thursday.

A Dutch colonial and Australian force enveloping the Japanese strong point on "smashed stone ridge" six miles north of Balikpapan from the north and east had the support of heavy artillery.

While Gen. MacArthur's headquarters was announcing these successes, the Japanese radio admitted that the battle in the Balikapan sector had shifted from the coastal areas to the jungled hills—a tacit acknowledgment of Japanese retreat.

The Japanese also claimed that Indonesians fighting on their side charged the Australian and Dutch lines Wednesday with hand grenades.

The Australian 9th division on the north Borneo coast captured the town of Papar, 32 miles northeast of Beaufort on the Beaufort-Jesselton railroad, while allied bombers and fighters ranged all over Borneo, supporting ground troops and sinking a Japanese freighter near Kuching.

Gen. Masataka Yamawaki, Japanese administrator of Borneo, has returned to Japan, the Tokyo radio acknowledged. He was quoted as saying the civil administration of Borneo moved inland after the allies landed.

CHICAGO DOCTOR FINDS OKINAWA CLIMATE GOOD

OKINAWA, July 14 (AP)—Americans came to Okinawa expecting a hot, stinking climate, hordes of snakes, flies, and mosquitoes, and many deadly diseases. They found cool nights, not too uncomfortable days, almost no snakes, and no more insects than they had battled elsewhere.

"From the standpoint of climate and health, this is the best island we have taken in the Pacific," said Lt. Comdr. W. Walter Sittler, 10929 Longwood dr., Chicago, head of the department of medicine at the military government hospital.

GEN. CHENNAULT, SIDETRACKED BY CHIEFS, RESIGNS

Background of China Air Situation Told

KUNMING, China [Delayed]—(AP)—Reorganization of the American air effort in the China theater is likely to have a deep tho politely cloaked effect on Chinese-American relations as well as their joint war potential.

In addition it may lead to the resignation of Maj. Gen. Claire Lee Chennault from his unique dual position in the China theater. Chennault commands the 14th and is concurrently chief of staff of the Chinese air force.

[Chennault's resignation was announced in Kunming yesterday. He disclosed that he is returning to the United States and will retire from the army.]

It was learned unofficially that Chennault, relegated by Washington, D. C., to a subordinate role after eight years' service as one American closest to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, probably will ask to go home "on points."

Sidetracked by Superiors

While his request may be granted amid all sorts of official regrets and compliments it will remain the homegoing of a man sidetracked by his own superiors yet discouraged by military protocol from publicly speaking his mind as to effects of the new setup on the Chinese-American war effort, let alone its bearing on relations with Chungking or on personal prestige.

For all immediate purposes moving of additional air force personnel and equipment into China from the India-Burma theater is bound to mean some dissipation of present potentiality in supplies which for Chennault's 14th alone are so severely restricted [three lines censored].

It is worth noting that Chennault's strategical bombardment group of big gas consuming B-24s hasn't run a real mission since May 9 when the airmen blasted Paoching.

Chennault, Stilwell Differ

This is the paradoxical supply situation four months after opening of the Ledo-Stilwell road across upper Burma and two months after completion of the roughly paralleling pipeline to China—objectives which some American experts hold were gained at the cost of American air bases lost to the Japanese offensive in southeast China last year. [Two lines censored.]

Thus the supply situation ties closely with the once carefully concealed differences between Chennault and Gen. Stilwell over the priority of American military aims in China—in brief an argument over the diversion of hump tonnage necessary for Chinese participation in the north Burma campaign that opened the overland supply line.

Lt. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer, 54 year old Ohio born West Pointer [class 1915], who recently got his third star, was, among other positions he held, Stilwell's air adviser. He was senior A. A. F. commander in the old C. B. I. theater before Stilwell was recalled and the China theater separated. It is he who now has been placed over Chennault.

Fuel Is Big Problem

The only logical justification for additional air forces' assignment to China—together with additional echelons of command, Stratemeyer's overall command [10 words censored] would seem to be the prospect sometime of opening an easier supply line into China.

It is generally known here that a similar plan, to have been carried out in April, was set aside on grounds the China supply situation would not permit efficient fulfillment. It is known also that many influential Chinese attempted to intercede then against sidetracking Chennault.

The principal bugaboo of the air war in China now is not so much a question of getting additional planes but rather of fueling planes already here. [Seven lines censored.]

"It's simply a case of military politics," said one of Chennault's subordinates. His aides point out that Chennault is no air force career man and some of them feel frankly that Chennault has become victim to his own wholehearted purpose to help build a strong Chinese military establishment at a time when there is a growing feeling in higher echelons of American policy that this may be none of our business.

Resists Disbanding of Unit

Chennault, for example, is known to have resisted pressure to disband the Chinese-American composite wing which has an enviable record and now is largely Chinese manned. Chennault is known to have looked on CACW as the clear promise of a strong Chinese air force.

One of the greatest shortcomings of American policy making in China has been the persistent failure to assess and reckon with inherent difficulties of doing business with and in a nation which in the western sense is only coming of age and does not see eye to eye on all Americans' methods. Chennault, more than any other American military man, had learned to be patient and understanding and at the same time to play a strong hand in the strange battle of China.

Chennault Resigns

KUNMING, China, July 14 (AP)—Maj. Gen. Claire Lee Chennault, commander of the United States 14th air force in China and former colorful leader of the famous Flying Tigers, resigned today.

"The Japanese now are beaten in the air in China," Chennault said in his resignation statement.

An old barnstorming pilot, Chennault called in correspondents to tell them of his decision as Lt. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, commander of all United States forces in the China theater, said in Chungking that he had accepted Chennault's resignation.

Chennault pointed out that he retired once before eight years ago because of his health and that he had spent most of the intervening years in China. He went to China in 1937 to work for the Chiang Kai-shek government, and in 1942 was recalled to active duty with the United States army.

In Calcutta, Lt. Gen. Stratemeyer, commander of the allied eastern air command until its recent disbanding, declared that the "army air force is losing an outstanding officer as a result of Maj. Gen. Chennault's decision to retire."

War Department Regrets Loss

Washington, D. C., July 14 (AP)—The war department said today it had no detailed knowledge of the reason for Maj. Gen. Chennault's resignation but added that:

"It is well known that Gen. Chennault has been operating for a number of years in China under the most difficult of circumstances."

A statement by a department spokesman said that the department would "regret the loss of the services of this officer who has . . . played so important a role in bringing about the ultimate defeat of Japan."

'LONG OVERDUE' D. F. C. PINNED ON MAJ. SCHROEDER

The important bearing of Maj. R. W. Schroeder's altitude record flight of 1920 on high altitude bombing of the present war was emphasized by army air force leaders who gathered in the Stevens hotel yesterday to witness the conferring of the distinguished flying cross on the aviation pioneer.

"Without air power we would not be on the continent of Europe today," declared Lt. Gen. George, commanding general of the air transport command. "Without air power Japan would not be brightly burning tonight. And without Shorty Schroeder we would not have had all this air power.

Reached 38,180 Feet

"This recognition is long overdue," Gen. George added as he pinned the air force's highest award on the man who established an altitude record of 38,180 feet on Feb. 27, 1920.

"We have come a long way on the aerial highway since that day a quarter century ago when Shorty Schroeder flew more than seven miles above the earth to bring back precious technical data on both men and machine," said Gen. George. "His high altitude experiments paved the way for the great air force operations that disrupted the nazi industrial empire and spear-headed the military machine that conquered Germany.

Designed Many Improvements

Tribute was paid by air force officials and civilian aviation leaders to the important leadership of Maj. Schroeder in the aviation industry. He was credited with the establishment of dual controls in airplanes, conducted the first experiments in pressure cabins, added important technical improvements to the airplane engine supercharger, and helped in other aviation advancements as a member of the army's small experimental group at McCook field, Dayton, O.

The citation read by Col. H. D. Krafft, chief of the army air forces awards division, as Gen. George pinned the decoration on Maj. Schroeder was "for distinguishing himself by heroism and extraordinary achievement while participating in aerial flights from September, 1918, to February, 1920, as army test pilot."

Eyeballs Frozen

Maj. Schroeder's oxygen supply failed when he reached the peak of his altitude flight and he power dived his plane to within 2,000 feet of the ground before he regained consciousness. Altho nearly blinded because his eyeballs had been frozen in the high atmosphere, he made a safe landing with his instruments.

In acknowledging the many tributes, Maj. Schroeder in turn paid tribute to Gen. Billy Mitchell who, he said, was the first disciple of altitude flying and thru his efforts made possible the experiments that resulted in his record flight.

NEW TASK FORCE BOMBARDS PORT IN NORTH JAPAN

Biggest Ships in Navy Shell Hokkaido

southern Hokkaido, in confined waters which the fleet showed amazing temerity in entering.

Preliminary reports showed that despite bad weather yesterday's carrier strikes destroyed 24 grounded Japanese planes and damaged 62, sank 15 ships—including two railroad ferries and a destroyer—and damaged 24 other ships, including a train ferry and 10 medium tankers or cargo ships.

27 Locomotives Destroyed

Twenty-seven locomotives were destroyed in the airmen's smashes at southern Hokkaido, mainly at the Japanese "refugee port" of Hakodate, where dock and rail facilities were heavily damaged.

"No opposition to our forces was reported." Adm. Nimitz said. A single enemy plane was shot down "in the vicinity of our surface force."

He listed the following enemy shipping destroyed by carrier planes:

Two train ferries destroyed at sea, 10 small cargo ships, one old destroyer, two picket craft.

Enemy shipping damaged: One train ferry, four medium tankers, one medium transport, five medium cargo ships, eight small cargo ships, two destroyer-escorts, one patrol craft, one tug, and one lugger.

In Rifle Shot of Land

Marine and fleet aircraft from Okinawa sank or damaged another half-dozen enemy craft.

Most of the parked enemy aircraft were found on fields at Matsushima, Matsudo, and Misawa on Honshu.

Yesterday's surface bombardment of Japan—first of the war—continued unhindered almost within rifle shot of shore for two hours, blasting and firing Kamaishi's great steel mills.

While battleships, cruisers, and destroyers of Adm. Halsey's armada threw tons of shells into the Imperial Iron and Steel works rolling mill at Kamaishi, on the northeast coast of Honshu, 1,000 carrier planes beat the area and Hokkaido Island to the north.

Roaring Fires Started

The bombardment of Kamaishi, 275 miles north of Tokyo, with a pre-war population of 42,000, caused "sky reaching explosions and started roaring fires which blanketed the area with smoke," reported Correspondent James Lindsley from the battleship South Dakota.

Striking under command of Rear Adm. J. F. Shafroth, the squadron left the steel mill, one of Japan's largest, demolished, and the coke ovens heavily damaged and burning fiercely, said a fleet headquarters bulletin.

The Kamaishi steel mill received coal from mines on Hokkaido Island, which was hit yesterday in the naval air pounding. It was the first attack on Hokkaido. Hokkaido has about 25 operational air fields and northern Honshu an equal number.

The Yank planes attacked ships and rail ferries which transport coal to Honshu factories.

A Japanese bulletin admitted the shelling of Kamaishi "and vicinity," but made no mention of damage except to say that the bombardment was "in concert" with carrier plane attacks on air bases, harbors, and "other facilities" of northern Honshu and southern Hokkaido.

Japs See No Invasion

The Japanese Domei agency reported that some Super Fortresses participated in the air raids, and added that there was no indication "pointing to enemy plans to undertake landing operations in this part of the Japanese mainland."

After the day long pounding of Tokyo Tuesday, the enemy radio reported the American fleet had "fled southward." Crews of the fleet laughed when they heard that broadcast; the were "fleeing" northward to attack Hokkaido.

Land-based naval air power ranged over other fragments of the enemy's empire. Seaplanes sank a small coastal cargo vessel and damaged four others off western Korea. Corsairs blasted air field installations in the Sakishima Islands.

Avengers rained high explosives on radio installations of Amami Island. Corsairs struck Kanoya air field on Kyushu.

From April 7 to July 13, Nimitz reported, planes of the Okinawa-based tactical air force destroyed 625 air borne enemy planes. Twenty-nine other Jap planes were listed as probably destroyed. Nine ships were destroyed and 37 damaged during these operations.

Halsey made his surprise move after Vice Adm. McCain's task force 38 failed to find any substantial proportion of the enemy air force on the fields built for Tokyo's defense.

When it came to picking the man to give the Japanese homeland its first fleet shelling of the century, the navy chose its biggest admiral—280-pound John F. Shafroth.

Rear Adm. Shafroth, who is 58, had been at sea this time only four months as commander of the battleship division. But he had been Halsey's right hand man from June 23, 1943, to February 11, 1944.

He is the son of the late United States Senator John F. Shafroth of Colorado and Mrs. Virginia Morrison Shafroth.

Formosa Raids Continue

MANILA, July 15 [Sunday]—(AP)—American Liberator bombers, continuing their series of raids on Formosa, set fire to oil storage facilities at Toshien. Attack bombers destroyed many rail repair installations on the east coast and fighters beat up air fields, Gen. MacArthur announced today.

Weather forced cancellation of far east air force operations against Japan from Okinawa, a bulletin said, but MacArthur's planes continued to range far and wide along the Asiatic coast and over the Southwest Pacific.

MURORAN ONE OF JAPS' MAIN NORTHERN PORTS

Muroran is one of the four important ports in Japan's big northern island of Hokkaido, the others being Hakodate, Otaru, and Nemuro. It is in the western part of the island on Muroran bay, an indentation just inside the entrance to a wider bay, Uchiura-wan.

The city is midway, on a direct north and south line, between Otaru and Hakodate. It is a great coaling port, being the outlet for the Yubari coal mine, with which it is connected by railroad. The Tenryu shaft in this mine produces over 1,000,000 tons of coal annually. Muroran is the home port of the Hokkaido Tanko colliery and shipping company, one of Japan's leading industrial corporations. It is also an important fisheries port and munitions center. The population boomed in wartime to around 100,000.

Muroran is a place of modern growth, having had no importance before Japan's present era of industrialization. In the feudal age the region was populated by the so-called hairy Ainu, and a settlement of these aboriginal people, Shiraoi, is near Muroran.

'DAMAGE ON OUR SIDE IS LIGHT,' SAYS JAP RADIO

Claim 46,000,000 Will Defend Islands

San Francisco, Cal., July 14 (AP)—Japanese headquarters today acknowledged the United States navy's combined air and surface bombardment of northern Japan, and one army district command was quoted as saying "damage on our side was extremely light."

In a separate broadcast, Tokyo said a people's volunteer corps of more than 46,000,000 stood ready to help the army defend the mainland against invasion.

Radio Tokyo disclosed that the first contingent of Nipponese bombed out of Japan's capital arrived at Hokkaido Island, one of the target areas of the fleet air arm, shortly before the new assault began. They left Tokyo, the broadcast said, last Monday, seeking their "new hope and land of promise."

Admit Bombardment

Earlier this week Tokyo said 15,000 or 20,000 people were to be evacuated to Hokkaido this month.

Imperial headquarters admitted that "enemy surface craft had carried out a naval bombardment against the northern Honshu city of Kamaishi and surrounding area about noon, while carrier borne aircraft were attacking air bases in the Tohoku district of northern Honshu and the southern area of Hokkaido."

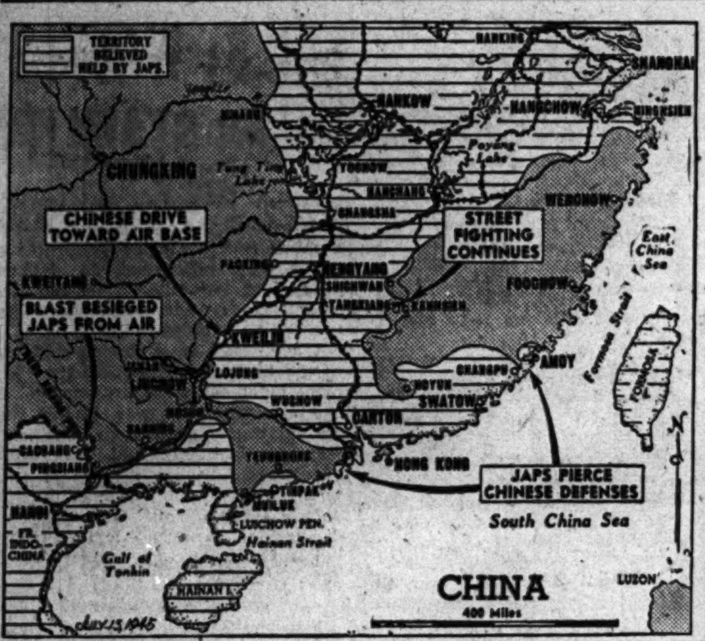
The first Japanese acknowledgement said 500 planes bombed and strafed air fields and other "military installations."

Fleet Has Tankers

Domei news agency said it had been reported the naval task force was accompanied by oil tankers, indicating it would be able to operate for two or three weeks without returning to its bases. Object of the raid, Domei continued, was to "reduce our air power on the mainland."

Radio Tokyo, somewhat untimely, said construction of wooden vessels in Hokkaido "is now in full swing."

Jap Drives Gain China Coast Ground



Press Twin Thrust

CHUNGKING, China, July 14 (AP)—Japanese troops have broken 35 and 50 miles thru Chinese coastal defenses below Amoy and west of Hong Kong in twin drives possibly designed to erect an anti-invasion wall along China's vulnerable southeast coast, the Chinese high command acknowledged tonight.

Chinese regulars, however, have thrown all their available strength against Japanese landing parties southwest of Amoy and have mowed down 3,000 enemy troops, a war bulletin said.

While the Japanese beat out gains along the coast, Chinese forces of the interior battled nearer to the lost American air base of Kweilin in Kwangsi province and continued street fighting in the former airdrome city of Kanhsien.

Supporting Chinese ground forces battling inside Indo-China, United States 14th air force Mustang fighters yesterday blasted Trung Khanh Phu, besieged Japanese strongpoint four miles from the China frontier, an American announcement said.

In Fukien province Japanese invaders from Amoy reached Yunsiao, 56 miles southwest of Amoy, Thursday in a 35 mile sweep.

BOY PINING FOR CHICAGO GI EATS AND RESTS AGAIN

BURY ST. EDMUNDS, England, July 14 (AP)—Robert Sokowski, 10 year old Ukrainian who was the slave of a German general, got back to eating and sleeping today after uncontroled grief over losing track of his adopted American GI—Sgt. Edward Klonowski of 4621 Grace st., Chicago.

Sgt. Klonowski

Robert Sokowski

The boy and the sergeant, who had been together almost constantly since the United States 44th division rescued the boy from the Nazis in Italy, were separated during a visit to London. Klonowski is believed now en route to the United States.

Robert, whose parents and three sisters were killed by the Germans in Kharkov, was quartered in St. Mary's hospital pending a decision by the British home office and the Polish legation over his right to be in Britain.

Hospital authorities said he "settled down all right" after refusing to eat yesterday.

"He's eating now and he slept well last night," a hospital spokesman said. "But all he talks about is when he's going to the United States. He says he has five uncles there and wants to live with the sergeant and see his uncles."

COMMUTE DEATH SENTENCES OF 2 YANKS TO LIFE

CHUNGKING, China, July 14 (AP)—Lt. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer today commuted to life imprisonment the death sentences of two American privates accused of killing a 71 year old Chinese woman in a dispute over a water buffalo. The case will be reviewed by the judge advocate general's review board.

Wedemeyer's headquarters said the two soldiers—John V. Brennan of West Hartford, Conn., and James F. Cooper of Norwood, O.—would be dishonorably discharged from the army and would forfeit all pay and allowances due them.

ADM. SHERMAN GIVEN MITSCHER AIR TASK FORCE

Towers to Replace McCain in Pacific Post

Washington, D. C., July 14 (AP)—The navy today shifted commands in its carrier borne air arm in the Pacific in apparent preparation for the showdown phases of the war against Japan. Secretary Forrestal disclosed the changes at a news conference.

Rear Adm. Frederick C. Sherman, now commander of a carrier division, was named to succeed Vice Adm. Mitscher as commander of the 1st carrier task force.

Vice Adm. John H. Towers, now deputy commander in chief of the Pacific fleet, was named to succeed Vice Adm. McCain, commander of the 2d carrier task force.

Mitscher, who with Adm. Halsey developed the present fast carrier task force which wields a flexible fleet of 1,500 planes, returns to Washington as deputy chief of naval operations for air.

McCain Post Undisclosed

No announcement was made of Vice Adm. McCain's new assignment. Secretary Forrestal was asked about reports he would become deputy veterans affairs administrator under Gen. Bradley, but the secretary declined comment, noting that such an appointment would be under Presidential authority.

These changes led a list of 29 major shifts among flag rank officers which Forrestal said would become effective at varying dates within 30 days. The changes were not a "shakeup," Forrestal said, but were normal shifts.

Vice Adm. Mitscher's new assignment is expected to carry with it the rank of a full admiral, and Rear Adm. Sherman is expected to be elevated to vice admiral.

Towers an Air Veteran

Vice Adm. Towers is the number one aviator on navy rolls which now include more than 50,000 flyers. He was one of three young officers whom Glenn Curtiss originally taught to fly in return for the navy's promise to buy three of his planes.

Rear Adm. Sherman, one of the navy's toughest and ablest flying admirals, has been in command of a carrier task group within the fast carrier task force since last August. He has seen the naval air war thru from the start, having been skipper of the carrier Lexington when she was lost in the battle of the Coral sea.

Forrestal also announced assignment of Adm. Henry K. Hewitt, now a member of the general board, to relieve Adm. Stark as commander of naval forces in Europe. Adm. Stark will retire for age.

New Annapolis Head

Vice Adm. Aubrey W. Fitch, being relieved by Vice Adm. Mitscher as deputy chief of naval operations for air, will become superintendent of the Naval academy and commandant of the Severn river naval command.

Rear Adm. John R. Beardall, now academy superintendent, will relieve Rear Adm. Howard F. Kingman as commandant of the 15th naval district and commander of the Panama sea frontier and southeast Pacific.

EXECUTE 2 PWs FOR MURDER OF ANOTHER NAZI

Ft. Leavenworth, Kas., July 14 (AP)—Two German prisoners of war were hanged at the United States disciplinary barracks early today on the same gallows on which five of their fellow countrymen died Tuesday in the first executions of their kind in this country.

The two, Rudolph Straub, 39, and Erich Gauss, were hanged for the murder April 5, 1944, of Horst Guenther, a German prisoner, in a work camp at Aiken, S. C. Straub and Gauss accused him of being a traitor to his "oath and fatherland," and with reporting other prisoners to American officers.

Straub, the first to go, was pale and shaken. Asked if he had anything to say, the prisoner replied in German:

"I stand here not guilty. I did it as a German soldier ordered to do it. If I had not done so I would have been punished when I returned to Germany."

Gauss denied participation in the killing.

INDIAN PARLEY FAILS; WAVELL URGES STABILITY

SIMLA, India, July 14 (AP)—Viceroy Wavell's conference to establish a more representative government for India adjourned in failure today and Wavell said he did not intend to try again soon to solve the Indian problem.

Wavell said in a closing address to the 21 Indian conferees that his principal tasks were prosecution of the Japanese war and laying the administrative groundwork for post-war developments and that both efforts required a stable government. Stability, he said, could not be preserved if continuing political discussions produced a feeling of insecurity among government servants.

Blames Moslem League

Maulana Abud Kalan Azad, president of the Congress party, said at a press conference that the party's principal political rival, the Moslem league, was immediately responsible for the failure but that the ultimate blame rested with the British.

Mahomed Ali Jinnah, head of the Moslem league, said the league had analyzed Wavell's governmental proposals and found them "a snare" to reduce the league to a helpless minority. The proposals, Jinnah said, shelved the league's demand for a division of India to create a separate, Moslem-controlled country in part of the present India's territory.

Azad's charge that the British were responsible for the conference's failure came after Wavell himself had said "the responsibility for the failure is mine."

Briton Urges Election

LONDON, July 14 (AP)—In the wake of the failure of the Simla conference Stafford Cripps proposed tonight that immediate steps be taken to give India self-government under a constitution.

Cripps, who carried an unsuccessful plan for post-war dominion status to India in 1942, urged that elections be held for a new Indian constituent assembly which would draw up the constitution. He said:

"We should, I believe, decide to skip the temporary readjustment of the central [Indian] government which has become impossible owing to the views and fears of the Moslem league and go straight ahead with the permanent solution."

NEW ZEALAND SOLDIER BURNED ALIVE AT ROME

ROME, Italy, July 14 [Reuters]—A New Zealand soldier, whose identity has not been disclosed, was burned alive in the outskirts of Rome early today. Experts said they believed he was the victim of a gang of Italian ruffians who threw gasoline over him and lit it with a cigaret. The newspaper Il Momento said the "living torch" was found screaming on a road in the suburbs beyond the Tiber. Rescuers took him to a hospital, where he died without speaking. New Zealand army authorities identified the victim thru a charred shoulder badge and documents he carried.

GUERRILLAS AND YANKS CAPTURE 3 LUZON TOWNS

Former Headquarters of Japs Taken

MANILA, July 15 [Sunday] (AP)—Capture of three key strongpoints in northern Luzon from strongly resisting Japanese remnants was announced today by a MacArthur headquarters spokesman.

He confirmed field dispatches that Maj. Gen. Charles Hurdis' 6th infantry division had taken Kiangan, which until six weeks ago was known as the enemy army headquarters in the high Cordilleras, and guerilla seizure of Bontoc, capital of Luzon's mountain province.

In addition, Filipino army forces took Mankayan, a mining town 60 miles north of Baguio.

Yamashita "Holding Out"

Altho Gen. MacArthur's bulletin of July 5 announced formal conclusion of the campaign for liberation of the Philippines, with some mopping-up still to be done, the headquarters spokesman said all three newly captured towns were taken against "none too slight resistance."

The Tokyo radio claimed that Japan's "tiger," Gen. Yamashita, was still holding out on northern Luzon. Yamashita has been the subject of recent speculation. Some liberated Filipinos had said Yamashita fled the Philippines weeks ago, but other reports said he had left only lately by air.

Find City Burned

The Guerrillas who took Bontoc found it burned to the ground.

Near Mankayan is the Lepanto consolidated mine, most important enemy source of copper outside their home islands. Geologists said the Japanese had worked the mine at top speed thruout the occupation. Guerrillas had attacked the place repeatedly but the Japanese had maintained a powerful garrison there.

Dutch Put All Salaries Under Government Rule

LONDON, July 14 (AP)—The Dutch government has issued a decree taking over the control of all salaries, Premier Schermerhorn said in a broadcast last night. The move was to avert inflation. The broadcast also said the government would intercede in all strikes and would refuse to negotiate any labor disputes as long as a strike continued.

• Mom Plays Cupid

Mrs. Marie Norlin Baker walks from Bond chapel between daughter and latter's husband.

Miss Estelle Ruth Baker of 5340 Ellis av. yesterday became the bride of Lt. [j. g.] William Harding Booth of East Orange, N. J., thus bringing to a climax a courtship which began two years ago when the girl was introduced to the service man by her mother, Mrs. Marie Norlin Baker, house mother at Chicago Service Men's center No. 1. The ceremony took place in Bond chapel at the University of Chicago.

Mrs. Baker, who is known to thousands of service men as Mom, little suspected that she was playing cupid when she introduced the couple at the center. Lt. Booth served overseas for 16 months, during which he participated in the invasion of Normandy, and plans for his wedding to Miss Baker were completed on his return to the United States.

The bride is a graduate of Chicago Teacher's college. Lt Booth was graduated from Springfield college, Springfield, Mass., and received his midshipman's training at Abbott hall here. They will make their home at Camp Bradford, Va., where the lieutenant will receive further training.

OKINAWA LIFE HINTS AT FLAW IN JAPS' FRONT

BY THOMAS MORROW

[Chicago Tribune war correspondent recently returned from Okinawa.]

The life of an Okinawan was not a happy one before United States battleships drove up and began to blow his island apart.

Looked down upon by the Japanese, he was taxed and pushed around while he tried to pry a living from his meager lands. Stories were told on the island that many of his people were members of the ETA, scorned untouchables in Japanese eyes.

Criminals, many Koreans and Okinawans were lumped in this class, which was not allowed to intermarry or eat with the more fortunate Japanese. To them fell the hated chores of butchering animals, making leather, caring for dead bodies, and performing public executions.

Religion Creates a Caste

Butchering was a hated task because Buddhism, religion of a large section of Japanese, banned the eating of animals and the killing of them for this purpose. The practice was held necessary because leather was needed.

In 1871 the members of the ETA were given a new standing by government edict. They were to be allowed to mingle freely with other Japanese, move from their segregated villages, and bear the name of shinheimin [new common people]. Practically, however, the old prejudice prevailed.

Attempts to pin down the origin and status of the ETA seem futile except to bring out that those pushed into its confines were frowned upon by society. An ETA was greeted in feudal times with the sign of four fingers held aloft to indicate that here was an imperfect man.

Elite Still Mutter

The ETA gradually fought its way upward until there was an occasional intermarriage and a bit more respect. When many ETA found their way into a first class neighborhood, however, there were mutterings from the elite.

Many ETA of various nationalities found their way into an organization known as the Sui Hei Sha, which is translated as water level group. This body promised to raise the ETA standard of living by bringing pressure on the government, but its guns were spiked by Prince Iesato Tokugawa.

When he heard of the organized discontent, Prince Iesato,, clan head and premier noble of Japan, invited members to his home. They appeared fuming with indignation and prepared to voice a strong complaint.

"Let us sit down and drink a little tea and talk this thing over," said the prince. He was so full of charm and sympathy that the Sui Hei Sha boys went away muttering to themselves.

ETA May Control Millions

The organization is believed growing in Japan, however, and is said by some to have a membership of perhaps 2,000,000 with other sympathizers afraid to be known. There are said to be two or three strong leaders.

While no one knows how far the members would go or how sternly they would stand in the face of Japanese punishment, the movement is viewed as holding some promise by those who hope for the immediate disintegration of the militarists' power.

BEG YOUR PARDON

Pvt. Robert L. Zemansky, 1644 S. Millard av., was among those who received the distinguished unit badge awarded members of the 12th infantry regiment of the 4th division. His name was misspelled in the list published in Friday's TRIBUNE.

Arthur R. De Long, 1020 Lawrence av., recently was described in THE TRIBUNE as a salesman in reporting the theft of personal property from an automobile parked in from of his address. De Long is a bakery engineer. The stolen property included personal articles, clothing, and a radio and was not sample merchandise.

BODY RECOVERED FROM LAKE

The body of Casimar Radzienski, 31, a war worker who lived at 2127 N. Wolcott av., was recovered from Lake Michigan at the foot of North av. yesterday by Lincoln park police. A note, requesting police to "please notify my wife," was found near Belmont Harbor July 7.

EIRE'S M'GLOINS MEET A GI THEY MUST LOOK UP TO

BY HUGH CURRAN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

DUBLIN, Eire, July 14—Sgt. John McGloin, 24, who says he is the tallest United States soldier overseas, is in Dublin as a guest of his namesake, John McGloin, ex-chief of Dublin police and his uncle.

The sergeant, a native of Buffalo, N. Y., was wounded in the fighting in Belgium. He is 6 feet 8 inches tall, weighs 224 pounds, and wears No. 15 shoes. His family came from Clare and he will go there to visit relatives.

American soldiers in large numbers are arriving here each night on the mail boat. Most are of Irish descent and they are tremendously thrilled to be on ancestral territory.

Some Yanks Surprised

Their search for relatives is often unsuccessful, but occasionally there is a surprise. Capt. O'Connel, Boston, Mass., met an elderly couple in the Gresham hotel and they inquired where his people came from. It was Waterford City, where they, too, came from, and they had known his grandmother. She had died only a fortnight before.

Maj. John J. Walsh, Chicago, is visiting friends in County Wexford. His wife was Miss Ireland at the world's fair in Chicago in 1933. She was then Miss Murphy.

Maj. V. de Paul Hagen has found a granduncle in Cork.

Maj. William Walsh of Portland, Ore., chief Catholic chaplain of the United States army in London, will visit relatives in Kilrush, County Clare.

Murphys! Murphys!! Murphys!!!

Two members of the staff of the army newspaper Stars and Strips here took photographs of several Yanks eating Irish beef steaks and numerous eggs.

They are Sgt. Peter Lisagor, 7545 Saginaw av., Chicago, and Corp. Victor Laskey, a New Yorker who did newspaper work in Chicago. Lisagor's wife, of Irish descent, was named Murphy. Lisagor wanted to trace her relatives, but when he saw the list of Murphys in the Dublin telephone directory he gave up the idea.

Father Lambe, a chaplain, visited his parents and other relatives at Carrickmacross, Monaghan. He celebrated mass in the local church.

Barker has been assistant chief of staff at supreme headquarters of the allied expeditionary forces.

Brig. Gen. Frank J. McSherry of Washington was named head of the man power division which is responsible to Clay on affairs regarding labor allocation, employment, working conditions, housing, and social insurance. McSherry served with the 15th army group and was a civil affairs officer in Sicily.

That division is a naval counterpart of the army ground force division. Ray is a veteran of sea duty in both world wars, seeing action in several of the great Pacific battles of this war.

Miss Petrillo Weds

Capt. Francis De Rosa and his bride, the former Marie Petrillo.

Marie Petrillo, 21 year old daughter of James C. Petrillo, president of the American Federation of Musicians, became the bride of Capt. Francis De Rosa of the army medical corps at a ceremony yesterday in St. Angela's Catholic church.

Capt. De Rosa, son of Mrs. Agnes De Rosa, 1145 S. Austin blvd., recently returned from overseas duty. He had been reported missing in action and won the Purple Heart and five battle stars. His father was the late Dr. Rocco De Rosa, a physician.

Capt. De Rosa met his bride while serving his internship in County hospital after his graduation from the University of Illinois in 1942. He entered army service in July, 1943, and went overseas in April, 1944.

Mrs. James Petrillo Jr. was matron of honor and Miss Rita De Grazio maid of honor. Joseph Salerno was best man and John Meyers was usher. A reception followed in the Blackstone hotel. After a two weeks' honeymoon Capt. De Rosa will report at Camp Bowie, Tex., for reassignment.

RETURN OR LOSE JOBS, N. Y. PAPER STRIKERS TOLD

New York, July 14 (AP)—The Publishers' Association of New York today sent telegrams to striking members of the independent Newspaper and Mail Deliverers union warning them that unless they reported for work Monday immediate dismissal would follow.

The publishers' ultimatum came on the 14th day of the strike, which has affected distribution of 14 New York City dailies. Joseph Simon, union president, said, "It's up to the men whether they want to go back to work or not."

Earlier, hundreds of thousands of newspaper were carried thru picket lines. Queues formed at newspaper plants, some persons carrying away hundreds of copies for resale.

WLB Penalizes Typo Union

Washington, D. C., July 14 (AP)—The war labor board today ordered suspension of consideration of all pending voluntary agreements between publishers and the AFL International Typographical union as a penalty for the union's refusal to end two walkouts. The board said the union is violating public policy in declining to end the stoppages until the publishers of the Jersey Journal, Jersey City, N. J., and the Bayonne, N. J., Times accept the union's new by-laws as part of the contract.

Union officers contend such issues are not subject to the board's authority. They said they would see every newspaper composing room closed down before they budged from their position.

Last of 8th's Bombers Back

Bradley Field, Windsor Locks, Conn., July 14 (AP)—The arrival here of the last 8th air force heavy bomber from the United Kingdom under the army air forces redeployment program was announced today. It was a B-24, named El Subar and piloted by 1st Lt. Dean Gordon Williams of San Bruno, Cal. The plane flew in at noon yesterday after stops at the Azores and Newfoundland. It had participated in 33 missions, 32 of them over Germany, with Lt. Williams in charge.

Mountain Division Returning

ROME, July 14 (AP)—The crack United States 10th Mountain division, originally slated as an occupation force in the Trieste area, will be redeployed to the Pacific theater by way of the United States, it was announced today. The 10th is being relieved of its occupation assignment by the veteran 34th division and is expected to be reorganized in the United States as a standard infantry division.

THIS DAY IN HISTORY

July 15—Battle of Stony Point

Brig. Gen. Wayne won his title of Mad Anthony 166 years ago tonight when he led a rough and tumble bayonet attack on a strongly fortified and well manned British position on the Hudson river at Stony Point, N. Y. The battle, one of the best planned engagements of the Revolutionary war, ended about 10 minutes after the final assault was begun!

Twelve hours before the attack Wayne and his troops had left their camp at Sandy Beach, some 14 miles from Stony Point. They were picked men, with much of the quality we now associate with Rangers or Commandos. They were freshly shaven and their hair freshly powdered, for Wayne believed that good grooming contributed to pride and that proud men fought best.

All thru the afternoon of July 15, 1779, they toiled along rugged trails. The springiness had left their step by the time they filed into Springsteel's farm, a mile and one-half from Stony Point, in the first darkness of evening. Here the weary men were put into formation.

The troops crept forward thru the blackness toward the unsuspecting British. A sentry was seized before he could give the alarm. Now the Americans split into three columns, one to circle to the left and attack the position from the upstream direction, another—with Wayne at its head—to perform a similar maneuver to the right, a third to drive straight at the fort from the landward side and to mask the real plan of attack.

The scheme worked perfectly. The British opened fire on the central column, little thinking that their real hazard lay in the two silent groups armed only with bayonets who were creeping up on either flank.

When they learned the truth and started spreading their fire, it was too late. The flanking columns scaled the fort's parapets, crawled thru the embrasures and came crashing into the enclosure. Their shouts and the gleam of their bayonets still further demoralized the astounded British. The two American columns almost ran into each other in the center of the fort and the battle was won.

The British garrison of approximately 625 was outnumbered about two to one by the Americans, but had the advantage of a strongly fortified position. Surprise was Wayne's weapon and he used it with consummate skill. Some 15 Americans were killed and 83 wounded. A musket ball grazed Wayne's head. The British loss was about 63 killed and 70 wounded.

LEOPOLD MUM ON ABDICATION, PREMIER SAYS

BRUSSELS, Belgium, July 14 (AP)—Premier Achille Van Acker returned tonight from King Leopold's mountain retreat at St. Wolfgang, Austria, and announced that the monarch had reached no decision on demands that he abdicate.

[The Brussels radio said the senate was summoned into special session immediately after Van Acker's arrival.]

However, Van Acker said, there are hopes that Leopold will have an announcement soon.

With Van Acker on his arrival by plane was Minister of Justice Charles du Bus de Warnaffe. The premier said Leopold's mother, Queen Elizabeth, and his brother, Prince Regent Charles, would return tomorrow. Both have been conferring with the king on the question of abdication.

SHIPS COLLIDE IN FOG; SOLDIER KILLED, 3 HURT

New York, July 14 (AP)—An army corporal returning from England for discharge was killed early today and three other service men were injured when the Liberty ship James Caldwell on which they were passengers collided with another ship in a dense fog in lower New York bay.

Names were withheld pending notification of next of kin.

Police and navy spokesmen said the outbound British freighter Papanui struck the Caldwell amidships and shattered the messroom where six service men were at breakfast.

Several hours later the police department marine division reported the Caldwell was listing so badly it was feared she would sink.

U. S., BRITAIN RELAX BAN ON FRATERNIZING

LONDON, July 14 (AP)—The nonfraternization policy was relaxed today to allow American, British, and Canadian occupation troops in Germany and Austria to talk with grownups in the streets and in public places. Up to now, they could speak only to children. The penalty for violation was a $65 fine.

Almost identical statements by Gen. Eisenhower and Field Marshal Montgomery disclosed the policy change. The action came as Gen. Eisenhower's headquarters announced that 50,000 persons had been arrested in two months in Germany in a de-nazification program by United States army security forces operating in the American occupation zone. The announcement said the arrests were continuing at the rate of 700 daily.

Take Cue from Reds

Even before the fraternization ban was officially modified, American troops were smiling and holding hands with frauleins in the cafes of Berlin, where Russian rules control. The Russians never had any regulation against talking with Germans. The new rules, however, do not say soldiers can date frauleins.

One British senior staff officer, agreeing that the wording of the announcement seemed to give a wide range for discretion, said he would interpret the orders to mean that soldiers could not walk arm in arm with frauleins, or take them to public places to drink beer. If they were sitting in a cafe with a fraulein, he said, it would be hard to prove who bought the beer.

Presumably, too, British soldiers could attend a public German dance. There was a question, tho, whether they could hold the frauleins in their arms and swing around the dance floor.

Puts Soldiers on "Smiling" Terms

One British officer said the change simply was to put soldiers on "smiling and talking terms" with the Germans.

Gen. Clark, saying the modification order by Eisenhower applied to United States troops in Austria, disclosed that he was studying possible further relaxation of the rules there, where the allied objective is to help Austria become an independent nation again.

The text of the American announcement said:

"Gen. of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower announced today a further relaxation in nonfraternization regulations in the United States zone of occupation. He stated:

"'In view of the rapid progress which has been made in carrying out allied de-nazification policies, and in removing prominent Nazis from all positions of responsibility in German life, it is desirable and timely to permit the personnel of my command to engage in conversation with adult Germans in the streets and in public places. Orders are being issued accordingly.'"

Spain Turns 39 U-Boat Crewmen Over to British

GIBRALTAR, July 14 [Reuters]—Thirty-nine men from a U-boat, mostly youths, who had been interned at Cadiz by the Spanish authorities, arrived at Gibraltar last night in a British destroyer and were placed in detention barracks.

BOMBER ABOVE INDIA TO TEST COSMIC RAYS

BOMBAY, India, July 14 [Reuters]—An attempt to wrest secrets from the cosmic rays will be made here soon. A United States air forces Liberator will fly for six hours at a height of 35,000 feet collecting photographic evidence of the behavior of the rays.

Southern India is considered to have special advantages for the study of this subject. The most penetrating cosmic rays reach this region near the magnetic equator. The plane will carry a ton of special scientific apparatus, as well as living organisms on which the effects of the cosmic rays will be observed.

BENES WANTS THREE MILLION ALIENS OUSTED

Asks Big 3 Action on the Germans, Hungarians

PRAGUE, July 14 (AP)—President Eduard Benes said today that Czechoslovakia could begin removing its unreliable German and Hungarian residents within a few weeks if the Big Three approve at Potsdam.

Edward Benes

Nothing less than the transfer of 2 to 2½ million Germans and about 400,000 Hungarians can assure the nation a reasonably secure future, Benes said.

Czechoslovakia, he added, is determined never again to try unworkable compromises with German minorities as it did in 1939, when the Germans showed their allegiance lay across the border.

"But the whole project of cleansing Czechoslovakia in this radical manner can be undertaken only with wholehearted Big Three approval and coöperation," the Czechoslovak president said.

Hope for Early Action

"We have presented our plans officially, and hope ardently for favorable early action by the Big Three powers."

Russia from the start was sympathetic toward the transfer plan. Approval of the western powers was regarded as equally necessary because their occupation forces within Germany would be obliged to make room for Germans moved in great masses back to the reich.

[A Reuters dispatch from Prague said Benes also dealt with allied forces in Czechoslovakia in his statement. Russian troops are already leaving the interior of the country, and American troops also are withdrawing, he said. "As far as Russia is concerned the war has made a great difference in the position of our great eastern ally, who will naturally take a much more decisive part in European and world affairs than before 1939," Benes said.]

Benes said there were three essential points to the transfer plan, which amounts to a proposal for a major population shift in central Europe. They are, first, that it be accomplished with Big Three understanding and approval; second, that it be well organized and carried out with the least possible friction; third, that the whole program be conducted as humanely as possible.

"We could start within a few weeks," Benes said, "but of course preparations within Germany, such as finding room and providing food, might take longer. It's been estimated the whole enterprise might take a year and a half."

Seen as Only Real Hope

Among Czechoslovaks there is an overwhelming conviction this form of settlement of the minority question is Czechoslovakia's only real promise of lasting internal tranquility.

Benes said the removal of approximately 3,000,000 of the country's population would leave no vacuums.

"The border regions in which the Germans are situated are overpopulated and overindustrialized," he said. "The population actually is denser than any spot in all Europe, except Belgium. Draining off will actually improve the local situation."

Not all persons of German origin would be obliged to leave Czechoslovakia. Benes estimated 300,000 to 500,000 Germans had demonstrated their loyalty to Czechoslovakia.

For the Hungarians there would be little problem in finding room. The two countries could exchange approximately equal groups of persons. About 400,000 Slovaks live in Hungary.

Properties of Germans judged unreliable have already been confiscated in Czechoslovakia.

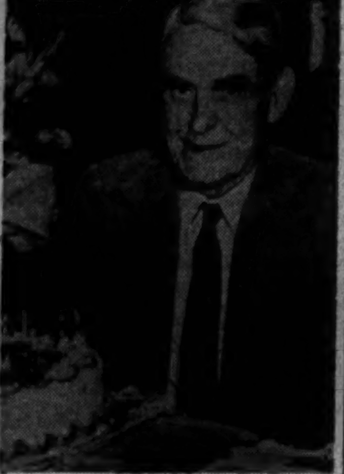
Washington, D. C., July 14 [AP]—Steam railway accidents resulted in the deaths of 1,840 persons and injury to 25,173 others during the first five months of this year, the interstate commerce commission reported today. This compared with 1,881 deaths and 25,251 injuries in the same period last year. Most of the injured—19,501—were employes. Of the dead, 278 were employes.

Sen. Capper Is 80



[Acme Telephoto]

Arthur Capper, Republican senator of Kansas, as he celebrated his 80th birthday in Washington, D. C. yesterday.

Washington, July 14 (AP)—Sen. Capper of Kansas took a couple of hours off today from his senatorial duties to attend a birthday party celebrating his 80th anniversary.

At a luncheon arranged by his office staff in one of the senate's private dining rooms, he heard assurances that the next 20 years will be easiest of the hundred.

This birthday wish was extended by Clif Stratton, speaking for Capper's 1,500 employes, mostly in his publishing business in Topeka.

Rep. Hope, dean of the Kansas delegation in the house, paid tribute to Capper's 26 years in the senate.

CATHOLIC PAPER ACCUSES REDS IN OCCUPIED LANDS

Says They Try to Cut Church Ties

BY P. E. BRIQUET

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

CHIASSO, Switzerland, July 14—Soviet authorities are trying to break all links between Rome and Catholics in countries occupied by Russian armies in eastern Europe, the Catholic newspaper Popolo of Milan charges.

"Wherever some tolerance is shown," says the paper, "propaganda against the Holy See becomes intense and invidious. In order to break the links between the Catholics and the Vatican, every effort is being made to foster local schisms.

Tito Accused

"Information reaching the Vatican about such countries is very scanty. Communication with Msgr. Cassule, papal nuncio in Romania, is allowed only thru regular postal channels, and therefore is very slow. Serious excesses are occurring in Yugoslavia, where Marshal Tito is using a strong hand in fostering religious transformation.

"The news from Hungary is less disquieting, as agrarian reforms there are respecting church property. The nuncio in Hungary, Msgr. Angelo Rotta, was allowed to return via Istanbul, and therefore was enabled to report on the situation in that country.

Uncertain Footing

"News from Poland and the Baltic states is unavailable. Lithuania no longer has a bishop, as all of them were deported to Germany when the wehrmacht left.

"The relations between the Holy See and Germany are on an uncertain footing, while a Catholic revival is apparently going on in that country. Official relations between the Vatican and Germany ceased when the Doenitz government was terminated, wiping out German sovereignty. The last German ambassador, Baron von Weizsacker, remains in the Vatican state as a private person. The nuncio in Germany, Msgr. Orsenigo, remains in Berlin, where his presence is considered useful and justified.

"The Japanese ambassador, Ken Harada, remains in the Vatican state.

"The Vatican is somewhat optimistic about the future, even in eastern Europe, as it is generally admitted in Rome that the San Francisco Charter is better than the league of nations covenant. The Pope is gratified that the substance of his various declarations is embodied in the new international document."

NAZIS PLANNED TO DUMP BOGUS CASH ON BRITISH

FRANKFURT, Germany, July 14 (AP) — American investigators have pieced together most of the story of the official counterfeiting and forged papers bureau operated by Gestapo Chief Himmler for the benefit of nazi agents in enemy and neutral countries.

His mint and printing presses turned out billions in spurious currency for use in almost every country in the world, but specialized in British pound sterling notes and American dollars.

"His big mistake was using amateur counterfeiters," said Col. Bernard Bernstein, director of the finance division of the United States control council. "Himmer finally realized this and became so critical that money turned out by his factory was divided into four categories—expert, fair, for propaganda purposes, and to be destroyed." Money marked for propaganda purposes was to be dumped on England from the air to create a money panic.

BAD AIR SUPPORT CAUSED DEFEAT, SAYS RUNDSTEDT

Favors American Plan, He Tells General

BY FRANK STURDY
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

BADKISSENGEN, Germany, July 12 [Delayed]—Tactical air support for the ground troops, an important feature of the swift German campaigns in Poland and France early in the war, failed in effectiveness against the allies in their march across France and Germany, according to Field Marshal Von Rundstedt.

The Germans failed, Von Rundstedt said in a recent interview with Maj. Gen. Otto P. Weyland, because of poor liaison between the air and ground forces.

Weyland, now commanding the 9th air force, was in command of the 19th tactical air force operating against the Germans. The air force's medium and fighter bombers destroyed transport, communications, roads and bridges behind the front, as well as attacked German fighting units.

Pleaded for Air Support

Wanting an evaluation of the American tactical effort from the German leader, Weyland questioned Von Rundstedt closely. The German said Reichmarshal Goering's obstinacy made it necessary virtually to plead for air support.

Von Rundstedt said he favors the American system, in which air force officers are assigned to ground command, and ground officers to the air staff, so that an intimate understanding of the problems, capabilities, and limitations of each branch is reached in relation to each battle situation.

Goering's anxiety to keep his luftwaffe an independent unit was such that when the air personnel exceeded the number needed for the declining air force, the extra men were organized into separate field divisions, and not absorbed into the regular ground forces.

Smuggled Into Units

The result, Von Rundstedt said, was that ground officers had to be smuggled into such divisions to instruct the air officers, who were ignorant of ground warfare.

Certain of his replies to questions were termed by experts to be excuses for defeat, as when he asserted the German air force was excellent in the Polish and French campaigns but later deteriorated.

He ignored the fact, the experts say, that the French and Polish air forces were insignificant in numbers and obsolete in type, so the Germans were almost without opposition in the air, a situation that was nearly reversed in the final campaign against Germany.

Altho Von Rundstedt's analysis of air power parallels that of the American air force commanders, it is apparently second guessing, as it is pointed out the Germans never made the same use of airplanes, even when they had relative air superiority.

As the allies used the air forces, the first stage was strategic bombing of industrial targets far behind the lines, the second an intermediate destruction of the supply and transport systems immediately behind the lines, and the third, direct attacks on troops.

Gang Rounded Up in Robberies

YOUTHFUL GANG OF 10 ADMITS 72 TAVERN HOLDUPS

Police Estimate Loot Exceeds $35,000

Police yesterday arrested 10 young men, between the ages of 16 and 26, who confessed 72 tavern robberies since Jan. 1 with a loot exceeding $35,000.

Robert Kozak, 17, of 2107 W. 19th st., was the ringleader, police said. Taken into custody, he was found to have two guns. He was formerly an inmate of the Illinois State Training School for Boys.

"I just got tired of working as a driver," he told detectives. "I got 20 girls and I wanted some clothes and money. We pulled a lot of jobs, I know, but I lost track after we held up the 50th tavern. I got $3,000 out of it while the going was good. It was fun while it lasted."

Kozak related that only two or three of the gang would work on a robbery, but the loot was split among all. The young robbers would enter a tavern, order customers to put their hands on the bar, then loot the cash register and the customers' pockets. Frequently, they stole cases of liquor to give to friends who were leaving for the army.

Robbers Seized One by One

"Sometimes we would put a few shots in the floor or knock off beer bottles just to scare the customers," Kozak admitted. "We didn't hurt any one, tho."

The gang was arrested one by one by Detectives Emil Smicklas, John Alcock, Nick Juric, and William Westerlin after Dave Tenucci, 21, of 432 S. Hoyne av., was found with a gun a few blocks from an attempted robbery of the tavern at 2555 W. 71st st. Friday night. The robbers quickly implicated each other when taken into custody.

One, Sam Paul, 23, of 1810 Jackson blvd., was caught with a girl, Lillian Sadow, 22, of 1079 N. Marshfield av., in his room in the Royalton hotel, 1810 Jackson blvd. Mrs. Sadow, who said she is the wife of a soldier overseas, was held for further investigation, altho police do not believe she took part in any of the robberies.

Two Sent to Juvenile Home

Two of the robbers, Ralph Lipowski, 16, of 2011 W. 18th st., and John Bielanski, 16, of 4112 S. Richmond st., were turned over to the juvenile home.

The others, being held for the show-up today, are Edward Kotrba, 17, of 2046 W. 18th st.; Harold Borkus, 17, of 2532 S. Albany av.; Fred Litke, 26, of 2033 W. 18th st.; James Lenza, 17, of 1919 W. 17th st., and Joseph Rendak, 18, of 2037 W. 18th st.

Deputy Chief of Detectives John T. Warren said that tavern owners who have been robbed since the first of the year would be asked to view the suspects today.

"The prosecution of young criminals today must be determined and thoro if we expect to have a satisfactory post-war adjustment," State's Atty. Tuohy commented. "This gang is typical of many running loose with guns at the present time. We intend to see that they are punished and prove an example to others."

MUSKRAT TRAP RIGGED FOR DIVE BOMBING HAWKS

There may be many ways to skin a cat, but catching a dive bombing nighthawk is something else again, Robert Wiersig of 2344 N. California av. is finding out.

Desperate to catch the pair of nighthawks who have been devilling him and his dog, Sandy, for the last week, Wiersig yesterday tried a new method for capturing his adversaries. This time he got a muskrat trap and baited it with spoiled meat. The big rat traps he has been using haven't caught even a tiny mouse.

"A fellow told me that if you get a dead cat and skin it, the hawks will come down to feed on it," Wiersig said yesterday. "But I asked him, 'Where am I going to get a dead cat?' Even if I found one, I sure wouldn't like the job of dragging it home. So, instead, I'm going to try this muskrat trap with the rancid meat and maybe they'll accept the invitation.

"I'm afraid if I don't trap those birds within the next few days there'll be plenty shooting around here."

URGE FEDERATED STATE FOR AREA SOUTH OF CONGO

BY HENRY WALES
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LISBON, Portugal, July 14—Creation of a great South African state comprising all territory south of the Congo river looms as the principal post-war problem of the dark continent. Agitation for a federated state to be merged with the existing Union of South Africa, broke out spasmodically between World Wars I. and II., but since the nazi collapse it has become more coherent and pressing.

The aim is to include Belgian Congo, Portuguese Angola, and Portuguese Mozambique with British mandated Tanganyika and Rhodesia with the present Union of South Africa, governed from Capetown, into a vast, solid bloc to enjoy commonwealth status and practical autonomy under the British empire.

Proponents of the establishment of such a state say it would solve existing economic difficulties and obviate present customs barriers and rivalries for railways, water routes and other means of communication.

Free from Politics

Furthermore, it is argued, the proposed federation would be strong enough to protect its interests and guarantee outlets for the raw materials produced there and for the introduction of manufactured goods without the existing ruinous competition.

During the European war the operators of concessions, monopolies, and other enterprises in the Belgian and Portuguese colonies dealt directly with the British and American governments in marketing their products and have enjoyed almost complete freedom from political dictation, burocratic controls and manipulations by Brussels and Lisbon authorities and colonial ministries.

The producers are reluctant to see this liberty disappear with peace in Europe and to revert to the petty squabblings and inefficient methods imposed by European functionaries ignorant of colonial problems and requirements.

The most bitter feeling is in the Congo, where mining and agricultural interests ask, "Why should this colony support Belgium indefinitely when Brussels politics, thru intrigue and graft, constantly throttle our efforts and stifle business?"

Portuguese problems are not so acute because Angola and Mozambique are not so fully developed, but the commercial and plantation interests there foresee a future when these colonies will rival the Congo.

When I asked a Portuguese sisal planter if the patriotism of the colonists would be an obstacle to a federation he answered, "Did patriotism prevent the American colonies from fighting the Revolutionary war in 1776?"

Seek Support of Smuts

A mica producer who sells his entire output to the United States said: "We are anxious to start a movement for a federation of South African states immediately while we can enlist the support of Gen. Smuts [Field Marshal J. C. Smuts, prime minister of the Union of South Africa], who is an important enough personage to command a hearing on the question. Smuts said in a speech last year that the era of small nations has passed and that to prevent wars the world should be divided into a few large, powerful states.

With diamonds, gold, copper, sugar, corn, rubber, cotton, hides, nitrates, and phosphates in unlimited quantities, South Africa possesses incalculable resources, American embassy experts report.

These resources have not been exploited heretofore because other areas controled the markets, but since the war cut off many production centers the African fields enjoyed an opportunity to distribute their produce and are determined not to lose the outlet after the war.

ILLINOIS YANKS JOIN FESTIVAL OF BASTILLE DAY

Chicagoans Celebrate with Paris Throngs

BY ANNE BRUYERE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

PARIS, July 14—Illinois Yanks joined in the celebration marking Bastille day today, the most important French holiday, when every one in this country goes on a three day spree of feasting and merrymaking.

Bastille day commemorates the destruction of the Bastille, built by Charles V. In it were imprisoned such famous persons as the Duc d'Orleans and Voltaire, who upheld the cause of liberty and democracy. It was destroyed by the people of Paris on July 14, 1789.

The Latin quarter, which was the Nazis' most stubborn foe, began street dancing and flag waving early yesterday. A thousand Yankee officers and enlisted men who had just arrived from Germany to take up new courses at the Sorbonne were greeted by hilarious students.

Chicagoans Take Part

Among the Chicagoans in the celebration were Arthur Comin, 1644 S. Springfield va., and Gilbert H. Bryan, Highland av.

Said Bryan, who is billeted at the Lycee Louis-le-Grand, headquarters of the Paris study center of the United States army, "It was as much fun as Loyola's pow-wow."

"I came out to see what it was all about, and got carried across the Seine by the crowd," said Comin.

Second Lt. Lewis W. Lepman, 620 Sheridan rd., Glencoe, Ill., heard the Parisians rejoicing under his window at the Lycee St. Louis across the street from the Sorbonne, and stuck his head out. He was greeted by cheers.

"I was chosen to take the course," he said, "because I had 85 points, and got a special leave, along with other men who are marking time until transportation is available."

WACs Given Shower

Chicagoland WACs Yetta Dradnin, 3512 Palmer st.; Sgt. Jane Holmes, 1216 24th st., Wilmette, Ill.; Eva Dickow, 2727 Wilton av., Chicago; Frances Solomen, 8201 Lowell av., Skokie, Ill.; Caroline Keller, 1351 Carmen av., Chicago, and Audrew Joyce, 5919 Kenmore av., Chicago, received a shower of red, white, and blue owers from frolicking Parisians. The girls had been to see the military parade in the Place de la Bastille, where Gen. de Gaulle had decorated several men.

GIs in Rainbow corner saw the parade from comfortable bedroom windows. Sgt. Henry W. Voith, 6607 Sangamon st., Chicago, was among them. "I've been trying to see Paris since D-day," he laughed.

600 Yanks in Parade

PARIS, July 14 [Reuters]—600 American troops, 300 British, 100 Canadians and 200 Belgians were among the forces reviewed by Gen. de Gaulle in the Bastille day military parade here today, when for the first time in six years Paris openly celebrated the beginning of the French revolution of 1789.

After an investiture by Gen. de Gaulle in the Place de la Bastille, site of the royal fortress and prison, destroyed 156 years ago, motorized, mounted, and foot units began their long parade thru the flag bedecked thorofares of the capital.

Promised Extra Rations

Parisians have been promised extra rations of canned fish, jam, lentils, wine, butter, and cognac for today. Loudspeakers were ready to broadcast music from bands in the streets, the squares had bandstands, and the cafes set up hundreds of extra tables on the sidewalks and even the roadways, preparing for an all night session.

A big procession of men and women veterans of World War I., wounded soldiers of this war, slave laborers, and prisoners from Germany, women, and children rescued from German extermination camps, and members of the French resistance movement marched up the Champs Elysees.

100 Italians Cited

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

CHIASSO, Switzerland, July 14—Reporting today's celebrations in Milan of the French national holiday, Bastille day, the newspaper Giornale Lombardo published the names of the 100 young Italians who gave their lives for France at the barricades in Paris and elsewhere last August. They died crying, "Long live France!"

BRITISH CARTOON BOOK SLANDERS YANKS, CHARGE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, July 15 [Sunday]—The publication in Britain of a cartoon book lampooning American soldiers is attacked today in a front page article in the Sunday Pictorial as a "slanderous insult to our American allies in this country."

Branding the publication as horrible and disgusting, the Pictorial said a copy of "More gum, chum—Further Adventures of the Yanks in Britain" was brought to it by a British soldier home from Italy. We said his buddies thought the book was German propaganda until they learned that it was printed in Britain.

The Pictorial quoted him as charging that "its 34 drawings consist almost entirely of horrible jokes about the way British girls, even married women, are running after American service men, and, in fact, being seduced by them."

Demanding that the publishers withdraw the "most disgusting publication we have seen since 1939," the Pictorial admitted there have been cases of unfaithfulness by men and women separated by great distances from their homes, including Americans, but added:

"It is a wicked libel on our women to suggest that they have spent their time during the war chasing Americans or being seduced by them."

OLD PLAN FOR NEW WARS

The discussions being carried on by the army and navy and the congressional committees on military and naval affairs concerning post-war universal military training create the unfortunate impression that, as is customary, the services and congress are getting ready to fight the last war all over again the next time the nation is called upon to defend itself.

The "last war" then will be the unfinished war in which we are still engaged. There is little suggestion in the debates in Washington that our responsible leaders in the army and navy and in congress are looking forward to new weapons, techniques of warfare, or methods of military organization. The doctrine they espouse is the traditional European one of a mass army of trained reservists.

This is remarkable, not only because the war in Europe provided a convincing demonstration of the futility of putting national faith in mere quantities of uniformed men, but also because the great lesson of the war is to be found in the extreme rapidity with which techniques and weapons became obsolete. All the prophets who had preached military theory in the decade of the '30s were made to look foolish when the Nazis unleashed the blitzkrieg.

France's great handicap from 1918 to 1938 was that she could not maintain a large army and still equip it with modern weapons. The French air force was pitifully inadequate; the army lacked the tanks and other mechanized equipment which De Gaulle had foreseen were necessary to give it mobility, and the entire French military outlook was crystalized along the lines of the stationary warfare of 1916.

Germany, deprived of all weapons and forbidden to provide new ones for 20 years, was also denied the privilege of universal training until Hitler repudiated the treaty of Versailles in March, 1935. Restricted to a small professional army of 100,000, the Germans used this cadre to perfect the methods which were to be sprung upon Europe with such blinding success in 1939 and 1940. They first devised the instruments and the techniques; the mass levies to employ them could come at leisure. With modern equipment and methods, the German army in 1940 cut thru the French like a knife thru cheese.

Gen. Eisenhower, among others, has gone on record to the effect that practically all the equipment of this war would have to be scrapped soon. The fact that when the Japanese flag comes down much of our military equipment will be obsolete and the remainder of it obsolescent has been clearly foreshadowed. The German equipment sufficient for victory in 1940 could not avert defeat in 1945 and the Nazis had recognized the fact themselves in turning to robot bombs and jet propelled planes. Fortunately, the Germans were not allowed time to develop these and other radical innovations.

We may devote the remainder of this war to perfecting these ideas introduced by the enemy and the weapons thus produced may assist us in defeating Japan. But V-J day is not going to end the necessity of scientific research and development of the instruments of war. The weapons of the next war will be as far beyond those of this war as the weapons every army now uses are ahead of those of 1918. Other nations will be seeking the means of military invincibility. We cannot abandon the contest to them if we would.

If we mistakenly spend all of our money training men to use obsolete equipment we will not have modern equipment should the need arise in future. It would be much wiser for us to arm only as many men as are necessary for our safety and to give them only the best weapons that we now have. Our major attention should be centered upon the effort to improve constantly upon our present weapons and to plan against any future threat with imagination supported by all of our scientific resources.

A PITY IT ISN'T TRUE

President Truman, in a letter to a radio magazine, has set forth some admirable ideas as to what the American radio industry should be. It is a pity that the conditions that the President assumes to exist do not exist in fact, because the industry would be healthier and the country better served if they did exist.

"Our lawmakers demonstrated admirable foresight," Mr. Truman said, "by decreeing that America, as the birthplace of radio, should have a free, competitive system unfettered by artificial barriers and regulated only as to the law of nature and the limitation of facilities.

"The American system has worked and must keep working. Regulation by natural forces of competition, even with the obvious concomitant shortcomings, is to be preferred over rigid government regulation."

The President's conclusion is sound, and it is a tragedy that the forces of competition which he praises have not been left free from the rigid government regulation which he erroneously assumes does not exist. The fact is that the federal communications commission, operating on the fiction that there is an actual scarcity of broadcasting wave lengths, has, thru its system of licenses—which can be capriciously revoked at the end of six months—made the radio industry the lackey of administration propagandists. So long as the radio broadcaster knows that he can be put out of business on a few months' notice by political burocrats he will be obliged to truckle to the administration in power.

Not until radio stations are given title to their wave lengths, to be revoked only by proof of abuse, in a fair trial before a federal court, will there be any freedom in radio broadcasting. The theory that short term licenses are necessary because there is a scarcity of wave lengths is very largely fiction. Left to competition, the industry would have few more persons willing to risk their money in the expensive operation of broadcasting stations than there are wave lengths to accommodate, except, perhaps, in a few highly concentrated urban areas.

SERVICE NEWSPAPERS

The navy, instead of being warned by the army's sad experience with the Stars and Stripes, has undertaken to imitate that publication.

The regular officers of the navy know nothing about the intricate profession of publishing a newspaper. If officers drawn from civilian life are assigned the task, men will be kept in the navy who would be happier and more useful to the country out of uniform. Capable reserve officers will stretch every nerve to escape an occupation divorced from the honorable business of fighting, while the faint of heart will scheme to get on the staff as they did on the Stars and Stripes.

Stars and Stripes has been a good example of everything a newspaper should not be, and of an activity in which the army should not engage. It has been a haven for combat dodgers and recently has shown evidence that the Communists and their sympathizers are using it to bore from within the army. The navy can expect the same sad experience.

THE GREAT GAME OF GIVE AWAY

Leo Crowley, chairman of the government owned Export-Import bank, is asking congress for a fivefold increase in the bank's capital and the house has approved the plan. The capital now stands at $700,000,000; he wants it raised to $3,500,000,000, so that more money will be available for lending abroad.

The proposal is not without merit, but it would be nice if the government's functionaries in the field of international finance were in agreement. Only a few days ago Mr. Harry D. White, the treasury's expert on Bretton Woods, told the senate's banking committee that Britain will not need extensive loans in this country over and above the amounts she can obtain from the Bretton Woods fund and bank. Apparently Mr. Crowley has a different view. If he had intended to exclude Britain from benefiting from the expanded capital of his bank he would hardly have failed to say so.

The Daily Mail of London said the other day that Britain expects to borrow 6 billion dollars in this country. That sounds more like it. When requests of this proportion are received we may expect that precisely the same persons who have been saying that Bretton Woods places the limit on the amount of lending we shall have to do will be loudest in insisting that whatever Britain asks for she should have.

That is what generally happens. Similarly, we were told that lend-lease would spare us the necessity of sending an expeditionary force to fight the Germans. "Send us the tools," said Mr. Churchill, "and we will finish the job." In fact, we sent the tools and then had to send the men to finish the job. The difference between the promise and the actuality was something like 700,000 American casualties in the European theater.

American officialdom generally can be counted upon to play England's game at all times. Men of influence in Washington and New York habitually look up to London and down at Chicago, St. Louis, Detroit, and Kansas City. The OWI's recent description for Russian readers of our great plains area was typical of a prevalent attitude.

Our officials behave like good colonials. They think it was only right that America supplied three-quarters of the fighting men on the western front and all the fighting men who have been engaged in the direct attack on Japan. When the war has been won these spokesmen of ours will feel that in good conscience we must continue to pour out our resources for England's benefit.

If the British want to rebuild their country at our expense that will seem just to our officials. We can only wonder when, if ever, this self-degrading attitude will change to one of self-respect. Certainly it has persisted for at least half a century, regardless of changes in the political complexion of Washington, and it shows no sign of abating.

JUSTICE ROBERTS RESIGNS

[Hartford (Conn.) Courant]

Owen J. Roberts, who has resigned as an associate justice of the Supreme court, is commonly rated as belonging to the conservative wing of the court, but that is a classification without much meaning. It often happens that the so-called "liberal" members take the "conservative" side in cases where that is not expected of them, and "conservative" members change places with them. What is a "liberal" and what is a "conservative" view in respect to any given matter admits of no hard and fast line of demarcation.

Thruout his 15 years on the bench, Mr. Roberts has presumably never given a thought as to whether his affirmation or dissent would be regarded as indicative of any particular social or economic ideology. His first concern seemed always to have been with the facts involved and the law applicable to those facts. As a consequence, the public has formed a high opinion of the purity of his motives and his ability to draw sound conclusions from the premises laid down.

The clarity of his reasoning found its most recent exemplification in his dissent from the opinion of Justice Black in the Associated Press case, a dissent in which the chief justice joined. "The court's opinion," he said, "blends and mingles statements of fact, inferences, and confusions, and quotations from prior opinions wrested from their setting and context, in such fashion that I find it impossible to deduce more than that orderly analysis and discussion of facts relevant to any one of the possible methods of violation of the Sherman act is avoided, in the view that separate consideration would disclose a lack of support for any finding of specific wrongdoing. But the general principle that nothing added to nothing will not add up to something holds true in this case."

RADIO WITH TELEVISION

[Following is an address delivered last night by Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of The Tribune, and broadcast on the Chicago Theater of the Air over W-G-N and the Mutual Broadcasting system.]

BY COL. ROBERT R. McCORMICK

Last week, in describing the steps leading to the electrical broadcast of sound impulses and the more recent discoveries making possible the broadcast of visual images, I spoke on the inventions. Tonight I will speak on the use of the inventions—our use of television.

In television we will begin, as we began in radio, with what we will have. We will, for instance, put the Chicago Theater of the Air on television. We have already experimented with the television possibilities of the Chicago Theater of the Air, having played several performances in costume and having arranged the stage with an eye toward camera, or video, pickups as well as microphone, or audio balance.

The artists will be seen and so will the huge audience. We will put on the Music Festival, or rather a part of it, showing the hundred thousand in attendance and certain of the performances. We will put on the Golden Gloves, football games, baseball games, national conventions.

To what extent television will compete with or succeed moving pictures or theatrical shows I do not know, and I am not particularly well qualified to guess.

This much, however, seems obvious, that radio, accompanied by television, will outcompete radio without television, just as newspapers with pictures ran out newspapers without pictures and, conversely, movies with conversation ran out the silent drama.

It seems likely that both moving pictures and theaters will use television as a medium, putting on just enough show to interest the general public to come into the theater.

Both video, or picture, and audio, or sound, will utilize the new frequency modulation method of transmission, as its range of both sight and sound is greater and its reception is noise free. "Noise," in the case of televized pictures, appears as specks and dots on the image and is most disconcerting.

Thus it appears that television will have a definite part of the FM spectrum, while high fidelity sound alone will occupy still another part. It seems likely that AM, or the present method of broadcasting, will continue to serve a permanent need for communications and sightless broadcasts—broadcasts that do not reach beyond the limitations of AM, or amplitude modulation.

Unexpected limitations on television will develop and also unforeseen possibilities.

Mentioned together with FM and television is facsimile. Facsimile will reproduce by wire or radio whatever written, drawn, or printed matter is passed thru the transmitter. It is new in method, but not in principle. As long ago as 1925 pictures were sent by cable from Europe. They were not very good pictures, but they were the precursors of better ones.

In 1935 the AP established its system of wirephoto, whereby are sent photographic reproductions by wire.

When the king and queen of England were in the United States in 1939, the AP sent a color photograph of them taken by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE in Washington which was reproduced in Scotland.

In this discussion we must include the Morcrum printer, an instrument by which a typewritten message is reproduced by a telegraphically controled, electrically operated typewriter, which, in turn, in effect is an improvement upon the ticker tape long in use in stock brokers' offices. The ticker tape never got much beyond stock brokers' offices. Wirephoto is used by, and not in competition with, newspapers. The Morcrum printer does not seem to be used excepting for the sending of telegrams either by newspapers or the telegraph company.

Whether facsimile will come into any general use remains to be seen. It is a much simpler operation than wirephoto and, as it carries both pictures and maps, it would seem to be more popular than the printer.

I can conceive how any news conscious person on a hunting or fishing trip, or the crew of a ship, possibly people in an automobile, would like one. I can conceive that a farmer not receiving a daily paper would like to find one at breakfast time and again at supper time.

It does not seem probable that it can compete with the newspaper when the newspaper can be delivered, for after all the facsimile machine will be an individual printing press. It hardly seems likely that a million facsimile newspapers, printing one newspaper per day, can be produced in economic competition with printing presses printing 40 to 50 thousand copies an hour.

However, newspapers would be well advised to keep in touch with these processes and be ready to adopt them at any time they may threaten to supersede the older processes of news dissemination.

Editorials of the Day

A SILENT MAYOR

[Hartford (Conn.) Courant]

A situation pregnant with horrendous possibilities exists now in Dearborn, Mich., for the common council of that city has passed an ordinance making it a criminal offense for the mayor to talk for publication. According to his accusers his honor was taking advantage of every opportunity to build himself up politically—something, of course, that office holders rarely do. As lawmakers, the council members have implicit faith in the efficacy of laws to eliminate evils. So they forthwith forbade his honor to make speeches at chowder parties, to address inductees, or in any other way to utter words for public consumption.

This, indeed, is a plight that could be dealt with adequately only by such masters as Gilbert and Sullivan. For it has in it all that bathos of "The Pirates of Penzance" or "Iolanthe." Picture poor Mayor Hubbard of Dearborn, shorn of those perquisites, rights, and prerogatives that have, since the memory of man runneth not to the contrary, been the happy lot of every politician from mayor down to the commonest council member.

Withal, the Dearborn council showed a modicum of moderation. The mayor is not denied the privilege of kissing babies, passing out cigars, or slapping his constituents on the back in hearty greeting. Even so, if the present experiment works out well in Dearborn, it may be contagious. This sinister movement may well be viewed with alarm by every mayor as he points with pride to his own spotless record. En garde, men!

A SHORT LIFE FOR MEMEX

[Miami Herald]

Of the many Rube Goldberg gadgets promised in technicolor prose for "after the war," the thinking machine described by Dr. Vannevar Bush in the Atlantic Monthly, takes the palm.

Dr. Bush foresees the day when we may "click off arguments on a machine with the same assurance that we now enter sales on a cash register." He has a name for his still unbuilt gimmick—"Memex."

Far be it from us to throw cold water, but Dr. Bush's skill with machines seems to be greater than his knowledge of the ordinary run of mind. He speaks of logic and association of ideas. Most of us think with our emotions. He is a dullard who can't, already, unaided by a gimmick, "click off arguments" with the speed of the fastest calculator.

Memex would have a brief life, anyway. Very soon its owner would be talking back at it in sheer self-defense, against its superior I. Q. Let Memex win just one argument and it would be a dead duck. It would get the ax, but good.

COMMON SENSE AT THE BEACH

BASEBALL may be our great American sport, but when I see the multitudes milling about beaches I wonder if the impression is accurate. The shore offers relief from the heat and each member of the family can enjoy his particular hobby—swimming, wading, sand castles, or sun bathing.

All medicines are accompanied by precautions and directions. Those who use poor judgment may have to pay dearly for overindulgence in the sun. Most of us are aware of what it will do but the winter is so long that we forget the agony of last year's siege. A few persons may become so thoroly cooked that it is necessary to spend two weeks in a hospital.

Many do not realize that the sand and water reflect the ultraviolet rays and even hats may afford little protection. After a plunge, the tiny droplets of water on the skin act as small magnifying lenses and intensify the effect. An overcast sky may be deceiving, as burning occurs even tho the direct rays are seemingly filtered by the clouds.

Every one who is physically able should learn to swim not only for the exercise but because we never know when the accomplishment may come in handy. Those in the armed forces can vouch for this statement and many a man is alive today because he was able to stay afloat even for a minute. The technique of artificial respiration should be understood as it may be responsible for saving a life.

As with everything else, common sense is desirable. The rule of waiting an hour or two after meals before taking a dip still holds; otherwise cramping may result. Digestion requires a large amount of blood and it should not be diverted for muscular activity. It is not advisable to plunge into cold waves when overheated. The elderly and those with coronary heart disease must avoid water that is uncomfortably chilly.

Only the most experienced swimmer should venture far out into the lake or ocean. But even these individuals do the sensible thing by keeping close to the shore, where they can go great distances but always in safety. Before diving, it is wise to investigate the depth and whether rocks are present at the bottom. A fractured skull or broken neck is a high price to pay for recklessness.

Infections in the nose, sinuses, and ears are more likely to occur in those who inhale water via the nostrils. That is the reason why we attempt to breathe thru the mouth while swimming. In most cases, the germs normally present in the nose and throat are responsible, being forced into the sinuses or thru the Eustachian tubes into the ears. The outer ear is seldom to blame. Those who have acute or chronic respiratory symptoms actually invite further trouble.

The cleanliness of the water is rarely a factor in lakes, oceans, and moving streams except in densely populated areas. Pools are the greatest offenders unless disinfected and cleaned frequently. Pinkeye, boils, ringworm and other ailments can result from contamination.

Swimming can be fun and is one of our most healthful recreations. It will remain so if we are prudent and obey the simple rules.

SHOULD HE MARRY?

W. C. writes: I am a young man of 30 and have scar tissue on my lungs and a nervous tic. I wonder if it would be all right to get married?

REPLY

Neither will be cured by marriage and there is a possibility that the additional responsibility may aggravate the latter. On the other hand, I see no harm in it, provided the girl friend does not object. A neuropsychiatrist may be of help in eliminating the tic.

POUCH IN GULLET

A. W. writes: I have an enlarged pocket in my esophagus, as shown by an X-ray. Food collects in this area after I eat and this is quite uncomfortable. Can it be removed?

REPLY

Yes, by a man skilled in chest surgery.

LEG AND KNEE

H. F. writes: Are milkleg and housemaid's knee the same?

REPLY

No. The former is due to inflammation of a vein, causing the entire leg to swell. The latter involves disturbance of a bursa in a knee, with resultant enlargement.

SUN IN CONSUMPTION

W. J. R. writes: Is sunbathing beneficial or harmful to a victim of tuberculosis of the lungs?

REPLY

Most specialists in this field believe that it does more harm than good, by preventing proper healing.

BOWLEGS

S. D. writes: I am very bowlegged and do not know how to correct myself. Will you answer my problem?

REPLY

A skilled orthopedic surgeon should be consulted. Surgery may be necessary.

BRAIN WAVES

H. G. writes: Is there an electrical machine to examine the brain?

REPLY

The electroencephalograph is sometimes used when brain lesions are suspected. It is frequently of value in diagnosing epilepsy.

SPREAD OF INFECTION

S. C. writes: How does blood poisoning set in?

REPLY

Bacteria from a localized area of infection may reach the blood stream in such numbers that it is overwhelmed.

RATIONED PORK—UNRATIONED CHICKEN

Oak Park, Ill., June 27—The country is in a war. There is alleged to be a shortage of labor. There is a shortage of meat. The patriotic thing is to get the most meat possible from each unit of grain and the least amount of labor. Prices are supposed to be held down to avoid inflation. Let's look at the prices set.

Live pork has a ceiling price of 14.75 cents a pound, Chicago. At the same time, the price of live broilers has been set at 41 cents a pound, Chicago. One pound of live hog will furnish more meat and fat than a pound of live chicken. If it is a matter of filling John Citizen's belly with meat, a pound of live hog will do a better job than a pound of live chicken. Yet, one is 14.75 cents a pound and the other is 41 cents.

Why should broilers be set at 41 cents a pound and pork at 14.75 cents? Simply because it takes more feed and more labor to produce a pound of chicken. That's why the farmer has to get 41 cents—and makes very little money, at that. Pork, the cheaper meat, is rationed. Chicken, the expensive meat, is unrationed.

Thru rationing and thru ceilings, the government has discouraged the producing of pork—yet the government, thru its means of publicity, has urged increases in the production of chicken meat. If they're really serious about keeping down the cost of living and conserving labor and feed, wouldn't it make sense to raise the ceiling price of pork to 18 cents a pound? Such a program would get more pounds of meat to the consumer at less cost. But no, they keep the price of pork down and encourage the production of 41 cent chicken—do not ration chicken—and even recently advance the ceiling price of live chicken 1½ cents a pound.

The present setup doesn't conserve man power, doesn't conserve feed, and it doesn't hold down the cost of living. The hog producer, who can do the best job of any one, is getting a bad deal and the meat eating public is suffering.

The main reason for the present meat shortage has been the decline in the number of hogs raised. The preceding year, when there was a large increase in pork production, hogs sold under the floor, the storage space was flooded with meat, and rationing was abandoned [temporarily]. The next year, the hog numbers greatly declined and so meat is scarce.

There is reason to believe that if the man power used in running this meat rationing affair had been used in raising hogs, there would be so much pork that rationing would not be needed.

CHARGES OPA AID WAS DRUNK

Chicago, July 10—As the landlady of a small apartment building, today I had a visit by an inspector from the OPA as the result of an unjustified complaint from one of my tenants.

Now, it was very evident that this gentleman had been drinking. He was rude, abusive, and discourteous. He made such statements as, "You should have your brains beaten out," and "You should be thrown out the window." It was impossible to reason with him on any count. He, it seems, had a grievance against the OPA because, he explained, he owned a hotel and had had his rents frozen. He said that if he was only allowed to receive $7 a week for his rooms ours was only worth $3 a week.

I can understand his prices, because his place of business is right in the heart of the Negro district.

The office of price administration itself has set the prices on our apartments. The apartment in question has a rental of $60 a month.

OPTIMISTS AND MINUTE MEN

Berwyn, Ill., June 17—There is a perennial variety of American optimist who believes that world peace is possible by instituting programs and conventions. He believes in the honesty, uprightness, and fidelity of all nations—even tho such nations, by action and proved inclination, do not warrant trust, do not understand the meaning of uprightness, and are faithful only to such things of the moment as promise profit.

This optimist believes there are no concentration camps in Siberia. He avows that the governments of the satellite nations of Russia are under the control of democratic, patriotic members of those nations. He scoffs at the fact that Russia is steadily increasing her already overwhelming army. He thinks it merely the excusable eccentricity of a "great man" when Dictator Stalin remains in Russia to receive the envoys of great republics—including the President of the United States—instead of joyfully agreeing to a meeting of the Big Three in Washington or London.

The optimist shrugs off the selfish thanklessness of a continent saved from enslavement by American strength and bloody sacrifice. He winks at the noncoöperation of such nations with the United States, at the petty bickering of godless, profiteering pirates, at all the glutinous, spider-web entanglements that have so far made the San Francisco conference a deplorable farce and a blot on the pages of coöperative diplomacy. This good, well meaning optimist is frantic in his efforts to convert and resolve all other Americans into one passive mass of optimistic zealots fighting to make the world safe for British, Russian, Dutch, and French imperialistic appetites, which are insatiable, and which lead inevitably—when the narrow path to power becomes crowded—to war.

Human nature has changed little the world over. Science is as devoted to war as to peace. Men are still atavistic and hellishly cruel. There are rapists and murderers in abundant numbers living on this earth in high and low office. An international bank, financed chiefly by American wealth at the expense of dwindling natural and economic resources, an Atlantic Charter now sunk beneath the waves of forgotten oceans of promises, a Dumbarton Oaks forest already grown thickly with the choking weeds of petty politics, red tape, and secret agreements, an international conference for peace rendered impotent and made laughable by the stubbornness and truculence of a single powerful nation, whose life we saved, do not make for optimism in any sense or capacity of that word. Rather, these phenomena seem to be warning all honest nations to be eternally vigilant and wary. They seem to argue for the creed of the American minute man.

American invincibility is not the result of optimistic and blindly wishful political finagling. It is, rather, a matter directly related to American arms: to the greatest navy the world has ever known, to the best equipped and fastest striking mechanized army which, by its very existence, strikes fear into the hearts of dictators and desperate men, and to the fanged lines, swarms, clouds, of deadly aircraft. Here is your peace. If force rules the world in time of war, it must also rule in time of peace. There can be no peaceful compromise with death and destruction.

THEY SIT AND THINK

Middlebury, Vt., July 7—It appears that it is up to the people to make demands on their congressmen to reduce the government overhead by getting rid of 500,000 federal employes now. Sen. Byrd states that we can reduce our federal staff by that number now and do the work more efficiently. I asked one federal employe recently what he did. His reply was, "We sit and think most of the time." From the results obtained in muddling up our internal affairs and the tremendous expense to the taxpayers, the majority of these thinkers should be relieved of their jobs at once.

IS ILLINOIS' BELL COUNTERFEIT?

Vincennes, Ind., July 6—We don't believe that the state of Illinois would deliberately try to "steal our thunder" in regard to the original Liberty bell of the old Northwest Territory, for the preservation and exhibition of which the Illinois legislature was asked to appropriate $25,000.

However, the fact remains that here in old Vincennes there reposes in the belfry of St. Francis' Roman Catholic church [the old cathedral] the bell our sister state is claiming to possess.

Vincennes does not begrudge Illinois anything, but let's not overlook the fact that Vincennes existed before Illinois was born; Vincennes being the capital of the territory out of which six states were carved.

History has it that the Liberty bell in this city occupied the belfry in the first Catholic church erected in 1732 on the spot where the present church now stands. It was sent here from France as a contribution from the people of France to this famous French settlement.

On July 20, 1778, Father Pierre Gibault, referred to as the Patriot Priest of the Northwest, administered the oath of allegiance to the 182 men and women residents of this city. While the American flag was being raised, the bell was ringing.

We suggest that a committee of unbiased citizens of Indiana and Illinois make the decision.

Vincennes will concede half the Wabash river to Illinois at points where the Wabash divides the two states, but never will we permit our good sister state to claim credit for possessing the original Liberty bell of the old northwest.

SECESSION FROM THE LEAGUE

Evanston, Ill., July 5—Now that we Americans are going to be outvoted 10 to 1 on the so-called security council, what will happen to us when a future American congress decides to secede from that central body? Will some foreign one-worlder posing as a Lincoln decide that once within the world organization there may be no secession?

Will our children be taunted as world rebels when they decide to defend their native land against the hordes of one-worlders that are bound to swarm in upon us? Will the next war be a repetition of our Civil war with a one-world taint? If the 10 to 1 alignment against us finally does attack we'll need all the heavenly help that can be spared, because we're getting very little here on earth.

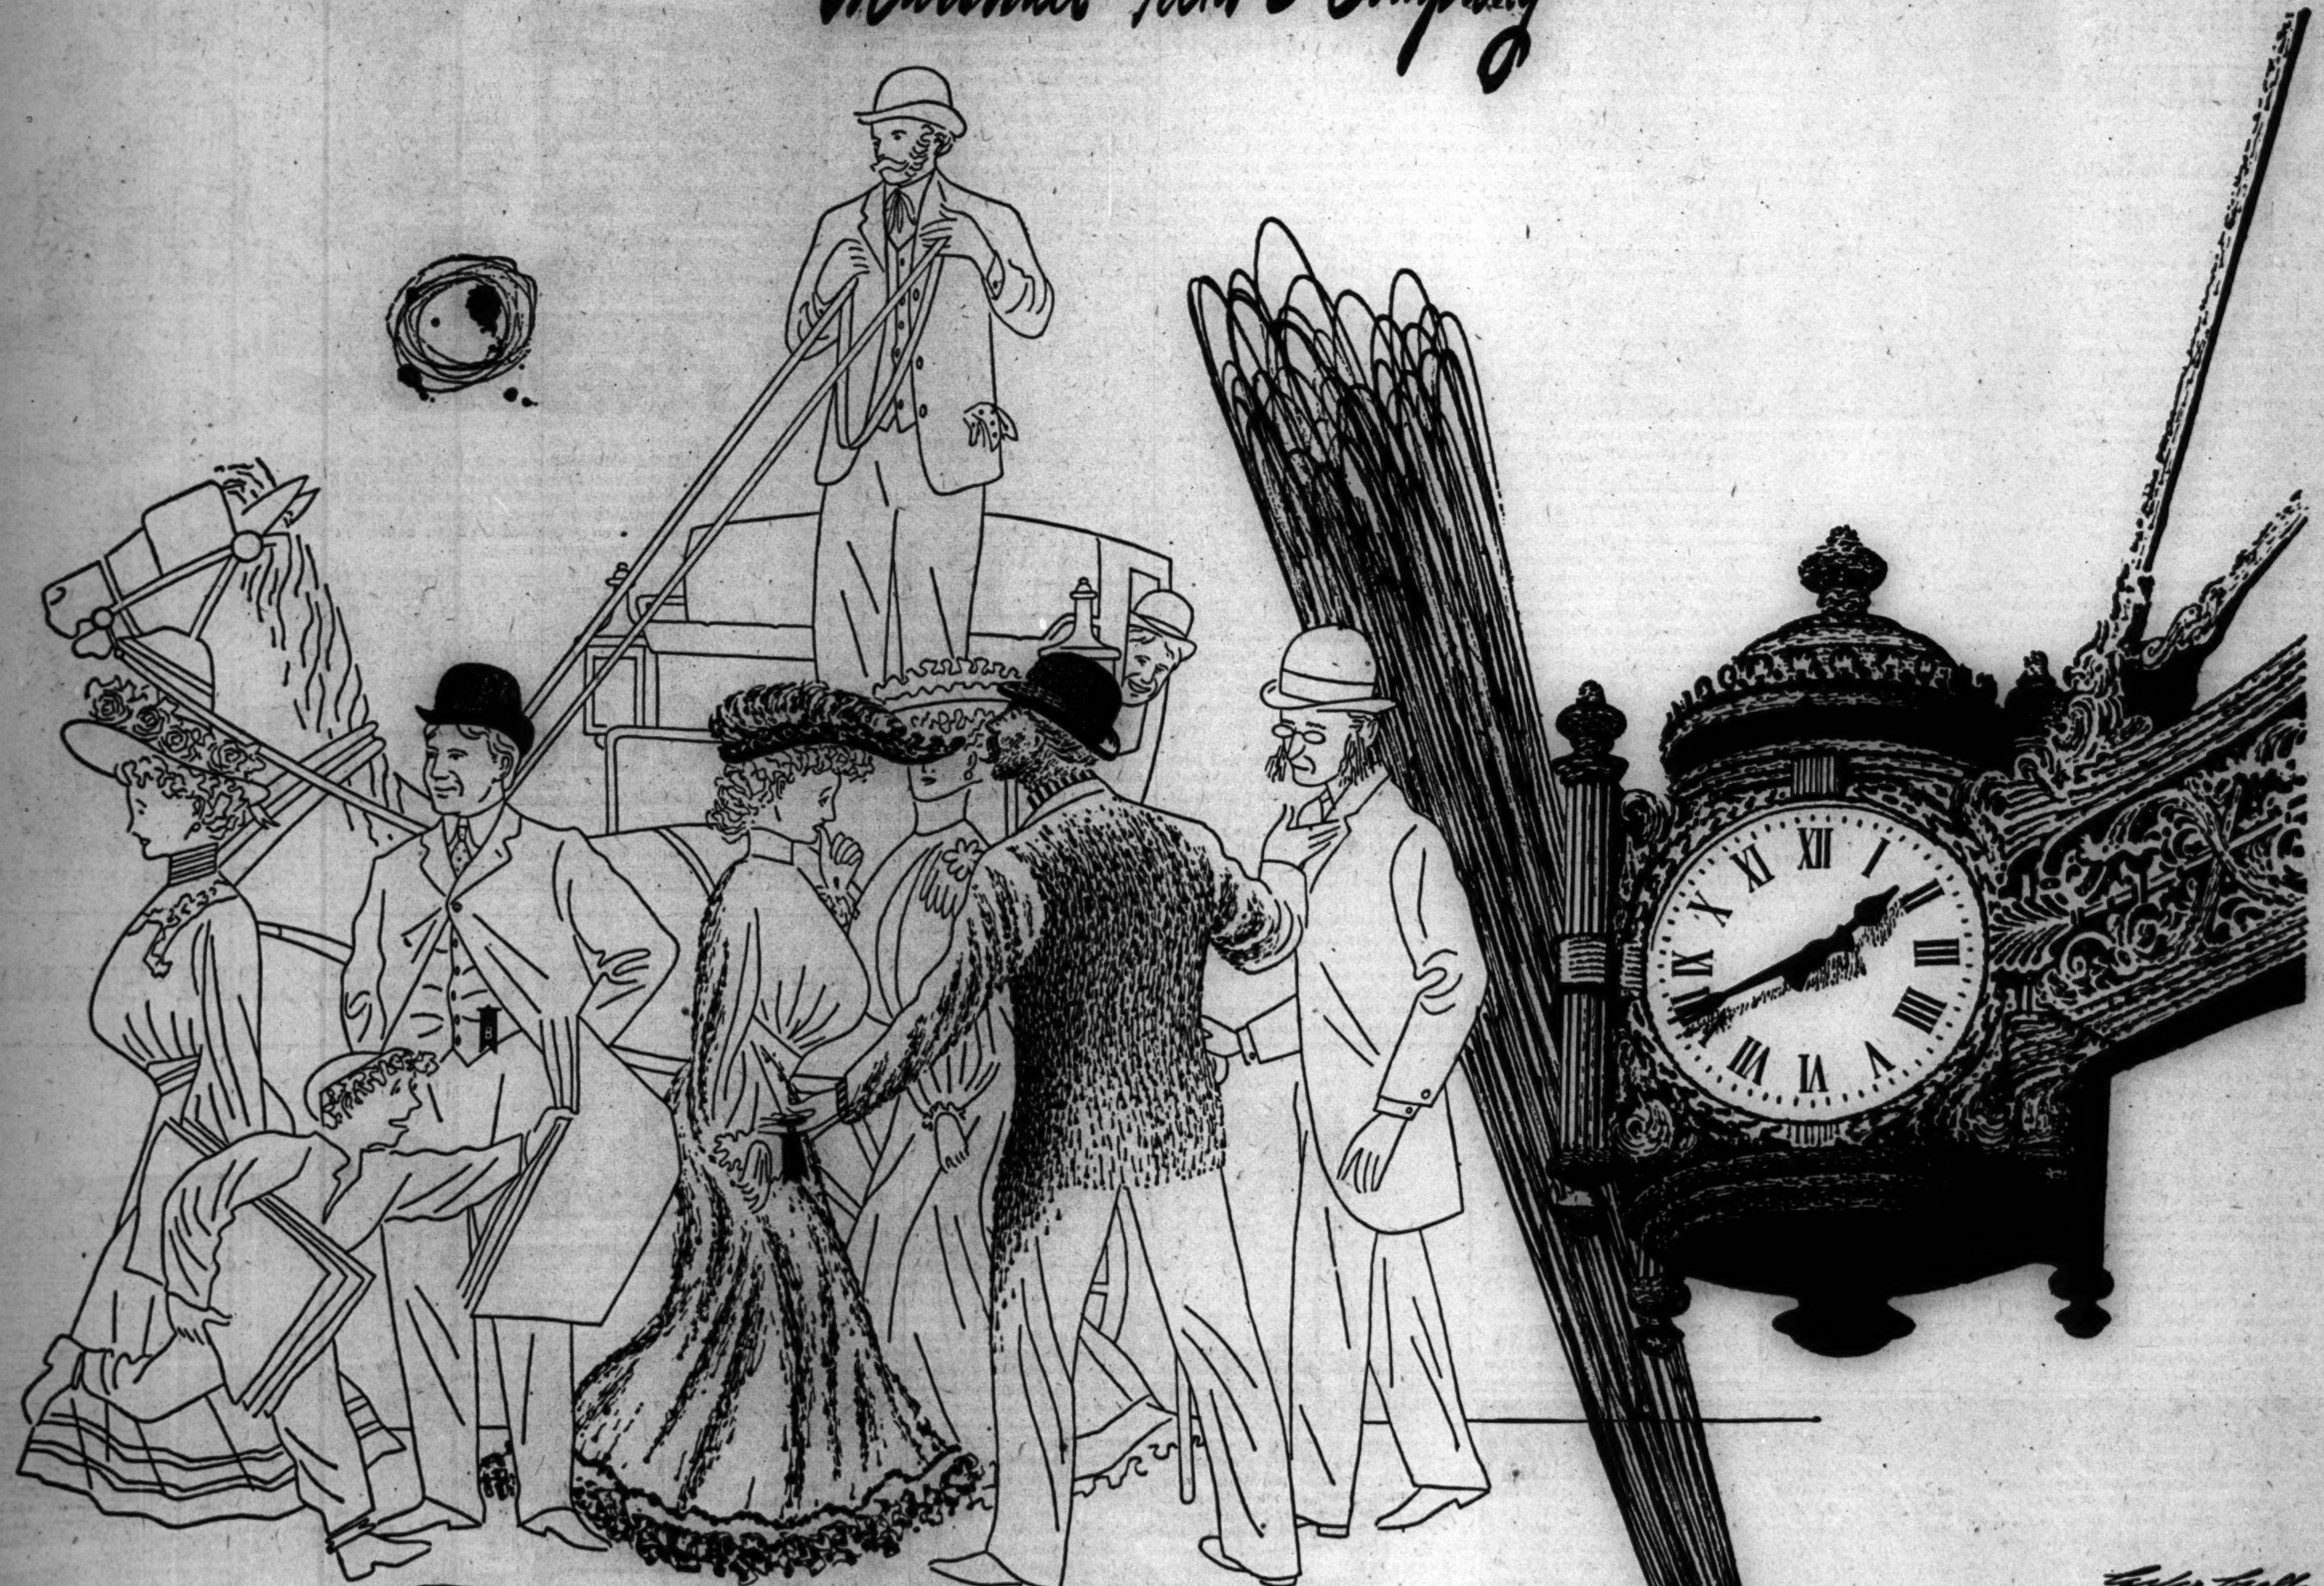
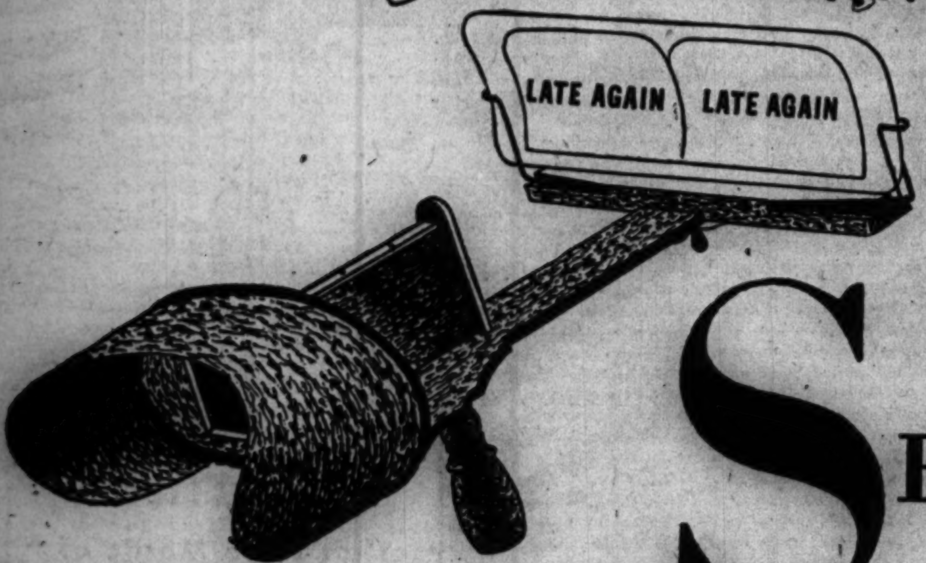
Marshall Field & Company





SHE DIDN'T KNOW THE TIME OF DAY

or—what it is that makes us tick

YESTERDAY—It was just that she was always late—and that's what made our famous clocks start to tick! As far back as '78 carriages began to rendezvous at our corner—that's where friends met! But it was in '99 that Marshall Field, the store's founder, decided that the corner must have a clock. Day after day he had found notes pinned to our doors or wedged in the corners of the new plate glass show windows: "Martha—you're late again. I'll be back in twenty minutes. Gone to corsets. Imogene." Or "Maribelle—I'll be back at three—wait right here! John." It was evident that Chicago needed a clock to meet under—a clock so big it could be seen for blocks around. In 1900 Mr. Field gave the job of making the first of the huge timepieces to Chicago clockmakers—challenged them to the biggest job of their careers. And they built more than a clock—they built a part of Chicago.

TODAY—the clocks at State and Washington and State and Randolph are Chicago landmarks. "Meet me under the clock" is a Chicago byword. Soldiers write from overseas: "Please, Mom, send me a postcard of something real Chicago—like the Field clock!" Why, designers have copied our clocks on scarfs—on blouses! An average of 141,391 persons a day pass under our clocks—everyone from movie stars to Prince Abdul Illah, the regent of Iraq. Our colossal clocks (12 feet, six inches high—seven and three-fourths tons—the minute hand more than two feet long) are as much a part of Chicago as Marshall Field & Company, one of the world's great stores!

TOMORROW—holds our promise! We've answered your needs in the '90's—in a difficult today—and we intend to have the answers in the complicated postwar world ahead! That's our job, our responsibility, our promise—to you who made us what we are today. (Chapter XV of the story "Marshall Field & Company and Early Chicago.")

RAVINIA ENJOYS SOPRANO VOICE OF MISS MAYNOR

Cooling Breezes in Song and Fact at Park

BY CLAUDIA CASSIDY

Summer concerts can be capricious affairs in this climate, so no wonder there was a twinkle in Dorothy Maynor's eyes at Ravinia last night, when with Erich Leinsdorf and the Chicago Symphony orchestra, she sang an exquisite performance of "Oh What Comfort," from Haydn's "The Seasons," a dulcet aria lauding such items as the sweet and cooling breeze.

Last night's breeze had the flags standing out straight and the audience wishing it could share its fur coats and blankets with the imperturnable soloist, gauzily wrapped in bronze and gold.

Has Superior Accompaniment

But it was a lovely concert, because the night was crisp enough for strings and yet not so frigid it congealed the wood winds. So Miss Maynor had superior accompaniment both in the Haydn and in its predecessor, Mozart's incomparable "Et Incarnatus est," from the great mass in C minor, with its three obbligato wind instruments rivaling the strings in support of an ideal soprano.

Miss Maynor's voice is getting finer by the hearing. Last night it had the pure Mozart gold that was Edith Mason's not so many years ago, and the serenity of its musicianship and the depth of its feeling erased any possible accusation that this was rather an operatic aria than a solo from a great mass. Her performance was perfection not only in actuality, but in implication, for it had all the warmth and color and luminous radiance of the Italian madonna that seems to have been Mozart's inspiration.

Balance Uncommonly Deft

Mr. Leinsdorf set the stage for his soloist with an altogether engaging performance of Mozart's serenade in D, a buoyant adventure in seven agreeable sections, each tipped with melody and laced with wit. Here, as in Thursday night's Schubert, the orchestral balance was uncommonly deft, so that no voice was obscured when its turn came to shine.

At intermission I heard that Miss Maynor was worried that she was doing less than her best work in the chill night air, a conscientious fear, but to my ear unfounded. For if she had been exquisite in Mozart and Haydn, she was brilliant when she returned wrapped in a big brown cloak and a bigger smile to sing the French music that bowed perhaps to Bastille day and certainly to Gallic genius.

Audience Cheers Her

She sang Debussy's "Air de Lia" from "L'Enfant Prodigue" with an ardent sweep that had the audience cheering, and later came "Depuis le Jour," from "Louise," now almost her trademark, because she alone of contemporary singers know and communicte its inner ecstasy. And between them was the delicately amorous incantation of Duparc's "L 'Invitation au Voyage," superbly sung with superb accompaniment. What a pleasure to hear such a song with full orchestra.

Mr. Leinsdorf preceded the French group with Bizet's first "L 'Arlesienne" suite, deftly enough played, but it could not rival the accompanists, including that to Strauss' encored "Standchen," the outstanding success of last Tuesday's Maynor triumph.

Music was furnished during the lake trip by units from the two hospitals.

SOLOIST IS ONLY REWARDING NOTE IN PARK CONCERT

BY ALBERT GOLDBERG

Some form of decoration might well be thought up for the hardy music lover who braves the arctic winds of a Chicago July to sit thru a Grant park concert. Or perhaps an honorary degree would be in order—doctor of musical endurance, with critics first in line.

At any rate the benches were at least half filled last night by an intrepid and well bundled audience come to hear Cavallo's Symphonic band in its weekly concert. Mr. Cavallo had reminded himself that it was Bastille day and dug deep into his library to bring out some music apropos the event and some that was simply by French composers.

Reasons for Going Home

Litloff's "Maximilian Robespierre" overture celebrated the French revolution in the naively realistic way that 19th century composers went about such things, even to the final drop of the guillotine; but as a portrait of the bloody Robespierre it was pure whitewash.

With no doubt equally good intentions Mr. Cavallo programmed a lengthy potpourri of music from Giordano's opera of the Revolution, "Andrea Chenier," pallid stuff even in the theater, and probably as much responsible as the weather for the general exodus that took place at its conclusion.

Earlier, however, there had been an equally good reason for going home in the form of an arrangement of the first and last movements of Beethoven's "Moonlight" Sonata which must certainly have confused and terrified the composer had he heard it, even as it did this fairly well insulated reviewer.

Soloist, at Least, Rewarding

But as against these two musical atrocities there had been a very good reason for staying put in by Margery Mayer's singing, tho it was rank injustice to force so gifted a young artist to sing against the noisy and inept accompaniments furnished by the band.

Yet in spite of this handicap Miss Mayer came thru with an account of "Amour Viens Aider" from "Samson et Dalila" that displayed her velvety, seductive contralto in most grateful fashion, leading to an encore with appropriate gestures, the Habanera from "Carmen," that still further strengthened Miss Mayer's rather remarkable resemblance to Mary Garden.

SAVE 3 IN LAKE AND DAD WHO TRIED RESCUE

The sailboat Prelude capsized yesterday in the lake off Grace st., tossing its skipper, William Baska, 15, and his two friends, Ronald Albion and John Coble, overboard. Baska's father, Frank, 209 Stanley av., Park Ridge, owner of the boat, set out from shore in a rowboat to rescue them. A wave upset the elder Baska and catapulted him on and then off the overturned sailboat to which the three young sailors clung. William Seversen, Chicago harbor master, took the Baskas aboard his launch. James Booth, in the motor boat White Wings, saved the other two.

CHAINS FEEDING CATTLE FOR OWN MEAT MARKETS

Groceries Take Over Packing Plants

BY GAIL COMPTON
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Omaha, Neb., July 14—A bitter controversy is raging over the recent strong inroads of chain stores into the business of feeding meat animals, processing them in their own packing plants and using most of the meat for their own stores.

Kroger and Safeway stores are the main subjects of discussion among packers and cattle feeders. These two chains have bought their own packing plants and set up their own feed lots. Now they are bidding actively on the markets for feeder cattle. They feed out the cattle, slaughter them, and ship the meat to their stores.

Kroger has three packing plants now, a survey reveals. One is located in Columbus, O.; one in Scotts Bluff, and one in Omaha, Neb. The first two plants both handle cattle, sheep, and hogs. The Omaha plant slaughters only cattle. The Columbus plant kills about 400 cattle a week, the Scotts Bluff around 300 head per week, and the Omaha branch about 1,200 cattle a week, according to Max Moore, manager of the Omaha plant.

Expect 10,000 Head

Kroger stores expect to have about 10,000 cattle on feed in the next 30 days. How far beyond this their operations will expand is not known as the chain store started feeding only about three months ago.

Safeway stores are reported to have 14 packing plants in operation and around 50,000 cattle on feed. Feeding operations of both chains include cattle, sheep, and hogs.

In several cases a chain store has entered an area and purchased a local packing plant. Then all the meat processed in the plant was shipped to the chain's meat markets and local stores suddenly were without meat supplies. This caused considerable suffering until the government forced the chains to allocate certain percentages of their kill to the local area.

Can Outbid Feeders

Farmer and commercial feeders protest that the chain stores are forcing the price of feeder cattle to abnormal levels in their desire to get meat for their customers. They point out that the chain stores get the feeder subsidy, the packer subsidy, and also are relieved of federal drove compliance costs on the cattle they have owned for more than 80 days. This, they claim, enables the chain stores to pay almost any price for their meat and creates abnormal conditions.

The big packers, as a result of a consent decree, are prohibited from selling meat at retail. The packers are not allowed to go into the grocery business, but the grocery stores are allowed to go into the packing business, cattlemen point out.

The feeding and packing business mainly is a headache for the chain stores, Moore said. Chain store organizations were forced to seek their own meat when the packers drastically reduced supplies the chain stores were receiving.

Says Feedlots Losing Money

As a matter of record, however, some chain stores have been in the packing business for a number of years.

"Our feedlots operate at a loss for the same reasons the big commercial feeders have stopped," Moore said. "Also our packing plant here is not making money. Last week our loss amounted to $5,600. I believe the chain stores would be willing to get out of this end of the business if our supplies from the packers were assured."

The Kroger packing plants are federally inspected and must set aside 30 per cent of their production for the army.

Chicago packers said that altho the meat processed by chain stores in their own plants is not yet terribly large from a tonnage standpoint, and that Kroger and Safeway for all their efforts are not able to supply nearly the amount needed for their retail outlets, the problem is growing. A Swift & Co. spokesman declared that the independent meat dealer is the sufferer more than the packer, who still sells to chain and independent stores alike.

The inquest into the slaying of Morris Margolis, 30, liquor dealer, handbook operator, and former chauffeur for Joe Fusco, once Capone gang brewer, was continued to Aug. 17 yesterday when police requested further time for investigation.

Margolis' body, a bullet thru the head, was found in his car in front of 1622 Ontario st. early Friday. His wristwatch and $1,000 he was known to have carried were missing.

His widow, Doris, 4300 Marine dr., collapsed at the inquest after testifying she last saw her husband Thursday night. She professed inability to throw any light on the slaying motive.

Margolis' funeral will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow in the chapel at 2235 Division st.

GIRL AT CHURCH LURED INTO CAR; BATTLES RAPIST

A 7 year old girl, daughter of a traffic policeman, was enticed away from the confessional in St. Laurence church, 7140 Dorchester av., at 3:15 p. m. yesterday by a man who kidnaped her in his automobile and attempted to rape her.

The little girl, her face scratched and bleeding, was found at Rainbow beach, Cheltenham pl. and the lake, by Policeman Harold Haab, on duty there. She said the man pushed her out of the car after she resisted him for nearly half an hour. During the interval the man stripped off her clothing, but he later re-dressed her.

The kidnaper entered the church as the child and her sister, 5, were kneeling in a pew, awaiting her turn to enter the confessional. He whispered to her: "Your mother wants you." After she followed him out of the church her sister ran home. Her mother notified the police and squads started to search for the kidnaper before she had been released.

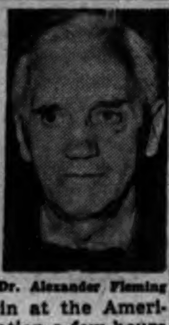
CITES DANGERS IN UNPRESCRIBED PENICILLIN USE

Now that penicillin has become relatively plentiful and is about to be offered to the public in large quantities, the possible danger of using it without a physician's prescription should be stressed, Dr. Alexander Fleming, the drug's discoverer, said yesterday at a press conference in the office of Dr. Morris Fishbein at the American Medical association a few hours after his arrival in Chicago.



Dr. Alexander Fleming

Dr. Fleming, British scientist who in 1929 noticed that a certain mold was hostile to certain bacteria and who from this observation correctly concluded that a powerful curative agent might be made from the mold, has been in the United States since May 29 conferring with American doctors and familiarizing himself with the details of American penicillin research and manufacture.

Manufacturers Boost Production

"If a person takes penicillin without medical direction he may take too little and, instead of destroying the germs, make them resistant to penicillin," he said. "A penicillin resistant germ may do no harm to the person who harbors it, but he can pass it on to somebody else who may get pneumonia."

Penicillin's plentifulness, Dr. Fleming said, was the result of the efforts of manufacturers who had found new and better culture mediums for the mold and had discovered the drug could be made in casks thousands of times larger than those originally used. [The United States produced 650 billion units of penicillin in June. Up to a year ago it could be made only in small quantities and its use was restricted largely to the army and navy.]

Even if science should find a way of making penicillin synthetically, and research to that end is still going on, it would be doubtful whether it could be made more cheaply than it is now by natural methods, Dr. Fleming declared.

Not a Cure-All

Penicillin is no cure-all, its discoverer insisted. While it has proved effective against many types of infection, it apparently has no effect on others, he said. Tuberculosis is one of the diseases which does not respond to penicillin, and altho research designed to learn whether other mold products can destroy the tubercle bacillus is in progress, it is too early to say more than that the problem is being studied, Dr. Fleming said.

Dr. Fleming last night was guest of honor at a dinner tendered him by the American Medical association in the Tavern club. Representatives of other medical societies attended.

CHICAGOAN IS NAMED DEPUTY CHIEF OF U.S. STAFF IN CHINA AREA

Col. Richard Smykal, former Chicago construction official who was one of the youngest pre-war regimental commanders in the Illinois national guard, has been awarded the Legion of Merit and assigned as deputy chief of staff of the United States and Chinese combat command, friends learned yesterday.

Col. Richard Smykal

Because of his handling of supply and transportation problems in the Burma campaign, Smykal has been decorated by the Chinese government with the Order of Yun Hwei [Cloud Banner] and the Kuo Chang medal as "hero of the nation and defender of the people." The Legion of Merit citation was recommended by Gen. Stilwell for Col. Smykal's work from Sept. 15, 1943, to May 25, 1945.

Smykal, 45, was cadet colonel of the R. O. T. C. unit at the University of Illinois, enlisted in the Illinois national guard upon graduation, and in 1940 was given command of the 108th quartermaster regiment at 3400 N. Western av. In private life he was president of the Home Builders Supply company in the Merchandise Mart.

SURVIVOR TELLS OF WRITER'S AID AT SHANGRI-LA

Lt. John McCollom, one of the trio rescued a week ago from Hidden valley on New Guinea, disclosed last night that Walter Simmons, Tribune war correspondent, dropped one of the first messages he received from his parents during the 47 days he was marooned in the valley. Simmons made a daily flight over the hidden Shangri-la to report first hand the efforts of the army air forces to rescue the victims of army transport plane crash.

Lt. McCollom

Lt. McCollom, Sgt. Kenneth Decker, of Kelso, Wash., and WAC Corp. Margaret Hastings of Owego, N. Y., were the only persons to escape from the crash. Among those killed was the lieutenant's brother, Robert McCollom. Lt. McCollom stressed his admiration for Miss Hastings' courage in traveling thru hard, hazardous jungle territory despite serious burns she suffered in the crash.

The lieutenant, whose jungle adventure was front page news for weeks, is visiting friends and relatives in Chicago after a trip to see his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Rolla S. McCollom, in Trenton, Mo. He reported on his adventures last evening over radio station W-G-N.

Troops now get more than 2/3 of all Pullman beds!

Here's the situation—explained by the ODT...

OFFICE OF DEFENSE TRANSPORTATION
WASHINGTON, D. C.

OFFICE OF DIRECTOR

Mr. John J. Pelley, President,
Association of American Railroads,
Washington, D. C.

Mr. Champ Carry,
Executive Vice President,
Pullman Company,
Chicago, Illinois.

Gentlemen:

As you both know, the problems in connection with the redeployment of the armed forces of the United States are daily becoming more acute. Furthermore, the return of military personnel from the European theater is ahead of schedule.

An unprecedented number of troops must be moved on the American railroads in the coming months. Any delay in transporting them will prolong the war with Japan. That can not happen.

In order to move the troops promptly and with all the comfort possible, it is necessary that civilian passenger service be sharply curtailed during the coming months.

Consequently, I am today directing that all sleeping car service between points of 450 miles or less apart be discontinued. This action will make available to the armed services, for the transportation of troops, an additional 895 Pullman cars and will give them exclusive use of approximately 66 per cent of the sleeping cars we have in the United States. It will make it possible also to give a greater measure of comfort to our troops when they move to the west coast prior to their embarkation to the Pacific theater.

I am mindful that this action will result in considerable inconvenience to civilians but on the other hand I feel they will cheerfully accept the situation when they realize that it is one way in which they can make another important contribution to the war effort.

Cordially,
J M Johnson

Here's Pullman's answer...

THE PULLMAN COMPANY
PULLMAN BUILDING, 79 EAST ADAMS STREET
CHICAGO

CHAMP CARRY
EXECUTIVE VICE-PRESIDENT

July 9, 1945

Colonel J. Monroe Johnson, Director,
Office of Defense Transportation,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:

Acknowledging your joint letter to the Association of American Railroads and The Pullman Company referring to O.D.T. Order No. 53, ordering the elimination of sleeping car service between points 450 miles or less apart:

The Management of The Pullman Company thoroughly appreciates the increased demands of the various branches of the armed services for sleeping cars and, therefore, will cooperate with you in every way to make this Order effective so that in addition to the more than 700,000 service men and women we have been carrying each month in sleeping cars, thousands more may now ride long distances in comfort.

As you no doubt appreciate, The Pullman Company now has in service, exclusive of the 1,237 troop sleepers furnished by the Defense Plant Corporation, approximately 500 more sleeping cars than it had in service during World War I, and since Pearl Harbor more than half of the Pullman fleet has been made available to the armed forces. As you point out in your joint letter, after Order 53 has been put into effect the armed forces will have approximately 66% of the sleeping cars of the country at their disposal. In addition, a very substantial portion of the accommodations in the cars operated on regularly scheduled trains will continue to be reserved for the Government Reservation Bureaus.

The Pullman Company has and will continue to place all available cars at points specified by the armed services. The choice of the points to be served and the particular units to be moved will remain under the jurisdiction of the armed services.

Yours sincerely,
Champ Carry
Executive Vice President

HERE'S HOW THIS AFFECTS YOU: If you have Pullman reservations on any train leaving this city after 12 o'clock noon, July 15—or if you plan on taking a trip after that time—please check with your local railroad ticket agent to see whether sleeping cars on your train remain in service or have been discontinued in accordance with ODT Order 53.

BY EDWARD BURNS

The first place Cubs, tho chagrined to see a 5 to 0 first inning lead frittered away yesterday in their series final with the Boston Braves, stayed right in there like champs and in the end saw their mettle rewarded by a 6 to 5 victory.

It was the 13th victory for the Cubs in their last 14 starts, and their eighth in the last nine games with the sprightly Braves. Paul Erickson, rescued in Boston last week by Paul Derringer, returned the favor by allowing Derringer to escape the scene yesterday. There was a catch in it, however, for Erickson was the winner of record on both occasions. It was Erickson's fifth favorable decision of the season, four of which have been reached since the Cubs started their big climb on their last eastern trip.

Greet Hendrickson Violently

The Cubs made those five first inning runs off Don Hendrickson before the second Boston putout had been accomplished. The cluster was made on singles by Don Johnson and Bill Nicholson, passes to Phil Cavarretta and Andy Pafko, and singles by Peanuts Lowrey, Paul Gillespie, and Len Merullo. Al Javery then went in, got the side out, and yielded only one hit until the victorious eighth inning, a double which Merullo wasted in the sixth.

Derringer pitched brilliantly against the tail-end Phillies his last time out, after startling flops in Brooklyn and New York. It was believed, of course, the five run lead would inspire Charley Grimm's big ace, especially since the temperature reading in Wrigley field was 60 degrees at game time.

But Derringer soon proved below his Philadelphia form. In the second inning the Cubs' 5 to 0 lead had been cut to 5 to 3 as a result of a double by Joe Medwick, a pass to Chuck Workman, and singles by Carden Gillenwater and Vince Shupe.

Derringer Goes Away

In the third inning the Cub edge was reduced to one run as a result of Tommy Holmes' first double and a single by Medwick. The big right handed star seemed to round into a pitching mood in the fourth and fifth innings, and still was leading, 5 to 4, going into the sixth.

But Derringer walked Workman on four pitches at the start of the sixth and appeared to be tiring badly. Gillenwater then lined a double to left, Workman stopping at third.

Manager Charley Grimm decided to excuse Derringer and called in Erickson. Phil Masi popped to Merullo. Stan Hack, playing in, fumbled Shupe's tap, Workman scoring the tying run. Javery fanned, but Eddie Joost beat out a high bouncer to Merullo, loading the bases. Dick Culler forced Joost — and it was Erickson's game to win or lose.

Erickson braced nicely after Holmes had opened the seventh with a single. He retired the Braves

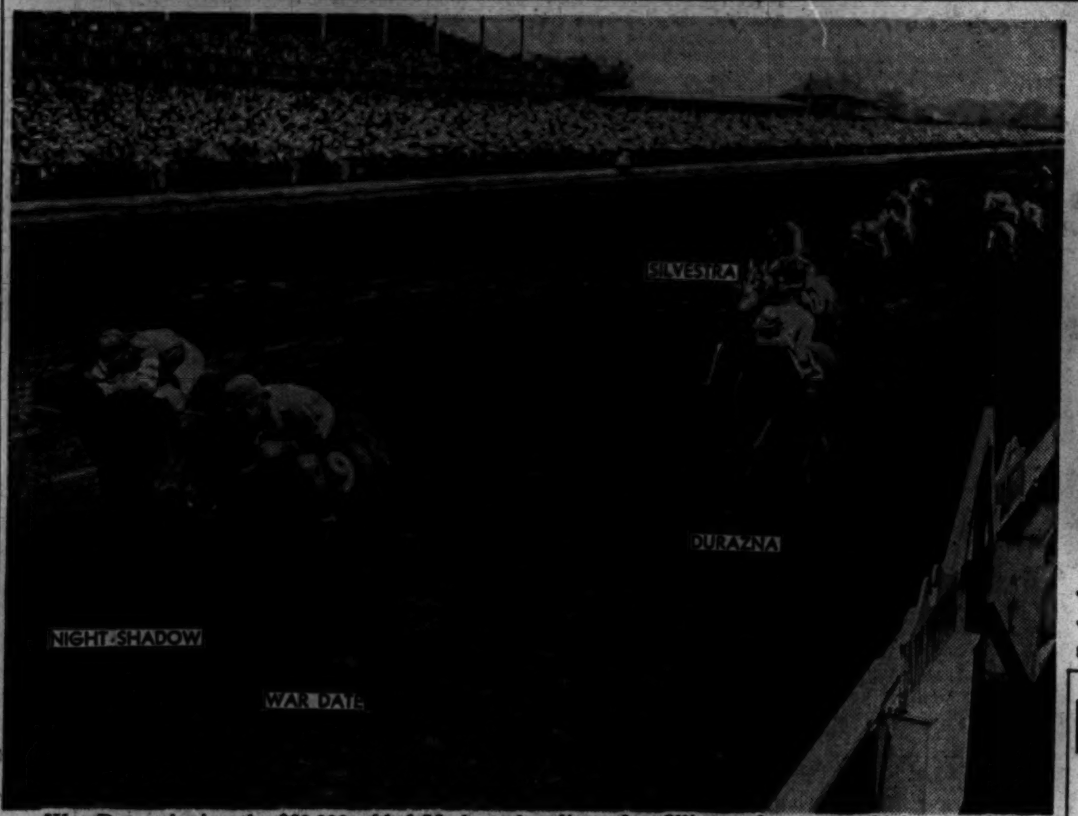
Calumet Farms' Pot o' Luck taking the winner's $67,150 share of the 17th Arlington Classic at Washington Park yesterday afternoon. Twilight Tear, from the same stables, owned by Warren Wright, won last year's Classic. In yesterday's race, Pot o' Luck entered the stretch in fourth place, but finished a length and a quarter ahead of Air Sailor.



War Date winning the $20,000 added Modesty handicap for fillies and mares, which preceded the running of the Classic at Washington Park. War Date came up from behind in the stretch to take the winner's purse.

FIGHTING STEP RUNS THIRD IN $85,450 RACE

Arlington Feature Draws 25,000

BY MAURICE SHEVLIN

Pot o' Luck came thru, just as the majority of some 25,000 chilled spectators bet he would in the 17th running of the $85,450 Arlington Classic yesterday at Washington Park.

The Calumet farm's 3 year old son of Chance Play, ridden by Doug Dodson, was outrun for almost seven-eighths of the mile and a quarter fixture, just as he figured to be, then came on with a smashing drive down the long, long racing strip past the grandstand, to beat Air Sailor by a length and a quarter in the good time of 2:05 4-5 for a sloppy track.

Fighting Step Is Third

Two lengths farther back was the Murlogg farm's Fighting Step, running with Bergolater as the entry of Mrs. Frank J. Murphy and Miss Susan B. Kellogg of Evansville, Ind. Then came Bergolater, the Greentree stable's Dockstader, Brody and Brody's Black Pepper, and J. B. Theal's King Dorsett.

Pot o' Luck's victory enhanced the coffers of the Warren Wright establishment by $67,150 and made up for his gallant failure in the $75,000 added Kentucky Derby when he finished second to Hoop Jr. His triumph also gave Calumet farm its second consecutive Classic. Twilight Tear, the horse of the year in 1944, whipped Old Kentuck and Pensive in last year's running.

Pot o' Luck rewarded his backers with $3.20, $2.40, and $2.20 across the board. Air Sailor, ridden by Georgie Woolf, paid $4 and $2.20. Fighting Step returned $2.20 to show.

Mutuel Handle Is $1,625,574

The mutuel handle for the afternoon was $1,625,574.

Eddie Guerin got King Dorsett out in front from the No. 3 stall and before long had a two length advantage over Air Sailor, which was about the same distance in front of Fighting Step. The latter soon caught Air Sailor and at the half mile mark was only half a length behind with Pot o' Luck running in seventh place a head behind Dockstader, piloted by Al Schmidl.

At the mile it was King Dorsett by a length over Fighting Step, which was being given a chase by Jess Higley aboard Black Pepper. Air Sailor was fourth and Pot o' Luck had just moved up to sixth. As they hit the stretch, Pot o' Luck began to pick up the stragglers.

He went to the front in midstretch and won going away. He negotiated the first quarter in :23, the half in :48, three-quarters in 1:13 3-5, and the mile in 1:39.

Tops Derby Winner's Cut

The overnight entry list of nine was cut early by the withdrawal of Mrs. A. B. Karle's K. Doe-Doe and then Charles S. Howard's Sea Swallow was scratched shortly before the race.

Hoop Jr., owned by Fred W. Hooper of Birmingham and Jacksonville, earned $64,850 in the Derby, $2,300 less than Warren Wright received for his share of the Classic purse. Air Sailor's second place netted his Detroit, owner, Lt. Comdr. T. D. Buhl, $10,000. The Murlogg farm received $7,500 for third and fourth places.

The Modesty handicap, a $20,000 added affair for fillies and mares, with the Classic, made the afternoon's program the richest in Chicago's racing records. It went to the 3 year old War Date, owned by Mrs. Elizabeth N. Graham's Maine Chance farm.

Night Shadow Is Second

War Date, a daughter of War Admiral, ridden by Johnny Adams, scored by half a length over the fast closing Night Shadow, a 5 year old mare owned by Mrs. Robert McGarvey and piloted by Johnny Longden. Brownell Combs' Durazna, with George South up, took the show in a field of 12 starters. The winner earned $15,225 for the New York woman and paid mutuels of $9, $5, and $3.60. Night Shadow returned $4.80 and $3.60, and Durazna paid $5.

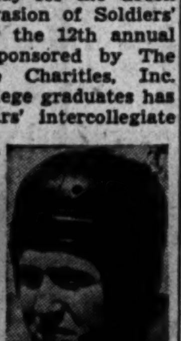
Form players got off to another bad start with the daily double races, Graham Brown's First Pal scoring in the opener at $55.80 and Shady Brook Farm's Sandalinger going over in the second at $20. The double players received $506.40.

JACK DUGGER AND DUB WOOTEN ACCEPT ALL-STAR FOOTBALL BIDS

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Jack Dugger of Ohio State and W. C. [Dub] Wooten of Oklahoma, two of football's great collegiate ends, will be ready for the Green Bay Packers' invasion of Soldiers' field Aug. 30 for the 12th annual All-Star game sponsored by The Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc. Each of these college graduates has played three years' intercollegiate football. Veterans of last year's game with the Chicago Bears, they again have accepted invitations to compete.

Jack Dugger



Dub Wooten

Wooten, a fine pass catching end, was captain of Oklahoma's teams which won the championship of the Big Six conference in 1943 and 1944. In his three seasons at Ohio State, Dugger played on teams which won the Western conference title in 1942 and 1944. The Buckeyes were undefeated and untied last fall, a record for the last 24 years in Ohio State history.

Dugger's assured position as one of the finest of all Ohio State athletes stems primarily from his excellent defensive play at left end on the football team. Weighing 225 pounds and 6 feet 4 inches tall, this 22 year old star was formidable barrier to all enemy attacks at his flank of the scrimmage line. But Dugger also was an adept pass catcher, particularly after he began using contact lenses in the 1943 season. Before this he could not see the flight of the ball. He had the most unusual experience playing in the rain against the Bears last August. The rain and the lights produced a series of rainbows which interfered with his catching passes.

Won Nine Monograms

Dugger is one of the few Ohio State athletes to receive nine varsity letters. In addition to three in football, he also received three in basketball and three in track. He played forward on the basketball team and was renowned as a discus thrower, winning the Big Ten title this year. He also scored points in the Western conference shotput competition.

Dugger, who is married, played at McKinley High school in Canton, O., before matriculating at Ohio State. He was graduated this year with a bachelor of science degree and he majored in social science. He has accepted a position as coach at Lancaster, O., High school and begins

Vicini Defeats Liff 3 and 1 in Midwest Golf

Perseverance paid dividends for Dan Vicini, 31 year old Ottawa, Ill., golfer, who yesterday won the 18th annual Midwest Public Links championship at Lincoln park's Waveland course on his fifth attempt.

Vicini, who had never gone farther than the semi-finals in his previous appearances, captured the title by defeating 16 year old Earl Liff of Twin Orchard in a see-saw match, 3 and 1. The Ottawa war plant worker had established himself as the favorite by defeating Louis Esposito, the defending champion, in Thursday's quarter finals.

Liff Takes Early Lead

The youthful Liff, who is a junior at the Western Military academy at Alton, Ill., provided his older adversary with his toughest match of the tournament. The youngster pulled into a one up lead at nine holes and while he trailed, two up, at the halfway mark he rallied to square the match at 27 holes.

Vicini's putt on the 18th green hung on the lip of the cup, he held up play and after a minute and a

BYRON NELSON AND SAM BYRD BATTLE TODAY FOR P. G. A. CROWN

BY CHARLES BARTLETT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Dayton, O., July 14 — Samuel Dewey Byrd, who used to swing at a baseball when he was working the outfield for the New York Yankees, will attempt tomorrow to take a full cut at the golfing curves thrown by golf's greatest pitcher, John Byron Nelson of Toledo, O. The 36 hole final contest for the 27th National Professional golf tournament was arranged today by Byrd's 7 and 6 conquest of Clarence Doser of Hartsdale, N. Y., and Nelson's 5 and 4 victory over Claude Harmon of Detroit, Mich.

Nelson tomorrow enters his fifth straight assignment in golf's hardest show. He won in 1940, and was runner-up for it in 1939, 1941, and last year.

Today Nelson met the most promising golfer in the country in the person of Harmon, the black haired Georgia native who used to be around Chicago as an assistant at Northmoor over a four year span, was marking his 29th birthday. Claude celebrated same by shooting a 69, three under par in the morning rounds.

Match Ends on 32d Hole

What did that 69 avail him? It left him 3 down at the turn to the nation's top golfer who did himself up a tidy 67. Harmon went out and wangled a par and a birdie out of the first two afternoon holes, and made it a fight thru the late side as he had in the morning round. Nelson then burst loose to assume a 4 up lead at the 27th, closing out the job at the 32d, a hilly job which requires the blood of a goat to ascend.

Byrd, on the other hand, has been quietly working his way thru this gathering of the best hands in the pro side of the game, just throwing the golf necessary to win his way into an argument. Sam was three under par for the morning round, giving him an 8 up advantage against the stocky Doser, who had knocked out three great golfers in Jug McSpaden, Toney Penna, and Ky Laffoon. Clarence didn't have that sort of golf today, coming up with a 78 against Byrd's 69. The contest between them ceased to be that except for a stretch from the 23d thru the 25th, wherein the black haired Doser made matters interesting by blasting out three consecutive birdies.

Sinks 45 Foot Putt

Tomorrow Byrd meets a fellow who has been 31 under par for the 171 holes for which he has labored since the tournament began last Monday morning. In those 171 he has turned in 116 pars, 13 bogeys, 40 birds and two eagles. This afternoon he went to the first tee with a 3 up margin over Harmon, who found his 29th birthday and his attractive wife and 23 month old son the occasions for a smacking 69.

But what do you do with a 69 when you run into a 67?

Harmon replied to that question by running in a par 4 at the 19th, where Nelson, on the level, took a 5 by blowing a three footer after missing the green. Claude then knocked in, on the 217 yard 20th, a 45 foot curler which Nelson stated was one of the greatest putts ever to drop in championship golf.

Greatest Shot of Week

Nelson halved the 21st, then went out and did what a lot of gents in the original starting field of 142 would like to have done. He came to this assignment, 525 yards long over an uphill route, and dubbed Brenner Pass by Bobby Cruickshank, smacked a brassie 30 feet from the cup. Under the conditions, governed by an incessant downpour of rain thruout the entire morning and continuing into the afternoon, it was probably the greatest shot of the week and came close to being an eagle, Byron's putt for an eagle halting inches short of the cup's middle.

Harmon, fifth leading money winner of the recent winter tour and fourth man in the Chicago Victory National Open tourney at Calumet, deserves credit for his morning round, wherein, for one stretch, he played seven holes in 23 strokes and won only one hole. Summaries:

BILL LEE GOES TO BRAVES BY WAIVER ROUTE

Boston, Mass., July 14 (AP)—The Boston Braves said today they had acquired Right Handed Pitcher Bill Lee from the Philadelphia National league club on waivers.

Wildlife Wins Dwyer; Pavot in Last Place

New York, July 14 (AP)—Wildlife won the $50,000 added Dwyer stakes at Aqueduct today as Pavot, the odds-on favorite, finished last, nearly 20 lengths behind the winner.

A crowd of 38,964 saw J. M. Roebling's 3 year old, winner of the Shevlin on Tuesday, get up in the final stride to beat W. L. Brann's Gallorette by a head and William Ziegler's Esteem by half a length in a photo finish.

Ten lengths behind, in fourth and fifth places, came William Helis' entry of Rich's Raft and Pindus. Far in the rear and eased up by Jockey Eddie Arcaro was Pavot, which only three weeks ago won the Belmont stakes by five lengths over Wildlife.

Pavot, winner of $179,040 in going undefeated as a juvenile and which picked up $57,675 in winning the Belmont, previously had been beaten this year in the Withers and Preakness.

Pavot Thru Quickly

Arcaro got Pavot away to an early lead in the mile and one-quarter route. Going down the backstretch the topweighted favorite at 126 pounds opened up a two length advantage but he was done at the end of six furlongs.

Coming around the far turn, Esteem ranged alongside and shot into the lead. Gallorette, the only filly in the race and never far off the pace, took over second, and Wildlife, starting his move, shifted up to third. At the 16th pole it looked like a blanket finish between Esteem and Gallorette, but Ted Atkinson got Wildlife going and with a burst of speed in the last few yards moved out in front.

Wildlife, carrying 116 pounds, picked up a purse of $38,900 in running the route in 2:05 1-5. He now has won five of 19 starts and earned $68,750. Wildlife paid $9.10 to win in

RED SOX DEFEAT TIGERS THIRD STRAIGHT, 7-1

Emmett O'Neill Yields Only Three Hits

Boston, Mass., July 14 (AP) — The Boston Red Sox swept their three game series with the league leading Tigers today, 7 to 1, as Pitcher Emmett O'Neill held the losers to three hits.

It was a strange game that O'Neill pitched. He yielded only one hit in the first seven innings, but he walked 10 men and was in trouble much of the time.

The Red Sox's first run was in the opening inning with two out when George Metkovich walked and came home on Bob Johnson's double.

Johnson's 11th homer of the season started off a three run fourth inning. Then Dolph Camilli walked and after Johnny Lazor and Newsome went out, Bob Garbark was hit by a pitched ball. Camilli and Garbark scored on Eddie Lake's single.

In the eighth Garbark walked, O'Neill singled and Lake beat out a bunt. Garbark scored on Tobin's fly and O'Neill came in on Metkovich's fly.

YANKEES BEAT INDIANS, 4-2

New York, July 14 (AP)—Floyd Bevens pitched the New York Yankees back into the winning column today as he scored his ninth victory, holding the Cleveland Indians to six hits for a 4 to 2 triumph.

Bevens held the Indians scoreless for the first eight innings, but was tagged for three hits in the ninth, and it took a leaping catch close to the pavilion railing by right fielder Bud Metheny to save the game for him.

Shortstop Frankie Crosetti was the Yankee hero. He scored three of the Yankees' four runs, hit his second homer of the season in the third inning, and after opening the eighth with a double, advanced to third on an out and then stole home.

Dodgers Card Triple Header with Braves

New York, July 14 (AP)—Harvey Traband, secretary of the National Baseball league, today announced a triple header, involving Brooklyn and the Braves, for Boston on Friday, Aug. 3.

The program will consist of the game originally scheduled for that day, a contest re-scheduled for that date from a rainy day earlier in the season and the final innings of the suspended June 17 game.

The June 17 game was halted by the Boston Sunday curfew at 6:30 p. m. with Brooklyn trailing, 4 to 1, and one Dodger out in the first half of the eighth inning.

On Sept. 1, 1890, Brooklyn won all three games from Pittsburgh in the first of the three triple headers now on the National league record books. No triple headers ever have been played in the American league.

Frick Sanctions Triple Header

Ford Frick, president of the National league, said that he gave his permission for the three games despite a league rule forbidding more than two games in a day because "there are so few innings in the suspended game left to play and because of the travel restrictions."

He said the Boston schedule permitted no alternative.

The schedule changes:

At Boston: Aug. 3, double header, Brooklyn, preceded by final innings of June 17 suspended game; Aug. 6, single game, Brooklyn; Aug. 8, double header, Chicago; Aug. 14, double header, Pittsburgh; Aug. 15, double header, Cincinnati; Sept. 29, double header, New York.

At Brooklyn: July 29, double header, Boston; Aug. 9, double header, Cincinnati; Sept. 23, double header, Philadelphia.

At New York: July 31, double header, Boston; Aug. 15, double header, Pittsburgh.

At Philadelphia: July 28, double header, New York; Aug. 8, twilight-night double header, Pittsburgh.

At Pittsburgh: July 18, double header, New York; July 21, double header, Boston; Aug. 6, single, St. Louis; Aug. 23, single, Cincinnati.

At Cincinnati: Aug. 3, twilight-night double header, Chicago; Aug. 4, single, Chicago; Sept. 18, single, Boston [game moved down from July 18].

At Chicago: July 18, double header, Brooklyn; July 26, single, Cincinnati; Sept. 5, double header, New York.

At St. Louis: July 16, twilight-night double header, Boston; July 17, game moved up to form July 16 double header; July 18, twilight-night double header, Philadelphia; July 19, twilight-night double header, Philadelphia; July 20, game moved up to form July 19 double header; July 31, twilight-night double header, Cincinnati; Sept. 1, one night game, Chicago; Sept. 18, one night game, Chicago.

BUNKER HILL'S NINE DEFEATS SEAHAWKS, 5-1

Iowa City, Ia., July 14 [Special]—Three runs in the last two innings earned Bunker Hill Naval Air station a 5 to 1 victory over the Iowa Seahawks today. It was the 28th victory against four defeats for the winner and the same number of losses in contrast to 10 triumphs for the loser.

Comiskey Park to Be Site of Negro All-Star Game

Comiskey Park will be the site of the 13th annual Negro all-star baseball game Sunday, July 29. This event, which will bring together the greatest Negro diamond athletes in the country, has been the source of much rivalry between east and west since its origin in 1933. The Home Front

BY WILLIAM BAYLISS

Even trained industrial recreation leaders often are surprised by developments in their programs and by the success of enterprises about which they have been doubtful. An outstanding example is seen in one phase of the women's swimming program sponsored by Mars, Inc.

This particular program, incidentally, is one of the most popular phases of the recreation activities of employes at the big candy manufacturing plant at 2019 N. Oak Park av. When it first was decided to take over the pool and gymnasium facilities of the Nineteenth Century club in Oak Park two days a week, the Mars Central Employes committee, which has charge of this and all other plant recreational activities, wondered what provision could be made so that the girls on the "C" shift, who get thru work at 7:45 a. m., could participate in the program.

Competitors Stay After Class for Additional Gym Work

The girls themselves provided the solution by suggesting a class be held immediately after they get off work. This plan was tried, tho members of the committee were afraid not many of the girls would be interested in an 8 a. m. swimming class. It was, however, a success from the start and now it is the most enthusiastic of any of the Mars swimming groups. Most of the girls not only enjoy the early morning swimming after working their eight hours but also stick around for another hour of gymnasium work, much of it strenuous calisthenics, followed by volleyball and other games.

As Andy Miller, chairman of the Mars Central Employes committee, puts it, "You can't tell until you try it just what idea will click in industrial recreation."

Miss Kaplan Got Start in Riis Park Programs

Jean Kaplan, one of Chicago's leading girl athletes, is employed as a candy wrapper on the "A" shift at the Mars plant. Jean, a product of the Riis park athletic program, is a track enthusiast and at the latest count had earned 46 medals in a variety of events in competition all over the United States. Her specialties are the 200 meter dash and the running broad jump.

Last year Jean won first in the Chicago A. A. U. 200 meter event and also took top honors in the broad jump in the Polish Roman Catholic Union meet, also held in Chicago. Her best mark in the latter event is 18 feet 1¼ inches.

Jean Kaplan of Mars, Inc., displays medals and trophies she has won in some of the nation's leading track meets for feminine athletes.

A HANDBOOK on "How to Set Up Tournaments" is the latest literary contribution of the Industrial Recreation association and should meet with approval from recreation directors and all others who ever have tried to arrange a tournament bracket without being sure just where the byes should be located or what positions should be awarded to seeded players.

These are only a couple of the more elementary matters which this 30 page handbook explains. It goes into full detail on the setting up of single and double elimination and round robin tournaments, not to mention such less common setups as challenge, ladder, pyramid, and king's tourneys. There are graphs and sample brackets on such an extensive scale that it is easy to accept as gospel the statement of John W. Fulton, I. R. A. executive director, that the work is the most complete manual on tournament setups eyer produced.

Cost Is Nil Compared to Benefits Received

The handbook is printed as a service to I. R. A. members, who will receive their copies without filing a request. Nonmembers may get them for $1 each and the book will pay for itself in a short time in the amount of aspirin saved in trying to puzzle out the right way to set up golf, tennis, or softball tournaments or drawing up bowling league schedules.

Illinois Tool Teams Win Two Games; Haber Leads

Thursday night's results of the West Suburban Industrial Softball league gave Illinois Tool a double victory. Danley, which was not scheduled to play Thursday, retained first place in the men's division, its current record being five won and two lost.

BLITZEN LEADS 243 MILE RACE TO MACKINAC

Port Huron, Mich., July 14 (AP)—The Blitzen, a 64 foot cutter, was headed tonight toward Mackinac Island and leading 38 other sail boats in the 21st sailing of the 243 mile Port Huron-to-Mackinac race.

The 39 yachts, the largest number to compete in the classic, were sailing against a slight head-on breeze. Most of the craft were becalmed immediately following the starting gun. Others were making only slight headway thru extensive tacking.

Five hours following the starting gun some of the boats still were in sight of the starting line.

The fleet consisted of 17 boats in the racing-cruising class, 14 in the cruising division, and eight in the racing class.

The Blitzen, skippered by Ernie Grates and Murray Knapp of Detroit, captured the racing cruising "A" flag a year ago. She was followed across the starting line by the Iris of Detroit.

Cronin Leaves Active List to Make Room for Finney

Boston, Mass., July 14 (AP)—Joe Cronin, Boston Red Sox manager, placed himself on the inactive list today to make way for Lou Finney, ready to play again after rejoining the team.

Cubs Defeat Braves, 6 to 5; Rally in 8th

in order in the eighth, after which the Cubs won the game in their half.

Gillespie Smashes One

Lowrey, who had driven in two runs and scored one in the big first inning, singled with one out in the eighth. Then Gillespie, who had functioned in the first inning to drive in a runner and put another on third, lined a terrific double to the right field wall, scoring Lowrey with the winning run. Merullo knocked his third hit and Erickson walked to load the bases. Then Hack, who had supplied two outs in the productive first inning, hit into a double play to end the Cub offensive.

Swell defensive play in the ninth averted a tie—and there was a nearing time limit on the game to enable the Braves to get to St. Louis. Joost opened the ninth with a whizzer which hit the bag at third and bounded into foul territory. Merullo retrieved the ball and threw to Johnson in time to get Joost trying to reach second. Erickson threw out Culler, whereupon Holmes doubled off the center field wall, his third hit. The game ended on Medwick's grounder to Johnson.

Rain Halts Sox and Senators; Play A's Today

BY IRVING VAUGHAN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., July 14 -The White Sox, who earlier in the race figured the weatherman was their worst enemy, greeted him with a smile this afternoon when he intervened in time to prevent the final of their series with the currently throbbing Senators. Having lost six in a row to that team the Sox just naturally were looking around for some kind of aid.

The postponement came after waiting a half hour beyond the 3 o'clock starting time and it doesn't take a Philadelphia lawyer to figure out what made Clark the Old Fox Griffith reveal so much patience. One drop of rain usually is sufficient to make Griff reach for a double header with its better crowd. But his team is going good now and along with this he figured he had a sucker on hand in the shape of the Dykes' wanderers so he wanted to make the best of a soft touch.

Long before the thing was called off today Bill Dietrich had warmed up for combat with Roger Wolff, the fellow who performed in one of the four games the Senators took from the Sox recently in Chicago. The pause of today thus makes Dietrich available along with Orval Grove and Johnny Humphries for the double header in Philadelphia tomorrow but Boss Dykes thinks he might rely on the latter pair and save Dietrich for the Monday night game with the Athletics.

NOTRE DAME'S NINE WINS, 1-0, IN 20TH INNING

Notre Dame, Ind., July 14 [Special] — The Notre Dame summer baseball team defeated Stout field of Indianapolis today, 1 to 0, in 20 innings. Simpson won his own game with a single which scored Phil Dioguardi in the 20th inning. Southpaw Bob Hubbard went the route for the soldiers. Score:

Foxhead, Cantaloupe Girls Open Series Tomorrow

The Foxhead 400 girls softball team will meet the Cantaloupe Girls from Phoenix, Ariz., in a series opening tomorrow night in Shrewbridge field, 74th and Aberdeen. Games will be played every night thru Saturday.

CLOSE TRIBUNE SWIMMING MEET ENTRIES TONIGHT

This is the last opportunity for boys and girls to enter the Chicagoland 100 yard free style swimming meets which will be held next Saturday and Sunday. Entries for the 16th annual races sponsored by The Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., close at midnight tonight. All letters postmarked before this time will be accepted.

The Town club of Chicago, with an entry of seven girls, and the Elgin, Ill., Y. M. C. A., represented by the same number of boys, were among the teams entering The Tribune races several days before tonight's deadline. Others were received later and more will be in the mail today. Despite the absence of many boys who normally would compete in the higher age classes, total enrollment in the 10 age classes [five for boys and five for girls] will equal that in 1944.

Trials will be held Saturday in Cermak pool, Lyons, Ill., and Sherman park, Racine av., and 52d st. On Sunday the qualifying 100 yard races are scheduled for Whealan pool, Devon and Milwaukee avs., and California park, 3901 N. California av.

Have Plans on 1945 Title

The Town club girls, who finished second in the team standings in the 1944 championships, except to qualify all their group for the title races in California park July 29. From the four qualifying centers approximately 120 boys and girls will advance to the championships. Each will receive a gold medal.

The Town club team follows: Class C, Flo Daniel, Gloria Geduldig, and Betty Campbell; Class D, Rosemary Voelker, Fern Clasen, and Mary Lou Benson, and Class E, Ruth Geduldig.

All except one of the Elgin swimmers are under 15 years of age. They are members of the team which won the state Y. M. C. A. championship in 1944 and 1945. Gordon Mullen, who will compete in Class A for boys 11 and 12 years of age, set a state record in the back stroke. He has just recovered from a recent illness and will not be in top condition but there seems to be no doubt but that he will qualify for the finals. The Elgin boys are entered in the qualifying races next Sunday in Whealan pool.

Hold State Crown

Other members of the Elgin team are Roger Ziegler, Class A; Phil Higley Jr., Jim Hudgens, Ronnie Ultes, and Milton Gates, Class B, and Carleton Petersen, Class C. Ziegler and Ultes were on the Elgin relay team which also established a state Y. M. C. A. record.

All contestants in the preliminary races will receive souvenir buttons which THE TRIBUNE has awarded to thousands of boys and girls since the 100 yard tests were inaugurated in 1930 as emblematic of ability. Each winner of a trial race will be given a ribbon badge and those who qualify for the championships will be awarded gold medals.

Mail Cards Tomorrow

The task of compiling the entry list for each of the pools where qualifying races will be held will start tomorrow. A postcard, verifying the location of the pool and furnishing a racing number, will be mailed to each contestant. The card also will admit to the pool without charge.

Contestants will report at all pools at 1 o'clock for assignment to their heats. The first preliminary will start as soon as the clerks finish this task and in no event will the start of the races be later than 2 p. m.

CHICAGO GIANTS PLAY MEMPHIS IN 2 GAMES TODAY

Chicago's American Giants and the Memphis Red Sox renew their Comiskey park series in a double header this afternoon at 1:30. The American Giants won the opener Friday night, 6 to 5, in 10 innings to enhance their second place standing in the second half of the Negro American league's split schedule.

Manager Jim Taylor of the Chicagoans will start Gentry Jessup and Walter McCoy on the mound against Memphis' Bob Keyes and Bill Chatman.

Following the double header, the teams will complete their series in games at Milwaukee tomorrow night, Green Bay Tuesday, Racine Wednesday, and Springfield, Ill., Thursday. The American Giants return to Comiskey park next Sunday afternoon to face the Birmingham Black Barons, league champions the last two years, in a double header.

BREADON SPIKES STORY ON SALE OF FARM CLUB

St. Louis, Mo., July 14 (AP)—President Sam Breadon of the St. Louis Cardinals said today "there is absolutely no truth" in a rumor concerning the sale of the Columbus Red Birds of the American association.

It had been reported that the Philadelphia Phillies were negotiating with the Cardinals for the Columbus property.

"We have no intentions of selling Columbus," Breadon said, "and what's more we have never even thought of it."

Columbus is one of two class AA farm teams owned by the St. Louis club. The other is Rochester of the International league.

CENSUS PROVES ANGLERS DO NOT OVERFISH LAKE

Fishermen Not as Good as They Believe

BY BOB BECKER

Do most fishermen have such little patience in fishing so that they do not give a lake or stream the kind of workout it requires to get a string of fish? Is the efficiency of angling devices [flies, plugs, spinners, spoons, and other gadgets] so low that fishermen as a whole are not taking as much fish per hour as they should.

If the Izaak Walton Debating society wants to make use of a couple of new subjects, there they are. Dr. George W. Bennett, the fish expert of the Illinois natural history survey, is the fellow who started again this question of how good fishermen are in cropping a lake with rod and reel in his recent published bulletin on overfishing.

Bennett makes this announcement which is apt to put many of us fishermen right back on our heels: In 22 artificial lakes in Illinois, most of which could be censused at a time of low production [poor fishing], only one showed a decline in yield associated with intensive fishing.

More Patience Needed

As if that were not startling enough Bennett comes up a Sunday punch when he says that "the efficiency of angling devices [fishing tackle to all us fishermen] is so low, and the patience of the angler so short, that, long before the population of the selected species has been reduced to the danger point below which it cannot reproduce itself, the fishing for that species has become so uninteresting that it is greatly reduced, or it may even be stopped."

Free Copies of Bulletin

Bennett's recent study of overfishing a lake was conducted on a small artificial lake named Onized near Alton, Ill. A creel census was taken and they knew just what was put in the lake and what was left in it when a final check of the fish population was made. If you want to read about it, write the Illinois natural history survey at Urbana, Ill., for a free copy of "Overfishing in a Small Artificial Lake," volume 23, article 3.

Onized lake took an awful pounding from all kinds of fishing methods and gadgets. It was overfished and then some. Yet when they checked the fish population they found the small two acre lake had 47 bass of legal size in it, including 12 fish that ranged from 3 to 6 pounds in weight! This must prove something, probably that bass became well educated in overfishing.

THE LOCKER ROOM

BY CHARLES BARTLETT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Dayton, O., July 14—The Locker Room today is devoted to telling the story of the best conducted golf tournament ever run in this country, the 27th annual party of the Professional Golfers' Association of America. That may seem to be taking in a lot of territory. There was the 1940 National Intercollegiate event in Manchester, Vt., where Bartlett Arkell brought off one of the great amateur tourneys in history. There were the pre-war masters' events in Augusta, Ga. There was a P. G. A. in 1936 in Augusta, Ga. And there was a Western Amateur in Broadmoor, Colo., four years ago this month.

SHOTS OF THE WEEK

The four deuces turned in by Johnny Gibson of Westmoreland in his last qualifying round of the P. G. A. event. They gave him the chance to qualify in the tournament, and a second round of 69.

But this 1945 P. G. A. stands out as one of the most capably handled shows in golf. The efficiency of the officials of the Moraine Country club and of the P. G. A. combined beautifully to produce a thoro going week of golf as it should be run.

Soldiers from Wright Field Serve as Ushers

The Moraine folks just up and did a job of running a golf show as it should be run. Thanks to their proximity to Wright field, the club officials were enabled to call on the visiting soldiers there as ushers. These sergeants and corporals, many of them wearing campaign ribbons, performed a remarkable job of ushering, marshaling and general all-around handling of a golf tournament.

There was a time back there last Monday when assorted members of the press suggested that it might be advisable to have a recapitulation of the leaders in that first 18 holes of qualifying . . . . ordinarily, this summary of the field's standing would have been entirely forgotten for at least a day . . . . Moraine folks not only produced the recap board within 10 minutes but filled out the names and scores of the pacemakers.

Anything You Want to Know? Just Ask

The ingenuity, willingness, and hustle necessary to make the job a complete one, was accomplished by S. C. [Chick] Allyn, Henry Mead, Col. E. A. Deeds, and other National Cash Register executives, Fred Rike and Leigh Metcalf . . . After the day's work was done, the assignment was fulfilled by Henry Cowan, Harry Adams, Toney Penna and Ernie Saybarac, hosts at MacGregor's Tourney club . . . The attendance for the tournament, posted daily, was 24,246 until this evening . . .

ROUNDS OF THE WEEK

The 137 by Mike Turnesa against Byron Nelson in the second round of the National P. G. A. tournament and the 69 by Claude Harmon against Nelson this morning.

If you wanted to know anything about the tournament, if you criticized any angle of it, your wish was carried out . . . That is why oldsters like Gene Sarazen think that the U. S. G. A. should hold an open tournament here after the war . . . It is also the reason why Dayton expects to entertain the next Ryder Cup matches against England.

Oak Park Country Club Contributes $645 to Fund

The Oak Park Country club sent the 1945 Golfer's Dime-A-Round Fund off to a flying start yesterday when their check for $645 was received by Paul M. Corbett, campaign chairman. The plan provides food and entertainment for the Chicago service men's centers. The Chicago park district has turned $3,324.89 over to the fund, an increase of $375.34 over the corresponding period in 1944. Midlothian Country club contributed $225, raised at their recent annual Midlothian Derby.

Reports are slow coming in to the C. D. G. A. headquarters, but the sponsors hope to double the $15,319.26 raised last season.

Hold Annual Soangetaha Open Tourney Next Week

The sixth annual Soangetaha Open golf tournament will be held July 21 and 22 at Galesburg, Ill., over a 36 hole course. Among the pros entered are Dutch Harrison, Willie Goggin, Chick Harbert, and Vic Ghezzi. Entry fees will defray the cost of war bond prizes, while receipts will be donated to the Mayo General hospital to help World War II. convalescents. Harry Popham is the Soangetaha club's pro.

DUGGER, WOOTEN ACCEPT BIDS FOR ALL-STAR SQUAD

teaching there this fall. Dugger is a member of Kappa Sigma fraternity.

Wooten's football record parallels Dugger's but Dub did not participate in any other sport at the University of Oklahoma. He attended Amarillo, Tex., High school, where he played on the team that won the state football championship in 1940. He attained stardom immediately at Oklahoma when he became eligible in 1942 following the then customary freshman year in residence. Cocaptain in 1943, he again led the Sooners last fall. Despite long association with Big Six players, John Kimbrough, one time full back at Texas A. & M., still is his favorite athlete.

Worked Way Thru School

Wooten majored in physical education and worked his way thru the university. He was employed in the oil fields during the summers.

The All-Star squad this year probably will number at least 50 players. Approximately half are civilians and many of these have been honorably discharged from military service. As the squad shapes up now, it has the strength needed to face the champions of the National league in the game which promises to equal those preceding it.

The Packers will make their third appearance in the All-Star series with a past record of one victory and one defeat. In 11 games, however, the professional representatives hold six decisions to three for the college men. Two games have been tied.

While all $6.60 and $5 seats have been sold, excellent locations remain in the $3.60, $2.40, and $1.20 sections. Ninety thousand fans undoubtedly will see the contest and these tickets now may be obtained by writing to the All-Star Ticket Manager, Tribune Tower. Checks should be made payable to THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

HARRY NYE'S GALE CAPTURES 8 MILE EVENT

Harry Nye Jr. sailed his R class sloop, Gale, to first place yesterday off Belmont harbor, in the only yacht race held on the open lake. The Chicago Yacht club's R boat fleet, which Gale led from the start, covered a shortened [8 mile] course due to the fresh northeast wind and heavy seas. Gale sailed the course in 1 hour 13 minutes and 18 seconds. Alert IV., owned by Dr. Theodore J. Morris, was runner-up in 1:15.59, followed by Ed Schnabel in his Yankee in 1:16.31.

The winning crew on Gale, a 39 footer, consisted of Skipper Nye, his wife, Betty, Dr. G. William Cristoph, Ed Pillsbury, and Perry Alford.

Little Haste Wins S Class

Al Miller's 30 foot sloop, Little Haste, won the S [Eagle] class race over a six mile course, in 1:14.21. Bubbling Over, owned by Bert Williams, and Loch Lomond, owned by Robert Cameron, were the only Star boats to start but they withdrew when the high waves slowed them.

Fantome, John L. Gillerlain's R boat, and Romany, Ellis Lewis' S class sloop, both withdrew when some of their sails were torn by the wind.

Five Clubs Race Today

Scheduled races at the Sheridan Shore and Jackson Park Yacht clubs were postponed. Lawson, won the first two races sailed yesterday at the Burnham Park Yacht club in the club's elimination series for the Lake Michigan junior sailing championships, to be held next month at Milwaukee. Young Skipper Lawson and his crew, Fred Weber and Hugh Ferguson, defeated crews led by Charles Berc and Sheldon Briggs, in that order. Lightning class sloops were sailed on a two mile course inside Burnham Park harbor. Summaries:

Hold Amateur Bicycle Title Races Today

A 25 mile point race for senior riders will feature the second half of the Illinois State amateur bicycle championship races this morning in Sherman park, 53d and Racine avs. At least 20 riders will face the starter in the long grind in which sprints for points are held at the finish of each five miles.

Before competing in the distance event, the riders will race for the one mile championship in which there are a half dozen boys picked as the favorites. Heading the list is Nick Steder of the Edison Park Wheelmen, who took both the five and 10 mile events last Sunday; George Abt of the George F. Barrett Athletic club; Fred Pesek, C. Y. O. star, and Sgt. Clare Young, formerly of Detroit and now stationed at Great Lakes. In the Senior girls class, Peggy Barber, Illinois and City ice skating champion is the favorite but the Barrett Athletic club rider may be hard pushed by Marge Glauser of the C. Y. O.

Included on the program are the semi-finals and finals in the Stock Bike races for boys under 15 years of age from which three boys will qualify for the nationals scheduled for Aug. 17, 18, and 19 in Humboldt park. This is the first time the national championships have been decided in this event.

EQUALS SUFFOLK RECORD

Boston, Mass., July 14 (AP)—Robert B. Carroll's 3 year old Beldine equaled the track record at Suffolk Downs today as he won the $5,000 Paul Revere handicap by a length and three-quarters.

A crowd of 23,543 saw the Colt run the mile and a sixteenth in 1:43 1/5.

Mrs. Weston W. Adams' side boy, top weighted under 126 pounds, finished second, six lengths in front of Rumstick Lodge, Inc.'s Cactus Foot, which had three lengths on the fourth finisher, Sandy Lane Farm's dinner party. Beldine, a gelding, carried 114 pounds, paying $9.80, $4.60, and $3.80.

SEA SNACK WINS RANCOCAS

Camden, N. J., July 14 (AP)—Christiana stable's Sea Snack today won the $10,000 Rancocas Stakes by two and one-half lengths over H. E. Jackson's Red Shoes in the 6 furlong feature for 2 year old fillies at Garden State Park.

Red Shoes outdistanced the favorite, Arnold Hanger's Twenty Thirty, by half a length. Teardrop, Munda, and Transfer completed the field in that order.

The Snack was Jockey Ken Scawthorn's third winning mount of the day. He earlier rode Astrie Adroit and Miss Kalola.

The winner paid $13.80 after running the six furlongs in 1:14 1-5. She earned $9,925. A crowd of 21,838 poured $1,544,799 thru the mutuel machines.

Sherrer and Parsons Bout to Head Card

Jimmy Sherrer, Milwaukee welterweight, will be in quest of his eighth straight Chicago victory when he meets Bill Parsons of Danville, Ill., in an eight round bout in Marigold outdoor arena tomorrow night. Four of Sherrer's achievement were knockouts, the most spectacular of which was his first round finish of O'Neil Bell of Detroit in the Stadium on March 26. He scored a first round knockout over Gene Gudgill of Dayton in Milwaukee two weeks ago which was equally sensational.

Gudgill outpointed Sherrer in a previous meeting, the setback being one of two Jimmy has suffered since turning professional a year ago. His other conqueror was Sgt. Savior Canadeo, who was floored for the count in one round by Parsons in Milwaukee last month.

Charles Wells, Harry Green's welterweight protege of Gary, will oppose Willie Edmonds of Grand Rapids in a six round semi-windup tomorrow. Four round events will be between Ramey McKnight, Milwaukee welterweight, and Dick McClure, Benton Harbor; Gene Roberts, Danville bantamweight, and Georgie Chapman, also of Benton Harbor, and Abner Teague, Benton Harbor heavyweight, and Bill Sullivan, Chicago.

Johnny Bratton, former city Golden Gloves lightweight champion, and Melvin Johnson have been matched to meet in Promoter Mitchell Standler's first main event when boxing is resumed in White City Friday night. . . . Joe Feroni and Leo Kirilenko will be pitted against Louis Klein and Gordon Hessel in an Australian tag team match featuring a wrestling show in White City tomorrow evening.

BEHRENS ENTERS OPEN NET MEET AT RIVER FOREST

Heading the list of contestants in the junior division will be Buddy Behrens of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., national boys' champion in 1944, who now has graduated to the junior ranks; Tom Malloy of Panama City, Fla.; Ed Chew, El Paso, Tex.; Herbert Flam and Hugh Stewart of Los Angeles, and Ed Davis of Baton Rouge, La.

NEW WALKOUTS SWELL STRIKE IDLE TO 48,000

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS]

War production and some civilian services suffered yesterday as strikes, some of them new, in more than 20 cities kept approximately 48,000 idle, but 16,500 Firestone Tire and Rubber company workers at Akron, O., voted 3 to 1 to return to work tomorrow.

The two week dispute of CIO United Rubber Workers at Firestone ended when the membership voted to abide by a WLB directive ordering their return tomorrow. The WLB order threatened loss or revocation of vacation, shift premium and maintenance of membership benefits, previously granted the workers, if its order was not obeyed. The strike was caused by a dispute over contract renewal.

In Toledo, O., the discharge of one employe made 7,200 idle. Sixty-five hundred CIO auto workers at Spicer Manufacturing company struck over the employe's discharge and made idle other workers at Willys-Overland Motors for lack of parts.

Three thousand AFL Progressive Mine Workers at Springfield, Ill., remained out because of the meat shortage, and the union president, John Marchiando, predicted 11,000 others would join the walkout tomorrow. The OPA said it might adopt an experimental plan giving each miner 50 extra red points and a pound of sugar a month.

Approximately 3,316 CIO United Mine Workers, part of the 9,491 miners idle thruout the country, remained out at four Jones & Laughlin Steel company mines in Pennsylvania in a dispute over shift rotation.

VAST POST-WAR STEEL MARKET IS PREDICTED

Light Metal Rivalry to Be Met

Tho facing more competition from the light metals and plastics, the post-war outlook for the steel industry is favorable, L. S. Hamaker, sales executive for Republic Steel corporation, said yesterday. He based steel's favorable position in part on the vast shortages that have developed in consumer goods, because more than 600 articles of steel and iron have not been made since 1942.

"It must be admitted that light metals will be a larger factor in our future calculations than they have been in the past," Hamaker said. "Aluminum capacity has been multiplied seven times since 1939 and magnesium capacity 70 times. To our way of thinking, such capacities are highly abnormal for any conceivable requirements in the early post-war years."

May Displace Much Steel

He said that aluminum capacity is about 1½ million tons a year and on a one for two use basis this may displace 3 million tons of steel. This would be a serious, but not a staggering loss to the steel industry which has a 100 million ton annual capacity.

"Aluminum in the ingot is 15 cents per pound," he continued. "In fabricated form, it is 35 cents to $1 a pound. This is easily 10 times the cost of steel."

Hamaker said that because of the limited forms in which magnesium can be fabricated, "as well as its relatively poor resistance to corrosion," it does not seem likely it will be used widely as a structural metal in the foreseeable future. The metal costs 20½ cents a pound in the ingot, 33⅓ per cent more than aluminum. Annual production will approximate 265,000 tons. Magnesium will have many applications, he admitted.

May Cut Nonferrous Sales

"It seems to us that the light metals will have much more impact on the markets for some of the nonferrous metals, such as zinc, copper, and brass, than on steel," he said.

In regard to plastics, which have had a spectacular development in the last few years, he believed that they will sell as much steel as they displace. This is because where strength is required many plastic products are being molded around a steel core. He added that no one has developed a plastic molding powder that sells for less than 14 or 15 cents a pound and the transparent and translucent types sell for more. Plastics are inferior to metals in sheer strength, impact, and flexural strength, he said.

Altho plastics have their advantages, such as adaptability to built-in color, surface permanence in ordinary use, resistance to corrosion and good electrical insulating properties, they are not expected to have an adverse effect on the steel business.

Favorable factors affecting the future of the steel industry included:

The automobile industry will enter peace with the largest demand backlog in its history. In 1941, when 6 million persons were unemployed, Americans drove 29 million cars. By Dec. 31 the number will probably be 22 million or less. It is expected that with peace 33 or 34 million will want cars.

Home Needs Ton of Steel

Estimates have been made that 1 million homes a year will be built for 10 years and at least a ton of steel goes into even a small home.

The railroads have almost worn out under the heavy war traffic and will have to replace much of their facilities. In addition they are planning new trains to meet competition.

The farmers will come out of the war in the best financial position in history and will offer a vast market for products made of steel.

Highway development and replacement after the war offers a vast market for steel.

Finally, export markets will want almost unlimited quantities to replace war damage.

New York, July 14 (AP)—The stock market this week advanced, but trade was slow thruout. It was the first week since that ended April 7 in which there was not a million share day. The Associated Press 60 stock average was up 0.7 at 66.7.

The market was most active and strongest Monday when "blue chips" attracted strong investment demand. American Telephone climbed six points to 183¼, a peak since 1937. The stock's dividend yield of nearly 5 per cent and the belief it was "behind" the market inspired purchasing.

EXCHANGES RECESS

Stock exchanges closed yesterday under the summer Saturday schedule will reopen tomorrow.

Sears Roebuck, United States Steel, Bethlehem, and Chrysler helped the upswing. The averages made their largest advances since May 28, but turnover was smallest since April 10.

Idle cash seeking income continued to buoy favorites Tuesday. Trends wavered Wednesday and blame for the selling was placed partly on growing labor disputes, doubts regarding the British election results and further talk of anti-speculation moves by Washington.

A number of special and secondary offerings were readily sold Thursday and sentiment improved. Accounts were trimmed Friday for protection over the long week-end.

AIR TRANSPORT SHARES

Common stocks of leading air lines at prices reached in bull markets have generally been regarded as speculative, mainly because of the market's tendency to discount a promising future for the industry. Growth prospects were often more of a stimulant to speculation in the air transport group than actually developed earning power.

At no particular time has it been possible to determine that air line shares were overdiscounting future developments which clearly pointed to continued expansion in traffic volume. But wide price swings of the past, with air line stocks especially susceptible to declines in bear markets, suggest that such issues at the recent record prices are not suitable for investors who cannot afford to assume a large measure of risk.

The rise in recent years has carried the stocks of major air lines far above tangible book values. Inasmuch as air service rates are subject to review by the civil aeronautics board, the companies' actual investment may some day receive more attention than now as a rate base. In the present stage of the industry's development, a narrow limitation on profits to a "reasonable return" would probably not be feasible as a matter of public policy.

Large additional capital investment is required for contemplated expansion of services and for purchase of the new larger, faster planes. It has been estimated that during the next five years the lines will spend 750 million dollars for new equipment.

Rapid growth in traffic has fulfilled earlier expectations. Revenue passenger miles flown in the United States last year totaled 2,262,782,000, compared with 1,632,464,000 in 1943 and 677,673,000 in 1939. It is predicted that improved service, additional schedules, and reduced fares will open a vast new field of domestic and overseas air travel. The CAB has been swamped with applications for additional route mileage.

A heretofore undreamed of volume of overseas passenger traffic may be developed, some aviation leaders predict. Millions of persons who could not consider a trip abroad during a two weeks' vacation will suddenly become potential world travelers, it is said. The post-war era is expected to bring the general adoption by major domestic lines of four engine aircraft. One such plane in 1944 flew from Burbank, Cal., to Washington, D. C., in six hours, 58 minutes.

Giant six engine planes with a cruising speed of 340 miles an hour will carry 204 passengers overseas. Commercial possibilities of the adaptation of jet propulsion power with speeds above 500 miles are being explored.

Industry leaders also recognize that competition will be severe and that "expense account" traveling will diminish after the war.

Fish Dealers Lift Boycott in Price Accord

A five day boycott against one of the Chicago fish market's largest wholesale houses ended yesterday when retailers and wholesalers settled their differences.

E. M. Concannon, president of the Chicago Wholesale Fish Dealers' association, said: "We have agreed to try and hold down prices. This is in line with the office of price administration's policy of the fish industry coöperating with the overall effort of price control."

Other developments included a report by Max Granat, business agent of the Chicago Retail Fish Dealers' association, that approximately 20 retailers were discussing shutting down their stores for two weeks because "they can't get sufficient quantities of fish to meet consumer demand."

Several Sign to Close

Granat said several retailers had signed a petition to close and had handed it to the association for consideration.

The boycott, ordered by the retailers' group last Monday night against the Lakeside Fish and Oyster company, 657 W. Fulton st., was a protest against the entire market, Max Block, president of the retailers, said. Block had charged that wholesaler prices had been "too high," and that tie-in sales "were a common practice." Concannon denied the charges of tie-in sales at the meeting.

Lakes Fish Under Curb

The meeting ended a week of controversy in the fish market during which OPA announced that all fish caught in the Great Lakes will be placed under price control in a few weeks. Salt water fish have been under price control.

Both Concannon and Block objected to OPA's action asserting that the government agency "would be unable to police the regulation."

Fresh water fish imported from Canada have been under OPA control, but recently industry and OPA spokesmen admitted the controls had broken down and violations had been widespread.

HEDGING SALES FORCE WHEAT PRICES LOWER

Hedging pressure and week-end evening up pushed wheat future prices lower yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade. The close was at losses of ⅜ to 1⅜ cents a bushel. Rye developed independent strength under the leadership of the July option and closed ⅜ to 1 higher. Corn held at ceiling prices, but oats declined ⅜ to ½. Barley ended ⅜ lower to ⅜ higher.

Selling of wheat futures attributed to mills and southwestern interests was larger than recently and commission house support was smaller.

There was no pressure on rye and brokers said the July delivery acted tight. Part of the strength came from buying induced by shipments of more than 400,000 bushels to the east last week, including 264,000 bushels via lake to Buffalo.

Large profit taking sales were responsible for the easier undertone in the oats market, brokers said.

COAL SHORTAGE MAY CUT SUPPLY FOR INDUSTRIES

Washington, D. C., July 14 (AP)—Solid Fuels Administrator Ickes said today that the soft coal shortage may force a cut of 20 per cent in supplies to industry, except railroads and utilities. The prospective production deficit under requirements for the fuel year which started April 1 is estimated at 25 million tons, Ickes said.

U. S. PLANS GO-AHEAD FOR 400,000 PRIVATE HOMES IN NEXT YEAR

Washington, D. C., July 14 (AP)—The government, in a modest start toward large scale post-war construction, is planning to give the go ahead for 400,000 privately financed new homes during the next 12 months, National Housing Administrator Blanford said today.

"This doesn't approach the goal of 1,260,000 houses which we hope eventually to reach, but that is a peace time goal and we are still deep in the war," he said.

The housing planned includes all categories—for migrating war workers, for war congested areas [no occupancy restrictions], and for veterans and relief of hardship cases.

NEW BEEF RULE HELD BLOW TO CHICAGO STOCK

Packers Contend East Gets More

BY ARNOLD ERICKSON

Chicagoans probably will get less beef to eat, instead of more, as a result of the government's lifting of all slaughter quota restrictions from noninspected packing plants which meet the new federal specifications, Chicago packers said yesterday. The new program provides unlimited production of beef in packing plants not under federal inspection. Heretofore these were restricted by a quota system used to channel more meat into the packing plants which fill orders for the military.

All cattle slaughterers inside the city limits are under federal inspection and their production will suffer from the competition for volume of noninspected outside plants, distribution experts said. The ending of quotas for many of these plants will relieve the shortage in some areas away from the city.

Other Benefits Offset

The shift away from inspected plants may offset the benefit to city consumers expected from the recently announced reduction in beef buying for military and other government agencies. The reduction already had helped some parts of the country to the extent that there was more beef available than red points in a few packing centers near the live stock producing regions.

Allowing unlimited production for many plants which are too widely scattered for proper policing by the price administration throws a protecting arm around many illegal market operations, it was said. Black markets in beef are spreading rapidly in packing plants thruout the eastern part of the country, and a larger share of the Chicago cattle supply is going into those channels, packers said.

"Black markets are gnawing from within the industry like cancer, and are just as difficult to detect," said a spokesman for one Chicago plant. "Unless they are checked, law abiding packers will be forced to quit."

Some Violators Cautioned

The cautious violators avoid glaring discrepancies and are more to be feared by legitimate packers than the blundering illegal market operators who sooner or later are cornered, Chicago packers said.

They raise grades or carcass yields or both just enough to keep their juggled cost records within the government compliance range to protect their federal subsidy and sufficiently to give them the edge over the honest buyers in the live cattle market. This gives them a tonnage advantage, because they are able to pay more for cattle than buyers who must grade and weigh honestly. The government actually is paying subsidy to such violators, it was said.

Chicago slaughterers the first two weeks of July obtained only 49 per cent of the cattle received at the stock yards, the smallest percentage on record for July. Outside buyers purchased 51 per cent, the majority billed east for slaughter.

Government Seeks to Show A. & P. Helped to Fix Prices

Danville, Ill., July 14 [Special]—Representatives of organizations described as interested in the retail prices of food were called by the government as a price fixing charge against the New York Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company was brought into the anti-trust trial in Danville federal District court this week.

The government alleged that the A. & P., together with its competitors, became a member of trade associations organized in various states to promote passage of "state unfair practices acts," prohibiting sales below cost, and that upon the passage of such acts, the associations sought to enforce them. The prosecutors alleged that the result was a series of agreements, state by state, fixing retail and wholesale prices of food in violation of the Sherman act.

Membership Is Established

Membership of W. F. Leach, A. & P. Atlantic division president, in the Philadelphia Food Distributors' association was established when the association's executive secretary, Fred S. Davis, Wynnewood, Pa., testified that the original members signed a roll upon the formation of the group in 1935. Special Atty. Margaret Brass of the department of justice, read Leach's name from the membership list. Reading from the minutes of association meetings, Miss Brass brought out that Leach had served as president and vice president. It was shown that the association had members in New Jersey and Delaware as well as Pennsylvania.

The goverment attorney then read from the minutes of the March 30, 1938, meeting that 400 complaints of violation of a state fair sales act, which prohibited below cost sales, had been handled thru the association.

A refusal by Leach to join the association at first was related by Davis on cross-examination by Defense Atty. William Acton. Davis said Leach had told him that if the A. & P. joined there could be no fixing of prices because it was against company policy, but that when Davis told him it was a matter of good will with other retailers, A. & P. joined. Davis told the court that his association had no power to enforce any laws and could only suggest that below cost selling be stopped.

Termed Against Chain's Policy

Altho A. & P. was not a member of the Miami Retailers Grocery association, representatives of the chain did occasionally attend weekly meetings from 1937 to 1941, Ben Williams, Miami, former secretary of the association, testified. Williams said that the association was formed primarily to prevent below cost selling and that a list of prices set weekly at the meetings was sent to A. & P. He said the chain neither agreed nor disagreed to go along, but that their prices were usually in keeping with fixed prices.

On cross-examination Williams said he was told by A. & P. when the chain was asked to become a member, that it was against company policy to belong to such groups. He said that he sometimes did find A. & P. prices higher or lower than prices on the fixed list. The defense brought out that subjects other than prices were discussed at meetings.

People and Events

J. C. Ellington, real estate agent of the Milwaukee railroad, yesterday was appointed industrial commissioner of this railroad, a newly created position. I. C. DESIGNS NEW TYPE ICED CARS TO RIVAL PLANES

The Illinois Central railroad yesterday announced plans to build an experimental refrigerator car of aluminum and glass in answer to advocates of high speed air transport for perishable freight.

W. A. Johnston, president, has approved immediate construction of an ultra-modern dual purpose refrigerator car on plans perfected by the refrigerator car committee of the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable association, it said. The car, expected to be ready for testing early in October, will be constructed in the McComb, Miss., shops of Illinois Central.

The car will be built of aluminum alloys for lightness and will be completely insulated with fiber glass. It will weigh approximately 14,000 pounds less than the standard refrigerator car.

Johnston said it may be possible to maintain temperatures low enough in the car to move for long runs frozen foods as well as the usual perishable products.

PROPOSE NEW WORLD PARLEY ON FREE TRADE

Delay Bretton Vote, 4 Senators Urge

Washington, D. C., July 14 (AP)—A general international economic conference to consider "practical steps" to achieve freedom of international trade was suggested today by four senators. Until one is held, consideration of the Bretton Woods agreements for an international monetary fund and bank should be deferred, they said.

The four, Senators Taft [R., O.], Millikin [R., Colo.], Butler [R., Neb.], and Thomas [R., Idaho], outlined their views in a minority report as members of the senate banking committee.

Oppose Committee Approval

They voted in committee against legislation for United States participation in the 9 billion 100 million dollar international bank and the 8 billion 800 million monetary fund. Already passed by the house, the measure was approved 14 to 4 by the committee and will come up in the senate Monday.

Formulated at a conference of representatives of 44 nations at Bretton Woods, N. H., last summer, the agreement calls for United States subscription of 3 billion 175 million to the bank's capital and 2 billion 750 million to the monetary fund.

The committee majority in an earlier report said the program "will help preserve peace by making possible an expansion of international trade."

"Wastes Money, Does Nothing"

But the minority asserted "the net result of the present bill is to waste our money and accomplish nothing."

"When the world is stabilized, a general stabilization fund may be desirable," it said. "It could probably be much smaller than the one now proposed and it should, of course, be confined definitely to stabilization operations. We question whether the government should ever guarantee international investment."

The four senators asserted the fund will "wholly fail" to accomplish the declared objectives and will "amount to nothing more than international loans of 2 billion 750 million dollars for which we shall get nothing in return."

Acts in Effect as a Loan

"The fund operates by permitting each member to deposit its paper currency in the fund and take out in exchange the currency of some other country," they said. "This, in effect, as admitted by the treasury, is a loan to the nation which makes the deposit, secured by that nation's paper currency.

"Under present world conditions, the most sought after currency will be the 2 billion 750 millions deposited by the United States. If all the nations choose to draw dollars, the dollars in the fund could be exhausted during the second year."

$78,390 'MELON' CUT BY TAX FREE HOUSING HERE

Service Charges Divided Among Revenue Groups

Chicago housing authority, its rent coffers swollen by high war time wages and employment and by exemption from taxes under state law, is splitting a $78,390 dividend for service charges among five local taxing bodies. Service charges are in reality supplementary payments in lieu of taxes, but were called service charges to allay fears of some of the taxing bodies that they might be accused of accepting such payments in lieu of taxes.

Milton Shufro, assistant executive secretary, said the CHA had delivered checks for $28,000 to the city, and for another $27,390 to the city, school board, forest preserve district, sanitary district, and park district.

$23,000 More Awaits Split

An additional $23,000 representing "supplementary service charges" is still to be divided among all the taxing bodies except the city, Shufro said.

Last year the CHA was authorized by the federal public housing authority to raise its service charge to 10 per cent for any year after the fiscal year ending June 30, 1944. It was the first time supplementary payments had been authorized.

Under the order the CHA proffered checks amounting to $27,390 to the five taxing bodies as supplementary payments on the Julia C. Lathrop, Jane Addams, and Trumbull Park housing projects, which the CHA leases from the federal government.

The $28,000 additional paid the city and the $23,000 still to be split among the other taxing groups are for supplementary service charges on the Ida B. Wells, Frances Cabrini, Robert Brooks, and Bridgeport homes, and Lawndale Gardens, all owned by CHA.

Civic Federation Caustic

Comparing the payments with the revenue the properties would yield were they not tax exempt, Douglas Sutherland, executive secretary of the Civic federation, said, "That won't butter much bread, but I'm glad they're disposed to do something to help the poor taxpayer."

The CHA in 1943 was billed for $773,610 in taxes, and offered instead a service charge payment of $55,149. This County Assessor Clark and County Treasurer Schlaeger refused to accept on the ground that there was no legal substitute for taxes. Last year the authority's tax bills climbed by about $1,300, and it offered a service charge of $66,505.

"The great disparity between what was offered and what the taxes would have been if these properties were privately owned and managed demonstrates that housing should be carried on by private management," Sutherland said.

8 AIR LINES SIGN TO REPAY CITY FOR TERMINAL

Eight major air lines have signed a contract with the city under which they agreed to pay for a $700,000 terminal building at Chicago airport, Public Works Commissioner Hewitt announced yesterday. Ground already has been broken for the structure, which is designed to provide facilities for at least the first five years of Chicago's development as a world air hub after the war.

The air lines, all of which now are users of the airport, are American Airlines, Braniff Airways, Chicago and Southern Air Lines, Eastern Air Lines, Northwest Air Lines, Pennsylvania Central Air Lines, Transcontinental and Western Air, and Northwest Air Lines.

Hewitt said the contract saves $500,000 on the cost of $1,200,000 involved in an agreement drawn April 1, 1942, but never signed by the lines. The city will receive additional income of $20,000 a year, he said, and will be relieved of the $150,000 a year expense of janitor service which will be provided by the carriers.

VETERANS—OUR PLAN
In an effort to conscientiously help disabled veterans obtain their full benefits under the G. I. Bill of Rights, we developed a plan whereby we were able to furnish complete loan, priority, and building service without requiring the veteran to make any deposit whatsoever, or in any way to obligate himself. Since first offering this plan 2 months ago, it has been our privilege and pleasure to start some 20 veterans on their way toward satisfied home ownership, and the experience of freedom in its highest sense. Our organization is now able to handle more applications. Please phone for an appointment.

Michigan

FOR SALE.

One mile frontage on the Tahquamenon, the original Hiawatha river in Luce County, about eight miles west of the Upper Falls of the Tahquamenon, the greatest falls between the Rocky Mountains and Niagara; and the lower falls which rank among the most picturesque cascades in the whole country. The entire Tahquamenon District is a happy hunting ground. It is the finest hunting country in all Michigan and the river country is very beautiful. Thousands of deer and other wild game live in the timberland along this river, and drink of its waters. There are muskrats, beaver, otter, ducks and geese in the river, and fishing is good. It is not a farming district and will always be the finest wilderness country in Michigan. Such tracts are very scarce and would give you and your friends much happiness and good health in the years to come. The price is low and if you want something of this write for full details at once or come up to see it.

Profitable Farm Production
540 ACRES 45 MILES S. W. OF CHGO.

Productivity is the most important factor influencing the value of farm land. Drainage, erosion, and fertility most greatly effect productivity. Sugar Grove Farm is well tiled and erosion is not present. Fertility on the 480 acres of the best corn belt soil has been maintained and constantly improved thru the liberal application of phosphate, lime, commercial fertilizer, and farm manure. This unusually productive property has changed hands but once in 100 years and, without frills, is laid out to obtain the maximum results in practical farming, live stock raising and feeding, truly a farmer's farm. Modern farm houses, complete and up to date equipment plus an attractive owner's home make this an ideal investment. Forty minutes by rail from Chicago's loop. REALTY SALES FOR CASH SHOW LARGE ADVANCE

Single Home Purchases Lead the Market

All-cash deals in the purchase of Chicago real estate are increasing, Harold Bukoll, chief escrow officer of the Chicago Title and Trust company, said yesterday. In his six months report on real estate sales closed thru the escrow department, transactions in which the purchaser furnished the entire cash consideration without negotiating a loan showed a 76.15 per cent increase above a year ago.

The dollar value of the all-cash transactions increased 117.40 per cent. Of all sales handled thru the escrow department 38 per cent were made without loans of any kind, indicating a substantial amount of cash is held by the public.

Cook County Sales Rise

Real estate sales in Cook county handled thru the escrow department increased 5.7 per cent in volume in the six months. The most activity was shown during the first quarter when there was an increase of approximately 28 per cent above a year earlier. In the second quarter activity slowed down and there was a decrease of 2.62 per cent from last year.

The largest activity was in the single home field, accounting for 42 per cent of the transactions. Apartment house escrow deals were 32 per cent compared with 38 per cent a year ago; commercial properties 19 per cent compared with 17 per cent, and vacant property 7 per cent compared with 6 per cent.

Transactions within the city accounted for 94.87 per cent of the apartment house deals, 59.98 per cent of the houses, 89.84 per cent of the commercial properties, and 17.03 per cent of the vacant.

Activity Is Well Divided

"Activity in apartments and single family homes was pretty evenly divided among the north, south, and west sides," Bukoll said. "The majority of the commercial transactions involved west side property, while nearly half of the vacant property sales took place on the south side.

"The greatest activity in suburban apartment, single family houses, and vacant property occurred in the northern suburbs, with the suburbs to the west taking the lead in activity among commercial properties. Southern suburbs showed the least realty activity."

Commercial property sales involving more than $100,000 increased 165 per cent in number and 228 per cent in dollar volume. Apartment house sales in excess of $100,000 declined 14.81 per cent in number and 13.63 per cent in dollar volume.

Sales of single family residences increased 54.77 per cent and two apartment buildings declined 13.76 per cent from last year.

MORTGAGE DEBT OF COUNTRY IS CUT 8 PER CENT

The country's mortgage debt declined 8 per cent in 1944, L. E. Mahan, president of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, said yesterday. He attributed the decrease from $34,421,432,000 in 1943 to $31,656,850,697 last year to the high national income which gave borrowers the funds to pay off their mortgages.

The federal government, which has been in the business of acquiring mortgages almost longer than it has in any other field of private enterprise, is slowly getting out, Mahan said. At the end of 1943, the federal government owned 10.4 per cent of all city and farm mortgages outstanding and last year the total declined to 9.4 per cent.

Government Mortgages Dip

Mortgages held by government agencies declined 19.2 per cent from $3,563,232,000 to $2,980,715,287. The Federal National Mortgage association and the Federal Farm Mortgage corporation showed the biggest decreases, 19.2 per cent each. The Home Owners' Loan corporation reported an 18.5 decrease on its loans.

In the farm mortgage field, the Federal Land banks followed the Federal Farm Mortgage corporation in showing the largest loss of mortgages owned, Mahan said. These banks owned $1,209,646,000 at the end of last year, against $1,452,886,000, a drop of 16.7 per cent.

Private Interests Reduced

Despite the losses by the government, private interests failed to gain. Instead they showed a decline of 7.1 per cent. Mortgages owned by private lenders and institutions last year totaled $28,676,135,410, compared with $30,858,200,000 a year earlier. The losses of individual investors were estimated at 20 per cent with most being "paid off," Mahan said.

Life insurance companies, building and loan associations, and fraternal societies showed gains of 0.2 per cent, 4.3 per cent, and 3.1 per cent respectively. Mutual savings banks and commercial banks, however, showed losses of 2.8 per cent and 3.9 per cent each.

South Shore Flats Sold for $92,500 by Trustee

The three story building at the southeast corner of 71st st. and Luella av. has been sold for $92,500 to an undisclosed purchaser by the Liberty National bank, trustee. The building contains 30 furnished apartments and four stores.

Six Months' Building Total Is 36 Millions

Chicago area construction permits totaled $36,509,411 in the first six months of this year, the Bell Savings and Loan association reported yesterday. Projected for the entire year, 1945 construction was indicated at $73,018,822, or about the same level as for 1944 when the total was $76,842,110.

Home construction in the first six months included 250 apartment units costing an estimated $1,184,927.

Tops Suburban Report

Franklin Park led suburbs the first half of the year with permits issued for 213 homes to cost $1,108,700, Bellwood was second, with 114 homes costing $629,350, and Hammond was third with 103 homes costing $587,200.

In June 182 home units costing $921,769 were reported for Chicago compared with 214 units costing $865,130 in June, 1944, and 179 units costing $859,130 in May, 1945. Including suburbs and unincorporated areas housing units reported for the Chicago area in June totaled 635 costing $2,727,481, compared with 837 costing $2,844,886 in June, 1944, and 535 costing $2,366,794 in May, 1945.

Report No Building

Residence permits reported for June showed that Evanston, Hinsdale, La Grange, and Lake Forest, among the city's top flight suburbs, issued no permits for residences.

The area covered in the Bell survey includes 90 suburban towns in Illinois and northern Indiana and unincorporated areas of Cook, Du Page, Kane, and Lake counties in Illinois.

74TH, ASHLAND CORNER PLANT BRINGS $250,000

The property at the southwest corner of 74th st. and Ashland av., improved with a one story crane type manufacturing building with an area of 140,000 square feet, was sold by Liberty National Bank of Chicago, trustee for the M. S. Kaplan family, to Louis Moust, partner in the Vak Engineering company, for $250,000. Carl L. Kingsbury of Chandler & Montague was real estate broker.

Relief map of the United States and contiguous territory, showing in detail its great natural fortifications.

AMERICA—A GREAT NATURAL FORTRESS

NO NATION IN THE WORLD is more favorably situated geographically to repel foreign aggression than the United States. Nor is there any nation endowed to a greater extent with natural advantages that would discourage invasion.

This is as true today as it was before the beginning of the present war, which has retaught us the lesson that countries can be conquered only by superior land forces.

Superior air forces, as has been demonstrated in this conflict, can devastate a land, destroy industries and lines of communication, play an important role in battles, and frequently, in fact, deliver decisive blows, but planes cannot take the place of infantry, artillery, and tanks. Even air borne troops have their limitations and cannot begin functioning effectively until they are landed and thus become land troops.

Like air forces, naval forces are essential to victory. Where oceans or seas are involved in a war it is the better fleet that wins. A fleet can spearhead a water borne invasion, cover a landing, and keep communications open, but even a battleship's guns can reach ashore only a relatively few miles, and the effective range of carrier planes more often than not is limited by various considerations.

It is the ground forces that in the end conquer upon land. Iwo Jima was bombed and shelled from air and (Continued on page eight)

LOOKING AT HOLLYWOOD WITH HEDDA HOPPER

THE MAIN STEM MAKES THE MOVIES

Mae Murray in "Fascination." She was one of the early recruits from Broadway who wowed 'em in the movies.

Hollywood

TO MOST Americans, both Broadway and Hollywood spelled backward read "G-L-A-M-O-R." George M. Cohan, with songs and plays such as "45 Minutes from Broadway" and "Broadway Jones," was a one-man publicity department for the Gay White Way. But it's Hollywood, the glamor town, that really has done most to eulogize its rival, Broadway. A Cohan song or play reached thousands of people, but the movies have an audience of millions nightly, and they can show Broadway and its tributaries in such detail that those citizens who have never left their native small towns could probably find their way blindfolded about Big Town.

Right now, Columbia is making "Song of Broadway," a musical which shows audiences backstage life, with Marjorie Reynolds as a dancer. The action further takes the spectator thru various phases of New York life, including after-dark spots and Tin Pan Alley. Leigh Jason, who is directing, knows and loves Broadway, so we can bank on Marjorie, Fred Brady, Janis Carter, and Loren Tindall acting like authentic characters a tourist would be likely to meet along the most famous Main Stem in the world.

Certainly "Song of Broadway" is not the first tour of Mazda Lane arranged for fans by the movies. I did a little research and discovered that Hollywood has made over a hundred films with Broadway in the titles. It's a word that appears on movie marquees in quotes more frequently than any other, with the possible exception of "Love." Now, if you add films made with "Manhattan" and "New York" in the titles, you'll get an idea of just how much Hollywood has done to plug its entertainment rival, from which it's taken every idea and in many ways improved them.

Films started their campaign to bring Broadway to Main Street 'way back in 1903, when a split-reel picture, "The Kiss," showed the Broaway star, May Irwin, repeating her famous smack with a gent with a handle bar mustache. This was the beginning of bringing the names and faces, styles, manners, plays, and dances of the Big Street to every whistle stop in the country.

Remember, in those days radio was unknown, automobiles were few, and travel limited. Then, if you lived in Podunk, you were as completely cut off from the rest of the world as if you lived in Nome, for touring stage attractions hit only the larger cities.

The theater's Alexander Knox, a hit as "Wilson," now co-stars with Irene Dunne in "Over 21."

In 1908, D. W. Griffith (who later directed such famous movies as "The Birth of a Nation" and "'Way Down East") acted in a short picture, "At the Crossroads of Life," which gave the first glimpses of chorus girls' dressing rooms in a Broadway theater.

Early in World War I. Theda Bara first slunk across the screen in "A Fool There Was," which had scenes taken on Broadway, Park avenue, and Fifth avenue. Theda played a "vamp," and she introduced the word as a popular noun and verb in the American slanguage. Theda showed the gals in Oshkosh what was being worn in New York, how members of "society" furnished their homes.

Many girls imitated Theda's exotic pose, and when this vamp burned incense, the sale of the stuff jumped 100 per cent thru the nation. I saw this antique not so long ago, and if you want the laugh of your life, try to see it somewhere. You wouldn't believe how far we've come of age on the screen.

The movies made Broadway personalities as famous to ranch dwellers and fishermen along the Maine coast as they were in the theaters in New York. After Mary Pickford appeared behind footlights in "A Good Little Devil" for the great David Belasco, she made it as a picture which brought her so many new fans that she rapidly became the screen's highest salaried star. Before that Broadway favorites had been known beyond the metropolitan centers only thru printed publicity and pictures in newspapers and magazines. But with the movies, Minnie Maddern Fiske's "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," Mrs. Leslie Carter's "Du Barry," and James K. Hackett's "The Prisoner of Zenda" reached the most distant prairie towns not long after they'd been hits in New York.

Girls in the hinterlands learned to dress with chic from watching the movie liknesses of such Broadway beauties as Kitty Gordon, Maxine Elliott, and Hazel Dawn. Farm boys learned what spats were for and the correct way to handle a cane from debonair Jack Barrymore and William Faversham. Irene and Vernon Castle started the ballroom dancing rage in New York, and it wasn't long before the milkmaids and milkmen of the midwest could do the maxixe and the Castlewalk from seeing the stars in the film "The Whirl of Life."

Ann Pennington and Mae Murray, both toasts of Broadway, came into pictures a bit later to educate every Tom, Dick, and Mary in the latest routines. In the '20s the Charleston swept the country. It would never have become that popular if the fans hadn't been sold by Joan Crawford doing it in the movie "Our Dancing Daughters."

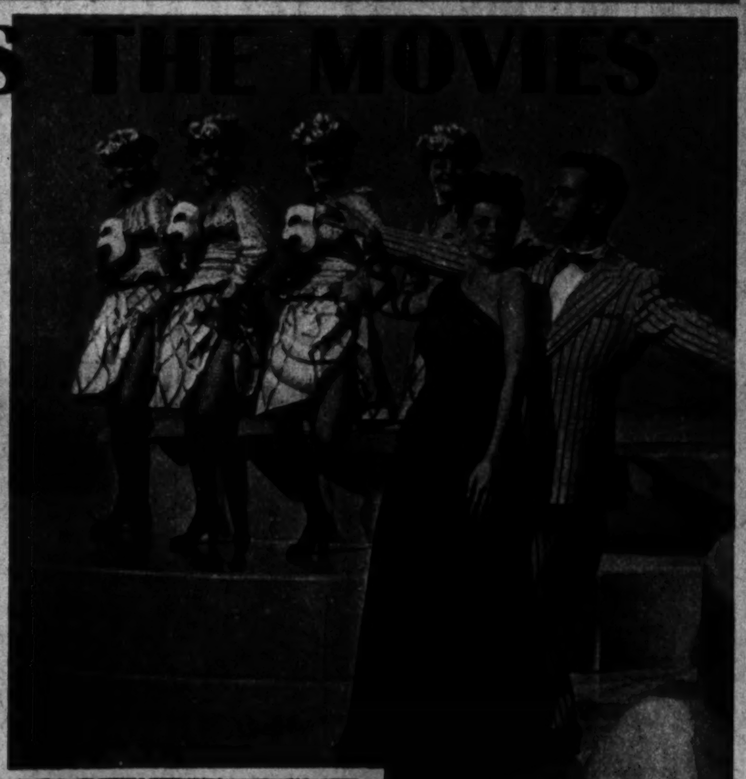
The movies, in 1945, are still bringing new Broadway favorites to out-of-towners. Marc Platt, the dancing marvel of the Theater Guild's "Oklahoma!", bowed to nation-wide audiences with Rita Hayworth in "Tonight and Every Night," and clicked so solidly that the studio immediately gave him a lead in another musical, "Tars and Spars." Alexander Knox, acclaimed by a comparative few in New York for his work in "Jupiter Laughs," was seen by millions in "Wilson," and now his fans are eagerly awaiting his next appearance, opposite Irene Dunne, in "Over 21."

In my Broadway acting days, in such shows as "Be Calm, Camilla," I thought Broadway popularity was everything. But when I took over the prima donna role for the road tour of "The Quaker Girl," I discovered that you could have a Broadway reputation without the rest of the country knowing much more about you than your name. I also found out that the girls and boys along the country's Main streets wanted to be Broadway-wise and that they had a burning yen to know how New Yorkers looked, acted, and furnished their homes.

The movies seemed to be a good way of gaining a national following, so, when Louis B. Mayer started his first film production, "Virtuous Wives," adapted from the Owen Johnson best seller, I was happy to join Anita Stewart and Conway Tearle in the cast. My part was that of a snooty Park avenue socialite, and I dressed the part authentically so that girls in every town would get a straight steer on the newest and smartest in clothes.



Ballet's and Broadway's Mark Platoff goes Hollywood with Rita Hayworth in "Tonight and Every Night."

Joan Crawford looked like this in "Our Dancing Daughters," in which she gave the Charleston a national boost.

Lucille, the famous Lady Duff Gordon, made my clothes for that. In those days you bought your own. Mine cost $5,000—quite a sum. But they made me a reputation for being one of the smartest dressed women on the screen. Many's the part I got after that because I had the clothes for it.

Soon such Broadway beauties as Elsie Ferguson, Marie Doro, Fannie Ward, and Evelyn Nesbit became familiar faces and figures in the smallest burg hidden in the Smokies. And that wasn't all. The streets of New York were as familiar to the hillbillies as they were to citizens of that city. Charles Brabin made "While New York Sleeps" in 1920, and the picture showed several sides of the city, in episodes named the East Side, the West Side, and the Great White Way.

In the latter, the "Ziegfeld Follies" was shown on the screen for the first time. Flo was a great artist, and while he spent a fortune, he never had movie money to spend as we do today, and so couldn't afford the kind of spectacular numbers that MGM will soon show in its celluloid edition of a Ziegfeld revue.

Musical comedies in silent films were pretty unsatisfactory, with just a tin pan piano playing the tunes of the show. Still, they were better than nothing to small town audiences, and this was the technique followed in such silent celluloid counterparts of Broadway girl shows as Colleen Moore's "Irene" and Jerome Kern's "Oh, Boy!" The latter, incidentally, starred June Caprice, the mother of the current starlet with the numerological name Toni 7.

Such pictures couldn't hold a spangle to what the movies could do with a stage musical after sound came in and we had "42nd Street" and "On with the Show." Fans never tire of getting the lowdown on backstage antics, as witness the recent hit, "Cover Girl," in which Rita Hayworth proved she was an actress.

But Hollywood hasn't limited itself to the theater aspects of Broadway. "The Front Page," and its remake with Rosalind Russell, "His Girl Friday," showed how some newspaper reporters operate in a city. Darryl Zanuck's "The Bowery," with Wallace Beery, was a peek at how derelicts live in Skid Row. "Madison Square Garden" was a saga of the sports world of New York, and such celebs as Jack Dempsey, Jim Corbett, and Annette Kellerman have all starred in films. The pictures made about Fifth avenue, Park avenue and other society sectors have been without number.

Buddy De Sylva is preparing "The Stork Club." Universal has announced "Hippodrome," based on the theater that staged spectacles with elephants, with R. H. Burnside at the helm. And if the residents of Sioux City want to see how large a slab of pie you get at the Automat or how Childs' hotcakes look, they'll find complete information in "Song of Broadway," in which those institutions are shown as they actually are.

WAR HERO GABRESKI

RANKING ACE of the United States 8th air force in the European theater of war, Lt. Col. Francis Gabreski of Oil City, Pa., had to his credit 28 enemy planes shot down and three destroyed on the ground when he set out from a fighter base in England on July 20, 1944, on what he expected to be his last mission before coming back to America to marry Miss Kay Cochran of Prairie du Chien, Wis.

His home town in Pennsylvania was arranging a celebration in his honor, but on July 29 his father, a grocer at Oil City, received a telegram that the flyer had been reported missing over Germany. Later it was learned that he was a prisoner. Colonel Gabreski was among 9,200 prisoners of war released from a German prison camp north of Berlin early last May. He arrived in New York by air from Paris on May 21, and on June 11 he wedded Miss Cochran in Prairie du Chien.

Gabreski and Miss Cochran, whom he met in Hawaii, had planned to marry more than three years ago, but the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor made it necessary for them to delay the wedding.

VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

Letters published in this department should be written on one side of the paper. If you wish a personal reply please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Miss Tinée: In your column a month ago you stated that 12-year-old Elizabeth Taylor, heroine of "National Velvet," did not play in "Jane Eyre." However, if you will check the records you will find that Elizabeth portrayed the delicate and sickly little inmate of the school to which Jane was sent by her aunt, and who caught pneumonia and died when she and Jane were kept outside for punishment. This is the best description I can give you of her role, as I do not remember the name of the girl whom she portrayed. Hoping you'll not take this letter as a form of cross-examination, I remain, sincerely,

CPL. DAVID R. MOSS

My thanks to Corporal Moss, the first of many fans to correct the error in my reply to an inquiry from Ann Hensley. The fact is I did check the official cast issued by the producing company, and Helen Burns, as played by Elizabeth Taylor, was not listed, but now that so many readers have jogged my memory, I do remember the excellent work little Elizabeth did in that role. I don't understand the omission, but I saw the picture well over a year ago, too long a time to trust my memory as to such details, so I took the studio's word for it. Sorry for the error, but the letters which came in from all over the country from readers who took the time and trouble to correct it certainly proved your interest in this column—and I can't say I'm not happy about THAT! I hope you'll all continue to keep an eye on me.

IS PAPA ADEQUATE?

By NORMA LEE BROWNING

THE TELEPHONE rings. As the girl starts to answer, a commotion from the other end of the wire almost sends her for a spin.

She can hear infants shrieking and a man's voice desperately shouting:

"Shut up, will you! See the birdie? Don't do that! Papa spank. . . . Say, lady, just a minute. Can't you be quiet? . . . Lady, please, my wife left me, and I've got four kids. What can I do?"

This familiar routine in the social service department of Chicago's Court of Domestic Relations is varied frequently by the actual appearance of the distraught papa and his brood.

It's the newest of problems wrought by war time conditions, and altho often tragic, it is not without its humorous aspects—at least in the eyes of those workers who for years have been looking at the other side of the picture.

In the old days it was the man who walked out, leaving his wife and children to make out the best they knew how. In the old days it was the mother, often bitter and bedraggled, who came with her flock to the Court of Domestic Relations to seek help in tracking down her errant husband—or at least a part of his pay check.

And in the old days a man figured that taking care of the kids was women's work; they'd always done it, they always would.

Now comes a horse of a different color, and women workers in the department are watching the turn of the tide with a malicious glint in their eyes.

"More and more men are coming to us for assistance," says Mrs. Ethel R. McDowell, director of social service at the Court of Domestic Relations. "It's an unusual problem, but there's nothing we can do except offer condolences. There's no law against a mother walking out and leaving her children with their father, who is able to support them. In many cases the mother undoubtedly will return. She's just tired of being kept on the shelf and has decided it's her turn for a fling."

She cited the recent case of Mrs. Jones.

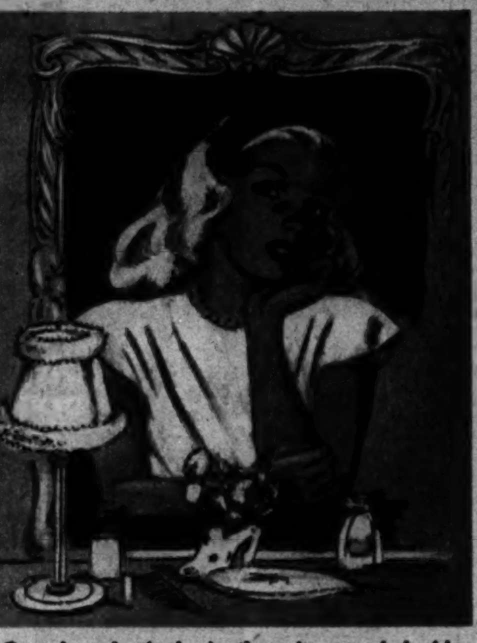
Mrs. Jones has five children and a good sized weekly pay check from her first job in a war plant. She remembers the long, lean years when she scrimped along on the meager allowance Mr. Jones grudgingly doled out to her.

Mrs. Jones pays weekly visits to the beauty parlor. One day she looks in the mirror and suddenly decides she is still attractive. Just as suddenly she decides she has had enough of being taken for granted.

She buys an evening gown, the first one she ever owned. And the next thing she knows she is having a gay time at a night club, so gay she just doesn't go home.

This is where Mr. Jones comes in—to the Court of Domestic Relations.

"In the old days it was the man who walked out."



"One day she looks in the mirror and decides she is still attactive."

"Playing nursemaid to five kids is no tea party," he tells the worker.

He admits obliquely he can't cope with domestic problems, and he demands that somebody find his wife and bring her home.

"Furthermore," he explains, "how can any one expect me to take care of these kids and keep my job, too?"

"I'm sorry," the worker says, "but there's nothing we can do. Mrs. Jones must love her children. She'll probably be back."

The distressed Mr. Jones perks up hopefully. But just for a second.

In the meantime, he insists, what can he do with these kids?

The worker suggests he leave them with relatives or in a day nursery.

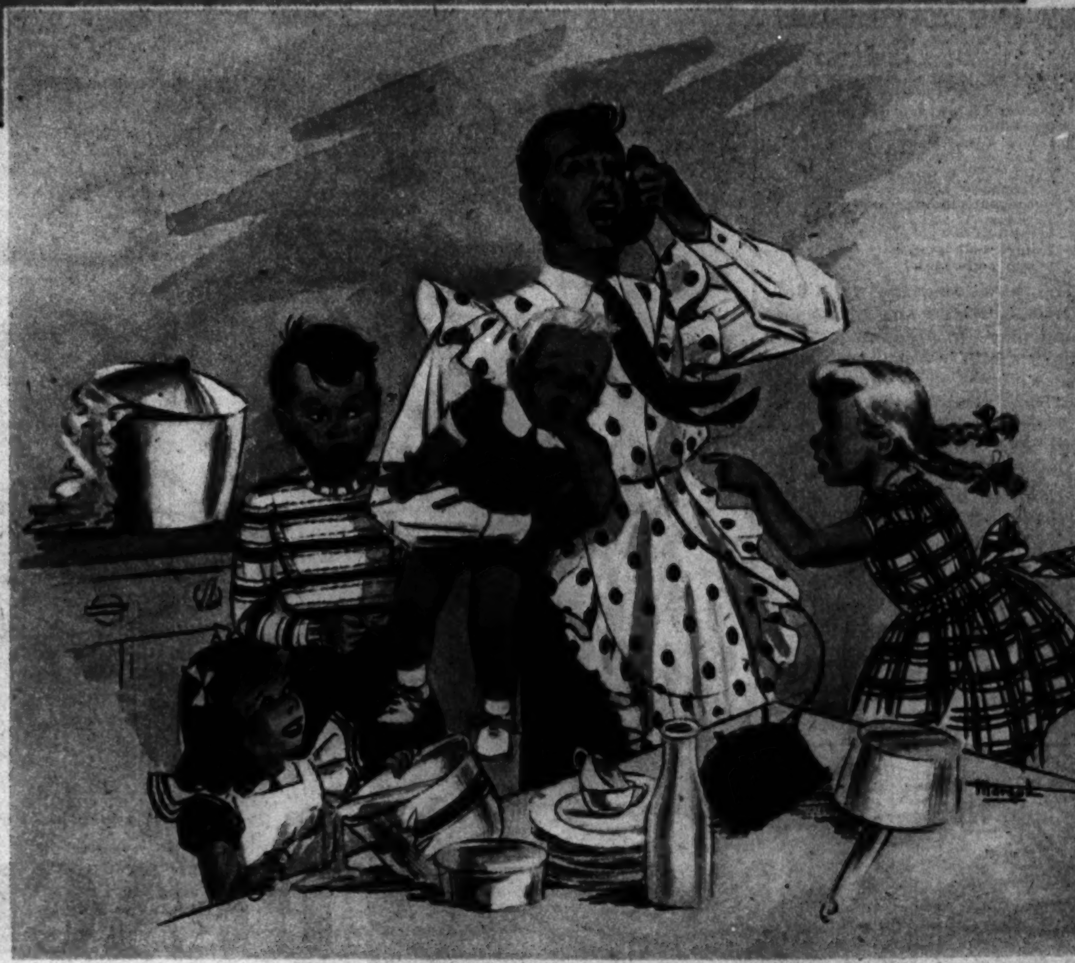
Mr. Jones blows off steam for a while, and when he is finished the worker explains to him calmly but firmly that there's no law against a mother walking out on her children—so long as they're left with one adequate parent.

This does it.

No matter how harassed he may be, papa resents the inference.

Throwing a cloak of bravado around his punctured pride, he herds the kiddies together and makes a swift exit.

"Who says I'm inadequate?" asks his smitten conscience. And he henceforth approaches his domestic duties with a new enlightenment. At least until mamma comes home.



"Lady, please, my wife left me and I've got four kids."

I'll never age beer flat!

We keep it live and sparkling all through the ageing by retaining wholesome Carbonation

BY RICHARD SEIBOLD,
Meister Brau Brewmaster

It's beer that's aged properly we won't add young beer during ageing

It would be as easy as pie to take flat beer and add carbonation to it. But try as we might, we could never put back the flavor that always escapes when beer goes flat.

To guard against this, I insist on keeping Meister Brau live and sparkling all through the ageing. For the tiny bubbles of wholesome carbonation enclose precious flavor and aroma. Once these flavor elements escape they never can be restored.

To put extra flavor in Meister Brau, we use only the most fragrant hops—those grown on imported roots.

We process these hops right through the brew just long enough so they'll yield their top delicate flavor but without harshness.

I also insist that our beer be aged to the proper degree. Time has proved these old time methods, so that's the only way we'll brew Meister Brau. Taste and compare. You'll discover why thousands always ask for Meister Brau at their retailers or favorite taverns.

PEACH IT'S WONDERFUL

By MARY MEADE

THERE'S many a bite of peach goodness in store this summer, for there's a big crop. Peaches in quantity will be on hand this month and next for eating fresh and for canning and preserving.

When you're tired of eating them out of hand, try a custard pie topped with fresh peach slices. It's luscious to look at and good eating, too.

PEACH CUSTARD PIE

3 eggs
½ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon almond flavoring
½ teaspoon vanilla
2 cups scalded milk
1 9-inch unbaked shell
Sliced peaches

Place a layer of sliced peaches in the unbaked pie shell. Beat the eggs slightly and combine with sugar, salt, and flavoring. Add milk slowly, mix well, and pour over the peaches in the shell. Bake at 450 degrees for 15 minutes, then reduce heat to 325 degrees and bake for 25 minutes more, or until the mixture does not adhere to a silver knife. Before serving garnish with more sliced peaches if desired.

Gingerbread is an old favorite with every family, but it's better than ever when passed around with peach slices and a scoop of ice cream. A prepared gingerbread mix will save you time and sugar, and the prepared mixes are really good.

If you've none on hand, here's a good recipe:

GINGERBREAD

(9x13 shallow pan)

⅓ cup margarine
1 cup sugar
2 eggs, well beaten
⅔ cup light or dark molasses
2¼ cups flour
1½ teaspoons soda
1 teaspoon ginger
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon nutmeg
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup hot water

Cream margarine slightly, then gradually add sugar and beat until light and fluffy, preferably using a wooden spoon. Add well beaten eggs and molasses. Sift flour with soda, ginger, cinnamon, nutmeg, and salt and add to first mixture alternately with hot water. Mix well after last addition, then pour batter into a well greased 9x13 inch shallow pan or a deeper square pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 40 to 50 minutes.

Map of California, showing its important communities, geographic features, and industrial centers.

By ALEX SMALL

THE effective history of California began on Jan. 24, 1848, when James Marshall, prospecting along a small stream called the American river, at the village of Coloma, discovered gold.

White men—Spaniards, British, French, Russians, later Mexicans and Americans—had previously been coming to California for two and a half centuries. None had attempted to get a firm grip on the country. The Spaniards, whose rights in California were none too securely inherited by the new Republic of Mexico, explored it extremely well, considering their small numbers.

Their missions brought the aboriginal Redskins Christianity, which they seem to have regarded as a dubious gift, imperfectly accepted even to this day. Some settlers gathered around the trading posts of Los Angeles and San Francisco bay. We have few records of their activities and can only conclude that, having made no history, they were happy.

With the gold strike California—then practically identical with the San Francisco area and territory stretching up into the hills—became a maelstrom and ever since has had some of that character. By 1849 the rush was in full swing, across the American continent by wagon train, around the Horn in sailing vessels or steamers. The "accursed thirst for gold" brought the adventurous from every corner of the world, including China, and laid the foundation for the cosmopolitan quality of San Francisco.

The Mexican war shook off the feeble grasp of Mexico on the territory. At that time San Francisco had a population of 820, and two wharves were sufficient for its commerce. Within a year 500 ships were lying in San Francisco bay, deserted by their crews, who had joined the passengers in the scramble toward the hills and gold. Within two years California had been organized as a state and admitted to the Union (1850).

Its history has ever since been one of constant ascension at a rate greater than exhibited in any other section of the United States. Each impetus to growth has been succeeded by another, as fast as the first one petered out. After the first gold strikes came new ones (the richest of all was in 1870); then people learned that soil and climate could be mined in citrus orchards; then seemingly inexhaustible wells of petroleum were discovered there in the automobile age.

With the federal census of each decade California has shown an increase in wealth and population far ahead of the general average of the nation. It is the only state which has consistently moved forward in the comparative ranking of population. By 1930 it was in sixth place. The 1940 census moved it up to fifth, ahead of Texas. Now, in consequence of the last and greatest of its booms, war industry, its citizens claim it outranks Ohio and even Illinois, and is in third place.

California has not, of course, been immune to the financial crashes and industrial crises which have hit the country as a whole. Always, however, it bounces back with greater vigor than ever. Contrast, for example, the way in which the lean years of the 1930's affected other regions and California. Elsewhere you may find that the acid of the depression ate into some men's souls. In California the average citizen thinks of the 1930's as a remote historical era; its troubles mean as much to him as the conquests of Tiglath-pileser.

The brag and bluster so often used in praising California can be offensive to decorous spirits, but even the most hostile critic has to admit that it is one of the exceptional, favored regions not only of the United States but of the entire globe. Superlatives are natural in describing it. Migrants into California (today about 48 per cent of the total population) may be mature enough to have ties elsewhere, but they soon forget them and join the chorus of glorification.

Let us look more precisely at some of the characteristics of California.

The visitor will be struck, first of all, by the predominant urban aspect of its demography. For the moment we can by-pass the question whether or not any of California's cities are really cities at all, except San Francisco. It's enough that people are living in relatively dense agglomerations and are not taking their living directly out of the land, nor are serving other people who do so.

Considered thus, California is probably more urban than Illinois, and practically as much so as Ohio. Los Angeles county with its present estimated population of 3,371,000, San Francisco bay with its 1,948,000, and San Diego with its 422,000 account for fully 70 per cent of the people in the state. An additional 10 per cent are grouped in the smaller cities like Fresno, Sacramento, and Stockton. Only the remaining 20 per cent are out on the land, and of these not all are engaged in agriculture.

The tourist—at least in times when there could be tourists—may well have been struck at once by the magnificence of the highways, the number of them and their width, the complexity of the system, along with the ingenuity which has made the working of it simple. The roads are symptomatic. California is a highly modernized region. It has gone into the automobile age more thoroly than other regions of America, with the possible exception of

Can BORDERLINE ANEMIA make you look and feel older than your years?

Medical science says: If you look pale and worn—if you seem to be slowing down too much—a deficiency of the blood may be to blame.

LITERALLY millions of men and women look "older than their years"—colorless, worn, weary. They're only faded photographs of their former happy selves.

Yes, and these people with their rundown energy and drive, may find that the cause is a Borderline Anemia resulting from a ferro-nutritional deficiency of the blood. Studies show that thousands and thousands of men—up to 68% of women—have undernourished, subnormal blood . . . a Borderline Anemia.

Beauty, Pep, Vitality Depend on Rich, Red Blood

Your blood—and your blood alone—carries energy to every organ, every muscle, every fibre. Your blood is the "supply line" of your pep and vigor. If there is a deficiency in your blood—if the red blood cells aren't big and healthy, you can't hope to feel vigorous, "glad to be alive"!

No, you can't have the bloom of radiant health—or the energy your years say you should have—if you're a victim of Borderline Anemia. Borderline Anemia means that the quality of your blood is below par, that the red blood cells . . . so necessary to your feeling and looking fit . . . aren't big enough or healthy enough! Borderline Anemia robs women of loveliness, men of vitality.

You Build Up Energy As You Build Up Your Blood!

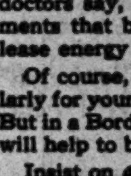
Don't let Borderline Anemia make you seem old before your time—build up your blood and your energy with Ironized Yeast Tablets.

Ironized Yeast gives you the vital elements that, doctors say, half of us don't get enough of—elements that build healthy red blood cells that release energy to every part of the body.

Of course, you should consult your doctor regularly for your condition may be due to other causes. But in a Borderline Anemia Ironized Yeast Tablets will help to build up your blood.

Insist on genuine Ironized Yeast Tablets. At all drug stores.

Resulting from a ferro-nutritional blood deficiency.*



ENERGY-BUILDING BLOOD

This is what the doctor sees when he looks at healthy, energy-building red blood through his microscope. Notice the big, plentiful red blood cells! You need good, red blood cells like this to carry oxygen and release energy and drive to every limb, muscle, tissue.

BORDERLINE ANEMIA

Thousand have blood like this—and never know it! Look at the puny size and the washed out appearance of these weak red cells! Blood like this can't carry enough oxygen to release the fullest energy you need—only sturdy red blood cells can give you full vigor!

YOUTH ON THE CAMPUS

Main hall, oldest of Lawrence college buildings, was built in 1853 of stone quarried from the bed of the nearby Fox river.

By ELEANOR NANGLE

Appleton, Wis.

COMMENCEMENT here last month marked the end of the war time accelerated program of three semesters a year at Lawrence college. It also marked the departure of the naval V-12 unit to which the college has been host for two years. Apparently on the theory that the dwindling number of trainees in this program can best be assimilated in a few large institutions rather than many small ones, men of Lawrence's unit and those of colleges of similar size are transferring to such large centers as Marquette and Northwestern universities in this area.

Next year will not be the first but the fourth time in the 98 years of Lawrence's existence that it has carried on thru a war with a sharply depleted masculine civilian enrollment. At the time of the Civil war, as a matter of fact, when all male students and masculine faculty members marched off in a body to enlist in the Union army, the women (Lawrence has been co-educational since its founding) held the academic fort alone. That won't be the case next year, when in addition to hundreds of feminine students there will be some veterans and at least a fraction of the normal male civilian enrollment on campus; but it undoubtedly will be pretty much of a woman's world and the five fine fraternity houses will continue to serve as women's dormitories until their rightful occupants return to the campus in greater numbers.

Lawrence, one of the most attractive of the smaller liberal arts colleges in the middle west, is a magnet for girls—and normally boys—from Illinois, which runs second only to Wisconsin in the geographical distribution of the student body. The campus is pleasant, centering academically around old Main hall, oldest college building, which once housed the college chapel, library, dormitories, and classrooms, and is used now, having been extensively remodeled in 1941, as the main recitation hall.

Today the 12 acres on the north bank of the Fox river are dotted with handsome buildings, not imposing, but comfortable and clean cut and nicely compatible with the countryside.

When the college was founded there was no settlement in the immediate vicinity; since then Appleton, besides being the center of a prosperous agricultural region, has become something of an industrial city, with strong roots in the pulp and paper mill developments. In 1929 a graduate school, the Institute of Paper Chemistry, was organized here in affiliation with Lawrence college, having as its purpose the training of technical workers in the field of paper chemistry and technology. At this unique school qualified students pursue graduate study for the degrees of master of science and doctor of philosophy, granted by Lawrence.

Lawrence opens for the next school year on Sept. 12.

IN SPITE of war restrictions, fashions in clothes usually manage to change a little every year, and some women always seem to be condemned to that dated, set, and decidedly-in-a-rut look.

All the signs, however, point to the fact that this summer and fall it is going to be different. It will be the look of your head and not your clothes that will proclaim your state of mind and fashion.

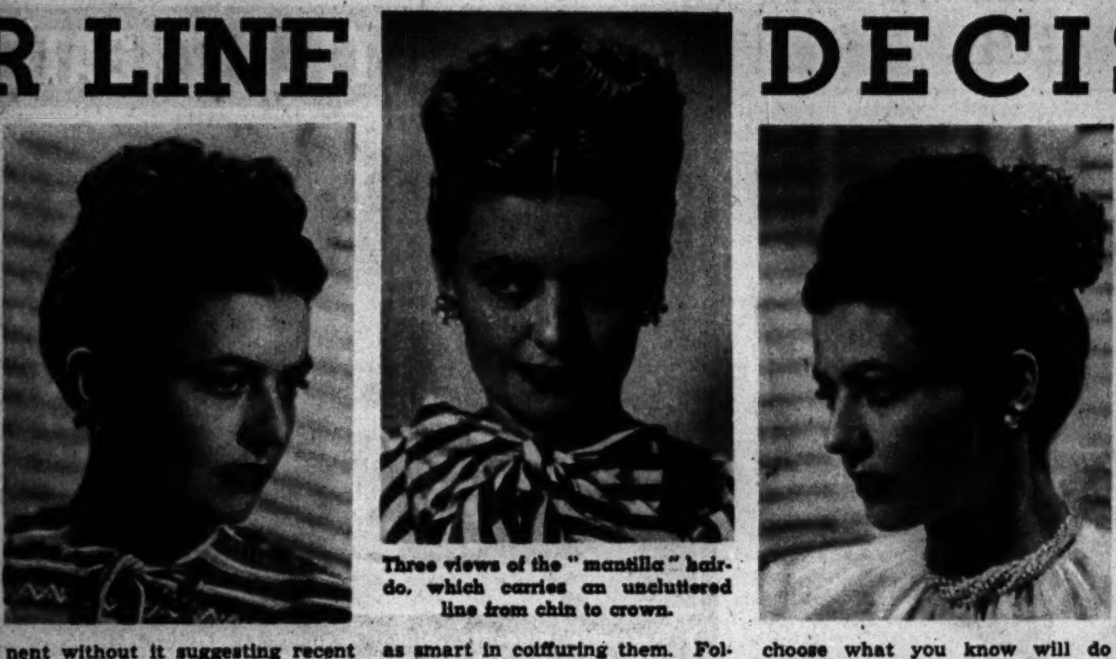
Just to run over a few of the hair changes, remember when a woman felt she had to jerk a blob of hair down over her temples or down on one side of her forehead along with fuzz brushed out in front of her ears? Remember back when permanents were expected to last a long time and hair was curled so tightly it was months before it got back to looking normal? Today the better coifed women get the wider, looser wave, and they emerge from a permanent without it suggesting recent doing. These are advances that suggest what following the style trend can do in a beautifying way.

These facts were pointed out to us recently by a bright young hair stylist whose mission is to make women look pretty as well as smart in coiffuring them. Following the fashion trend in hair styling, as in dress, may involve the same mistakes. In dress fashions you don't grab onto the first seasonal things that are launched whether they become you or not. You wait till styles settle, and you choose what you know will do something for you. That's what the smart women do, anyway.



Three views of the "mantilla" hair-do, which carries an uncluttered line from chin to crown.

The hair stylist referred to thinks women have ignored and neglected the loveliest line they own, namely, the line from chin to tip of the crown, which should be clean, clear, and played up importantly. He does it with a new hair-do he calls the mantilla, which carries an almost straight, uncluttered line from chin to crown. He says there is that one exact highest point on the crown of each and every woman's head that should be found and concentrated upon as the peak of a coiffure.

For this hair-do have your hair cut short just back of the crown, like a feather cut, and left long all around the back like a border. The longest part of your hair will be the portion used above your temples to smooth up sleekly to your topknot. Should you want to keep some of your hair down in back, don't have your top hair cut so short. If your hair is fairly long it will take a nice roll or braid. But four inches is enough to put up easily, and this length is simpler to fix, our authority says. Use flowers, real or otherwise, ribbons, or decorative combs for something special.

CALIFORNIA

other parts of the Pacific coast, like the Puget sound area.

The practice of having not one but several motor vehicles in each family explains the shapeless sprawling aspect of all California cities, San Francisco excepted—and even here the suburbs are no exception. Likewise California has a higher telephone density than any other state. The national taste for mechanism and gadgets is here raised to a higher power.

Now—and here is a fact which is likely to surprise many non-California Americans—this state still remains the land of gold, even tho the gold rush days are now a memory. More simply, Californians as an average have higher incomes and a higher standard of living than the inhabitants of any other state or of the nation as a whole.

The fact cannot be disputed; the explanation is difficult. One certain factor is the wealth of the constant stream of new settlers, many of them of mature years, people who have already made their competences and are living on the incomes. Absentee landlordism works to the advantage of California. Then, the state is as a whole a focal point for travelers and tourists, and such areas everywhere have always been more prosperous than the humdrum ones. Why? Because so many people are exclusively devoted to spending money already earned? Because so large a proportion of workers are not engaged in productive occupations, but in rendering "services" to others?

Whatever the reason, before the war the average Californian was 38 per cent wealthier than the average other American, and today he is about 43 per cent wealthier. Experts on marketing calculate that 100 Californians ordinarily spend as much money as 141 other Americans. If the state had no other attractions, people would flock to it as a latter-day Eldorado.

It's possible to detect a distinct Californian style of living, an amalgam of various national traits and attitudes carried to extremes. The climate disposes people to live in the open more than they can elsewhere; hence they adapt their housing and dress to this outdoor life. Manners are, almost without exception, cordial—even effusive. There's practically a social obligation to be cheerful and radiant. California is no land for cynics and misanthropes; yet I found some. Even so, their very grouches had the same fluorescent quality as everything else in this land of Cockaigne.

Nowhere else in America will you find so many people as in California who are intent on "expressing their individuality," or "being themselves," and superbly satisfied that they are succeeding in that impossible task. Almost entirely they are found among those who spent their youth elsewhere. California has meant to them both opportunity and liberation.

The reason may be simply that they find so many of their own kind here, all drawn to the same magnet—all the arrogant, spiritual bankrupts, all thin-haired Lotharios, downtrodden fathers, misunderstood wives, all those oppressed by the desolate stretches of their souls and by the fever of giving expression to a vague inner torment. Hence the multiform cults and "movements" of California, and a general readiness to accept, or at least be polite to, any fad, economic, social, political, educational, ethical, or moral, from the most sublime to the most grotesque, idiotic, and vulgar.

The more pedestrian stick to the creeds of their youth, but with some new, peculiarly Californian twist to them. The truly unshackled know no limits.

California, as you may imagine, is a lush pasture for frauds and quacks, mountebanks, and charlatans. Evidently the one rule for success is that you must be preposterous enough. On a more rational level, it is also kindly to psychologists, psychiatrists, coddlers of neurotics, and pedagogical theorists. Progressive schools, "creative" schools, "individuality" schools—the youth of California have been put thru them all. Yet they seem to come out with no worse intellects and characters than other youngsters anywhere else. Even the scamps and rogues who prey on the spiritually ambitious lose the obnoxious aspect they have in other places. They seem to belong, to be an inevitable feature of a life where everything is tense, fanciful, febrile, and exaggerated.

One more characteristic of California before we consider it under the special conditions of war time.

The visitor will early become aware of the rivalry between southern and northern California; or, more specifically, between Los Angeles and San Francisco. At first it may seem like other manifestations of local patriotism, immensely important to those involved, but inexplicable and without significance to an outsider.

Greater acquaintance will probably show him that there is some substance to the stories the peoples of these two regions tell about each other. Behind the common material and moral features of California life there actually is a cleavage between north and south, more subtle and more deeply felt than any political or economic jealousy. Supposedly it inheres in two different types of disposition, one of which will feel content at Los Angeles only, the other at San Francisco only. To each its city is the "real California" and the other only a spot on the map which happens to be inside the political boundaries of the state.

The story of Los Angeles is that San Francisco has lost all the vitality of the gold rush days. It has become sclerotic in business, snobbish in manners, affected, and arrogant. It is a faded beauty now become a dowager duchess and not playing the part any too well. California should mean spurting growth, the sense of boundless horizons, and ever-renewed adventure. That once was San Francisco; today it is Los Angeles only.

As to the "real California," San Franciscans reply, what place is associated in the minds of people everywhere with California? It is the Golden Gate and the bay, and the city which climbs up the hills beside the bay. We were a city when Los Angeles was a village. We are still a city and it is still a village, inhabited by deracinated fugitives from the corn belt. As a metropolis, it's the metropolis of Iowa. (Figures show that for this jibe Illinois would be more accurate.) San Francisco is a homogeneous, urbane, civilized community; Los Angeles an agglomeration of dull-witted, small-souled provincials, whose one idea of distinction is represented by the actors and actresses of Hollywood. Of course we're snobbish about Los Angeles, as any person of breeding has a right to be about a boor.

No one can win this sort of dispute, of course, but till the present it seems to me that San Francisco has a bit the better of it. It is more sure of itself. The ardent San Franciscan really cares little whether the citizen of Los Angeles likes his city or not, or what his opinion may be. The latter is desperately eager to have San Francisco acknowledge the superiority of Los Angeles; failing which, he will settle for a nod of recognition.

In an early issue—San Francisco, golden city of cosmopolites.

GRAPHIC LITTLE THEATER PRESENTS GEORGE SANDERS, ELLA RAINES, GERALDINE FITZGERALD IN "UNCLE HARRY"

1 Possessive, attractive Lettie (Geraldine Fitzgerald) is jealous and surprised when she learns that her bachelor brother Harry (George Sanders) is going to spend the evening with a Miss Brown. Harry is a textile designer and Miss Brown a New York fashion expert.

2 When Harry finally brings Deborah Brown to meet his sisters, Lettie tries to kill her interest in him. Harry's elder sister, Hester (Moyna MacGill), likes Deborah but is worried about Lettie's attitude.

3 Harry falls in love with Deborah, and his proposal of marriage is accepted. Then comes the difficult matter of telling Lettie. He brings out the family's best sherry to toast the occasion.

4 Lettie offers to give the couple the family house, but stalls about moving, thus delaying the wedding. Harry discovers a bottle of poison in Lettie's desk, but doesn't know that she plans to use it on his beloved dog.

5 Lettie reveals her feelings fully when she begs Deborah not to take Harry out of his "beautiful, rare, and lonely" world. When Deborah orders her to leave, Lettie faints.

6 Deborah convinces Harry they should be married at once, but before they can leave for the service Harry is told that Lettie has collapsed. Deborah warns him it is a trick, but he goes to his sister.

7 Later Harry learns that Deborah has married the mill owner, and realizes fully how monstrous is Lettie's character. He resolves to use her own poison on her, but by mistake Hester gets the poisoned cup and dies.

8 Lettie is charged with the murder because her hatred of Hester was well known. Harry's conscience forces him to confess his action, but deranged Lettie tears up the paper, repudiates his words. She uses her own death sentence as a last cruel attack on her brother.

9 Some time later Deborah returns to town, arriving just as Harry is leaving. She has come to tell him she is a widow and is free to marry him, but from Harry's doctor she learns the story and finds that Harry has committed himself to an asylum for the insane from which he may never be released.

Ireland to Hollywood—Saga of Donlevy

A CAMERA STUDY BY TRIBUNE
HOLLYWOOD PHOTOGRAPHER
LOUIS WOLF

2 Between pictures Donlevy likes to work in his shop or at his tungsten mine in the California hills.

3 At left: This is the interior of his living room. Donlevy was brought to this country at an early age and educated at St. Johns Military academy, Delafield, Wis. He fibbed his way into Pershing's Mexican expedition as a bugler and later got into the Lafayette escadrille in World War I.

4 Above: Wounded in action, Donlevy returned to this country and eventually received an appointment to Annapolis, which he resigned when he found he'd have to serve four years at sea before he could get into naval aviation. He went to New York, got into the theater. This is his Brentwood home in California.

5 The Donlevy family—Brian, Judith Ann, age 2, and Marjorie Lane Donlevy, the former movie singer. Donlevy's first film role was with Harold Lloyd in "The Milky Way." You'll remember him, too, for the brutal role he played in "Beau Geste," with Gary Cooper.

Four hours after the patrol had set out it returned without a casualty. The information brought back by Huff resulted in the capture of 21 prisoners, the killing of 27 other Germans, and the routing of an entire enemy unit of 125 men.

A railroad employe before the war, Huff, who now is 28 years old, had spent much of his spare time hunting squirrels in the Tennessee hills. This accounted in a large degree for his sharpshooting ability with the tommy gun.

Wise Ways to Use Vegetables

Supply family nutrition needs and cut costs by serving plenty of colorful vegetables.

Steam three or more vegetables in one kettle — saves washing pans.

Save the tender green outer leaves of cauliflower — cook and cream them, or chop fine and serve in tossed salads.

Baby carrots need no scraping. Use a stiff vegetable brush and cook with skins on.

Save leftover cooked vegetables for cream soups. Use freshly slivered new vegetables for clear vegetable soups.

Discovery by Noted Veterinarian

STOPS DOG-ITCH

For years, veterinarians were baffled by a common skin disease that caused untold agony to dogs and cats. Starting as a burning itch, it soon develops dandruff-like scales and brownish edged sores with a mouldy odor in ears, on paws, under-body, back or around tail. Treatments for mange, fleas, allergy or faulty diet result only in costly care or actual loss. Now, noted veterinarian, Dr. A. C. Merrick, has positively identified this disease as a fungus infection comparable to "Athlete's Foot." He has named it "Fungitch" and has also developed SULFADENE, a treatment proved amazingly effective in thousands of clinical cases. Applied externally, Dr. Merrick's SULFADENE stops the itch in a few minutes—scales and sores vanish in a few days. America—A Fortress sea until it was hardly believable that enemy troops longer could exist upon it, yet we know how desperate was the fighting for the American marines before the island was theirs.

We took numerous islands in the Pacific and all by means of ground forces. The final conquest of the Philippines had to be left to General MacArthur's infantry, artillery, and armored units. The only way to deliver an annihilating blow to the Japanese will be in the last analysis upon their own land, just as the Germans were finished off by superior ground forces.

Pancho Villa

Of the foreign powers that might be strong enough to challenge America now or probably within many years to come, all are separated from this country by broad oceans. Altho the airplane has narrowed these oceans considerably, they still remain and will remain for a long time serious obstacles to an invasion.

To invade America successfully an enemy power would have to put many hundreds of thousands, perhaps millions, of troops upon our land within a comparatively brief space of time. It is difficult to believe that this could be accomplished by air operations, even tho we must accept the fact that aviation is sure to develop far beyond its present limitations.

To defeat America upon its home soil would require a vast hostile force, not entering this country at intervals and in driblets, which could be handled by our troops forthwith, but landed upon our shores in such numbers as to be able to hold and exploit its position.

In the event an enemy landing were made in this country and a beachhead established by the invaders, they still would have the hardest part of their task before them, for it would be then that our natural advantages would come into use. This applies particularly to the territory back of our east coast and back of our west coast, where formidable chains of mountains would fight for us. Only along the gulf coast could invaders have any assurance of success after having established a beachhead, for it is only there that they would not encounter mountains on penetrating inland.

Let us refer to the relief map of the United States on page one in order to be able to understand this situation most clearly. We will note that at varying distances from our Atlantic coast, from the northern tip of Maine to as far south as northern Georgia, is the Appalachian range of mountains. They are not high mountains, nor are they particularly impressive, but they are mountains nevertheless. In their passes and in the narrow valleys carved thru them by streams relatively few troops could bar the advance of a big army.

On the west coast the situation is even more favorable to us. Close to the Pacific coast is the paralleling coastal range. Behind this lie the Cascade and the Sierra Nevada ranges. Still farther back, at a considerable distance, are the lofty Rocky mountains, which present an impenetrable barrier on the west to vast middle America. Moreover, in addition to our western mountains as obstacles to an invasion, the Pacific coast itself would discourage all but the most determined would-be conqueror; there are so few places along that coast that would be favorable to landing operations.

Disregarding for the present our Canadian and Mexican borders, along which the United States touches the territories of two friendly powers, the only place where an invasion of America might be feasible is along the gulf coast, from Florida to the southern tip of Texas. There lie thousands of square miles of low land over which an advance might be made. But even there the shore line in many places is uninviting, protected by sandbars and reefs and backed by swamplands. Relatively few large cities are situated along the gulf coast or in the contiguous areas. The only three with more than 200,000 inhabitants each within 200 miles of the coast are New Orleans, Houston, and San Antonio, not one of which should prove of strategic importance in the defense of inner America.

New Orleans, of course, may be regarded as the key to the Mississippi, but a penetration of inland America by means of this river would not be in keeping with the principles of modern warfare. In the Civil war shallow draft paddle wheel gunboats upon the river could defy shore batteries of feeble short range guns. In today's kind of warfare rivers count for very little. As barriers they can be bridged by skilful engineers, as was shown by the allied advance across France, into Germany, and over the Rhine, and as routes of penetration they more likely than not would prove death traps.

Only by securing both banks of the Mississippi as far back as the range of the heaviest artillery and tank guns could an enemy use the river for an advance route for a supply line. Moreover, even this would not be possible unless the invaders had complete mastery of the air.

To invade America along the gulf coast an enemy first, if he were sensible, would have to seize or by-pass the islands of the Caribbean; upon some of which the United States already has bases that should be retained after the war. Sizable islands such as Haiti, Cuba, Puerto Rico, or Jamaica would provide adequate bases for a large invading army, but first, of course, there would be the problem of taking them and converting them into bases.

In one of the invasions of the United States—an invasion that came to grief quickly and with more than dire results to the invaders—the island of Jamaica was used as the base of attack. That was in the War of 1812 when the British Generals Pakenham and Gibbs tried in vain to take New Orleans and were stopped by Andrew Jackson's artillery and sharpshooting riflemen.

Relatively few have been the foreign invasions of the United States, and by far the most of these were before it was an independent country. The last of these invasions was a hundred years ago, when Mexican troops entered what the United States claimed was a part of Texas, altho the dividing line between this country and Mexico there and at that time was undefined. Pancho Villa's crossing into the United States in 1916 to attack Columbus, N. M., cannot be considered an invasion. In light of the fact that he skipped across the border, killed 16 persons, and fled back into Mexico in a swirl of dust, it should be regarded merely as a raid.

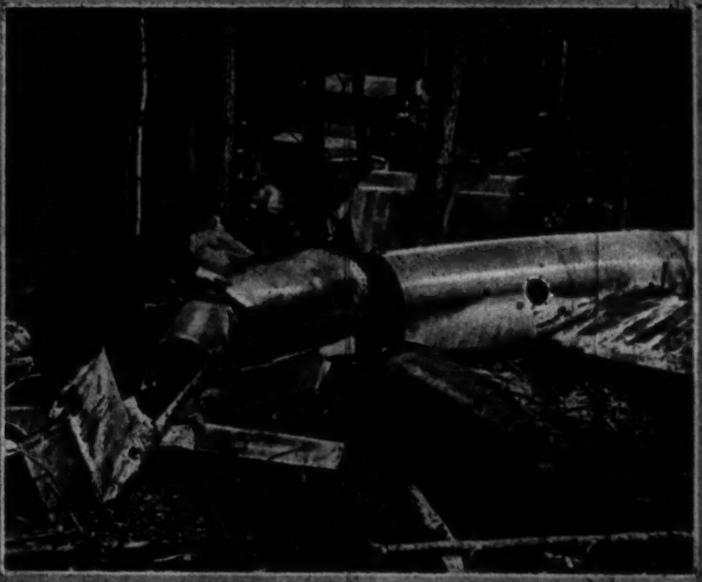
Dutch civilians show R. A. F. officer a V-1 launching ramp near Almelo, Holland, used for bombing Antwerp. Long pipes are firing tubes and cogs are guide rails. (Planet News photos)



A V-1 bomb that got only 70 yards beyond launching ramp in Holland.

Another wrecked bomb a few feet from its launching ramp near Zutphen, Holland.

How Germans Launched Their V-1 Buzz Bombs

NUMEROUS secrets of German weapons and other equipment of war were revealed shortly before the end of the conflict in Europe in the advances of the allied armies thru territory formerly occupied by the Nazis. British and Canadian troops, for example, in pushing up thru that part of the Netherlands east of the Zuider Zee discovered robot bomb bases 10 miles northeast of Zutphen and in the woods in the neighborhood of Almelo, from which they acquired valuable information concerning the enemy's mysterious self-propelled missiles.

Here the conquerors found not only the launching ramps employed in discharging the V-1 bombs toward Antwerp and other Belgian targets but also a number of bombs that had failed to perform properly when they were launched. One of the bombs they discovered had crashed only 30 feet in front of the launching ramp. Dutch civilians in the neighborhood of the bases told the British and Canadians that of all the V-1 bombs fired in the last few weeks of the operation of the ramp sites only about 50 per cent got away in their flights properly.

The Germans employed an ingenious method of camouflaging their bomb bases. Trees were cut down and their leafy tops wired to the stumps. This presented the appearance of a forest but gave the Germans a clear field for firing their missiles.

The V-1 bombs used against the Belgian targets were of the same type as those used against English targets across the channel. Propelled by a jet created thru a mixture of air and gas that produced 45 explosions a second, the robot bomb had a speed of 350 miles an hour and a range of about 150 miles. It weighed 4,800 pounds, was 25 feet long, had a wing span of 17½ feet, and carried in its war head an explosive charge weighing 2,237 pounds. The jet produced power equal to that of a 650 horsepower motor. The robot bomb, which should not be confused with the more powerful V-2 rocket bomb, was in fact a manless plane, held upon its course by a gyrocompass.

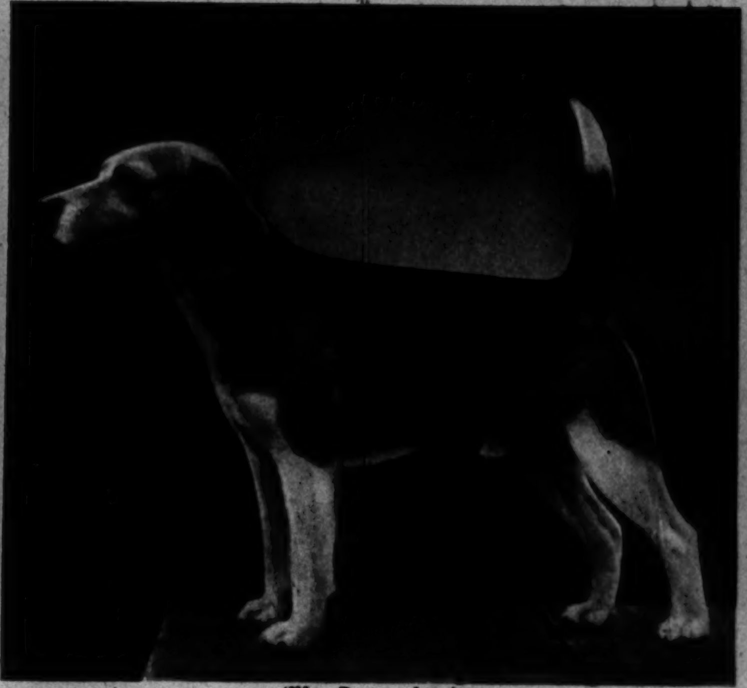
Detailed descriptions of the procedure followed in putting the robot bombs into flight still are restricted by security measures. The accompanying picture of a launching ramp, however, shows it to be provided with a long pipe and cogs. Headquarters of the army air forces in Washington states that the long pipes are called firing tubes and contain the propellent charge used in launching the bombs. The cogs which extend the length of the ramps are guide rails.

In their penetration of Germany proper British troops found similar bomb bases at the Rheine air field, 70 miles east of the Rhine river. Here they captured not only jet aircraft and aircraft components but also standard aerial bombs and cannisters of incendiaries.

MOSTLY ABOUT DOGS BY BOB BECKER

The Maltese, classed with the toy dogs, is one of our oldest breeds. It's a spaniel, not a terrier, and its known history goes back about 28 centuries. The average Maltese weighs about seven pounds, has a white coat.



(Wm. Brown photo)

The merry little beagle hound is the second most popular breed in the United States on the basis of American Kennel club registrations. This dog, Ch. Eberle's Mickey II., is a triple threat beagle, for it's a show champion, a field trial winner, and also a good gun dog.

ALTHO it's a lot of fun to own a dog, especially one that has good manners as a result of obedient training, the owner doesn't receive all the benefits and pleasures of dog ownership without shouldering some responsibility for the health and care of his pet.

We were reminded of this point a few days ago when a dog in our neighborhood dropped in for a visit with our Labrador retriever. One of the first things we noticed about the visiting pet was the way it kept shaking it head. Every minute or two it would scratch an ear with a paw.

When a dog behaves like this it's obvious that its ears need attention. For example, certain breeds have an excessive growth of hair in the ears. This hair lines the inner part of the outer or external ear. If the growth is not checked it may become quite thick and matted. Under such circumstances considerable irritation may develop. Examine the ear and you see that this matted hair is very dark colored and has an offensive odor. One look at such a condition and you understand why the dog is twitching and shaking his head.

The matted hair has to be taken out. It's a rather ticklish job with scissors and forceps unless some member of the family can hold the dog very quietly on the table. If your dog is not obedient or cannot be controled very well better have the veterinarian do the cleaning job and, if possible, watch it done for the veterinarian can explain several important points about the care of the dog's ears as he works on the pet.

When a dog shows that his ears are hurting him it may be due to an accumulation of wax and dirt which have to be removed. Or there may be inflammation of the inner ear canal. This can be very painful and when the condition is neglected it sometimes is stubborn in yielding to treatment.

We never attempt any home doctoring under such circumstances. The ear is an intricate organ so we prefer a veterinarian to do the job of clearing up a serious case of ear trouble.

Our setter, Hunstone Telicia, is a good example of how some dogs seem to be unusually susceptible to inflammation of the inner ear canal, a part of the ear that none of us amateurs should go into. This setter developed ear trouble early in her life. We never did find out the cause, but we noticed a year ago that just as soon as the hunting season was ended it was a wise thing to have a veterinarian go to work on her.

Cold water was responsible for the setter's latest attack of ear trouble. We used her on a pheasant hunt late in the winter when we had a day on a pheasant shooting preserve. The dog not only found and pointed many birds for us but also was eager to do all the retrieving. Much to our surprise she did swan dives in ice cold water to retrieve pheasants that were dropped in partly open ponds.

The dog must have taken seven or eight of these cold water swims during the hunt. Within 48 hours after this experience she had a very painful pair of ears which the veterinarian had to work on over a period of a couple of weeks. It's quite obvious (as the veterinarian explained to us) that this setter will have to have her ears checked from time to time for she is susceptible to ear trouble.

Soapy water that gets into a dog's ears may cause an irritation. We notice that people who make a business of grooming pet dogs often insert a wad of cotton in a dog's ears before giving it a bath so that no water will get into the inner canal.

When we clean the outer ears of our dogs we use a cloth slightly moistened with peroxide of hydrogen or a little alcohol. And we never probe into the ear very far. The idea is to clean only as far as you can go with your finger. After using peroxide or a little alcohol we wipe the ear dry with cotton.

Another angle of dog care often overlooked by an owner is attention to the pet's teeth. As long as the house pet is young you don't have to worry much about its teeth unless it breaks one. But as soon as a dog passes the prime of life and especially when it gets into old age it's wise to have its "ivory" looked over once in a while.

Very often a dog will have an offensive breath due to the fact that it needs to have its teeth scraped and cleaned. Some pets can do without the scraping if they do not develop tartar on their teeth. Companion dogs which get soft foods day after day and do not have a chance to clean their teeth on a large soft knuckle bone, or chew a very hard biscuit, often can stand a thoro teeth cleaning at the hands of the veterinarian.

SERVICE INSIGNIA AREN'T JUNK JEWELRY!

BY SHEILA JOHN DALY

(Copyright: 1945: The Chicago Tribune)

THE MAIL BOX again, and this time it provides a very intelligent, very timely protest against a teen-age fad that is getting beyond control. Let's let the writer speak for herself:

"I wish I could strike lightning out of this typewriter, I'm so worked up about this. Why in the name of decency will girls wear any military or naval trophies? After much irritation I finally got used to tolerating the junk replicas in the jewelry stores. I even got so I could work up a sympathetic glow when I saw a US or branch insignia pin on a coat lapel. But too much is too much. Today I saw one girl wearing army wings, 104th division shoulder patch, naval amphib patch, a good conduct ribbon (I wonder—never mind), and, to top off everything, a four ribbon bar of overseas decorations—Southwest Pacific, two stars, distinguished service cross, silver star, and Purple Heart. It made me want to get some point over to all high school and college girls.

"First, wearing by civilians of any part of the military uniform is strictly forbidden by army regulations. An M. P. has the right and in normal times the duty to remove such violations, and in case of doubt arrest the offender. Second, any moral or ethical law would prevent a girl from displaying the blood-won decorations of any man. If they are given into her safe keeping they are given as treasures, not ornaments. Third, how can any girl have the brazen disregard for her reputation to mix service branches? Field dating is a far cry from displaying the loot. Fourth, the days are not long gone when a pair of wings was more binding than any engagement ring. To only a little less extent, so it should be with branch insignia. A military man has a pride in his uniform and outfit and decorations that a civilian can't comprehend.

"Just as a point of information, a mother, sister, wife, or fiancee may wear the wings of the air corps as a badge. They may, if their service star is for a man in the ground corps, wear his regimental shield mounted on another object. That is all good taste allows. This is not sour grapes. I have a collection of hardware that would make a bobby-soxer squeal—my father's insignia and four rows of decoration ribbons from three wars that he'll never again wear because he's dead on Bataan. My brother's wings and decorations for two years of flying-fighting before his number came up over Germany. My fiance's insignia and decorations won in the long trek from Casablanca to Anzio, where he was awarded the congressional medal of honor—posthumously. For people who care and who understand it is difficult to tolerate the bad taste in displaying these things as trophies. Maybe the young gals just don't know the score. Maybe some of the older ones need a shaking up."

Well, your story should shake them. Many a high school gal passed directly from the class ring collecting stage into dating the army and navy. Without thinking seriously, she just added insignia to her heartbeat hardware department. But every smart gal should know that hard won military insignia and decorations are not meant for civilian display—remember that. A word to the wise is sufficient, and this is the good word.

"I'm only 17 now, but I'll be 18 shortly. I dated one fellow for almost a year and really liked him so much! He told me often that he liked me, and I believed him, naturally. Then six months ago it happened—we broke up over a silly reason. He had several dates with another girl. We had been going steady for so long I don't know why he did that. When we were going together he came to my house to pick me up for school every morning at 8 o'clock. Every day between 1 and 2 o'clock (that's our lunch hour) Bill had a job delivering special deliveries for the postoffice, and every day I used to ride with him. We spent so much time together, but when I found out he was dating another girl I told him to go ahead. Now I'm so unhappy!"

Some gals aren't born with sense enough to know that there can be too much of a good thing, and it usually takes one rugged dating experience before they find out. You're probably a "good thing" according to most fellows' dating ratings, but your particular joe just had too much of you. He saw you morning, noon, and night, and even tho he did like you, you just weren't a novelty any more. Going steady too young is an off-the-cob business—if a fellow and gal can make no immediate plans to make the arrangement permanent, all they can do is date and date and date, and in many cases get so bored they begin to think going steady's not so interesting after all. Next time that glow strikes you don't be so ready, willing, and available. And better luck next love.

MARCUS HEIDEMANN . . . hat designer.

IN ONE BUSY DAY ALONE the florist shop turned out 400 Easter corsages. Working with the bright flowers, fern, wire, and bits of ribbon in his father's shop, tall, boyish 19-year-old Marcus Heidemann developed the touch that gives flair to his hat designs, each marked smartly with a small satin label: Marc Original.

Four years ago the young designer, now a student at the American Academy of Fine Arts in Chicago, worked in a factory after school to buy a well designed but expensive hat. It was a yellow straw sailor priced at $14. At home he took the hat apart, examined it for construction and detail, and redesigned it with the added touch of yellow poppies, buds, and green ribbon, and gave it to his mother for her spring wardrobe. It was Marc's first hat. Later he worked in the yard goods department of a large store to learn what he could about materials; now he goes to school in the morning to learn clothes designing, draping, and construction. His hats are all made on special order, and the talented young designer can design an "idea" or make a hat suited to a special type of face simply by looking at a photograph. He has used his own artistic fingers, coupled with a sense of color and proportion learned from flowers, to give his hats the distinction and chic of a fresh spring corsage.

All money earned from making his original hats is put into a special fund, for Marc has a special idea. This fund is to be used for a trip to New York with the ambitious hope of presenting his plan for an original ballet, based on the story of Camille, to Anthony Tudor, ballet arranger. The young artist has the costumes and stage sets designed and ready for presentation. Marc is both an artist and a worker, and, like his other creations, this ballet will have the youthful freshness of a Marc Original.

Name Your Instrument, Carter Will Play It

Benny Carter

A YEAR or so ago Sidney Bechet displayed his versatility by making a trick recording for VICTOR in which he played all the instruments in a very warm combination. It was an amazing bit of technical magic and a demonstration of Sidney's thoro mastery of music and instruments. To my knowledge Benny Carter has never tried such a novel test of his many-faceted musical talents, but in simpler ways he is demonstrating them all the time. He has achieved something like international fame as a saxophonist, trumpeter, clarinetist, pianist, and composer-arranger, what with tours of Europe, work with British Broadcasting as arranger, and his ever-growing audience on CAPITOL discs.

Benny was born in Harlem and picked up his musical talents from his parents. He bought a trumpet as a kid, took some lessons from the late Bub Miley of Ellington's band, and after a brief term at a theological seminary took up music as a profession. He knows five languages, is a very proud father, and has achieved notable success in the movies.

CAPITOL recently turned out a typical Carter recording, "I Surrender, Dear" and "Malibu." Benny's trumpet is featured on the first side, and altho it comes close to attempting too much in the way of avoiding the melodic line, it is beautifully clear and sure. No matter how much Benny strays from the line, the effect is musically sound. "Malibu" features his alto sax, and it is good, too—melodic, liquid, quiet.

Some weeks ago COLUMBIA lifted Gene Krupa out of the string trap with a coupling of "Leave Us Leap" and "Dark Eyes." The former is hard and fast, with some good brass, but not the best Krupa. "Dark Eyes" is a trio number that is a little thin for good effect. Venturo's sax, Krupa's drums, and Napoleon's piano, of course, have their high moments. . . . The recent Benny Goodman novelty, "Gotta Be This or That," proves one thing at least—that Benny can sing a scratchy, effective solo. It comes on the A side of this two part recording. The number two side features the trio in a fairly unpredictable melange that is fun.

By the time you have read this, Harry Cool will have opened at the Blackhawk in Chicago and you'll be hearing him over W-G-N. Capitol or Victor may get him.—W. D.

America—A Fortress

In considering invasions of this country the fact cannot be overlooked that the early explorations and colonization movements were actually conquests. In most cases the invaders conquered the native inhabitants, the Indians. In instances where they did not make war upon the Indians they cheated them, or bribed them, or otherwise took advantage of them.

It is not the purpose of this article to discuss each and every invasion from the earliest to the most recent, but rather to pick out a few at random to show how some expeditions from the outside chose advantageous routes of penetration, while others selected difficult routes.

Benedict Arnold

The Spaniards were the first to invade this country. They came with the object of seeking gold and conquering and exploiting the Indians. Typical of the way they went about this ruthless business was the fruitless invasion of Hernando De Soto. He used Cuba as his base and landed with an army of fewer than a thousand followers on the west coast of Florida, at Charlotte bay, on May 30, 1539.

Leaving four ships under guard there, he marched north thru Florida, entering successively Georgia, North and South Carolina, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, Oklahoma, and Texas. Some of his men, it is believed, even may have entered Missouri and Louisiana. In April, 1541, he discovered and crossed the Mississippi river at a point somewhere south of the site of the present city of Memphis. A year later the conquistadore returned eastward to the Mississippi, which, for lack of vessels at the time, he was unable to recross. There De Soto died. His followers sank his body in the river, and after many hardships and trials managed to find their way back to the sea and eventually to Cuba. The route taken by De Soto would be impractical for a modern invader.

Except for an abortive attempt in Florida, the French chose to penetrate North America by the way of the St. Lawrence river, upon which they built settlements and established bases. The French penetration continued over more than 200 years. They moved westward to the Great Lakes, found their way to the Mississippi over various routes, and finally reached the mouth of the great river. The St. Joseph river in Michigan and Indiana, the Chicago, Kankakee, and Illinois rivers in Illinois, and the Wisconsin river in Wisconsin were among the routes they took to the Mississippi.

The English and the Dutch landed and made settlements on the Atlantic coast, but did not push far inland, the Appalachian barrier halting them, as it might now halt a modern invader. They were content in most instances to remain east of the mountains, only in a few places moving farther west—up the Hudson river and westward by the Mohawk river to Lakes Oneida and Ontario and thence to Niagara, for example.

The four wars which the British and French fought between 1689 and 1763 for the possession of this country saw invasions from Canada southward and from this country northward into Canada. In the last of these conflicts, the French and Indian war, which was the American phase of the Seven Years' war in Europe, the French held the west at first, pushed down from Canada into New York, and generally had the better of the fighting. Finally, however, Great Britain, aroused and aided by the American colonists, overcame French resistance. They captured Quebec in 1759 and forced their enemy to cede French Canada to them.

In the American wars between the French and the British, waterways usually were employed as routes of invasion. There were no roads as we know them now thru the dense northern woods, only Indian trails. Both sides chose the best routes that were available in those days. A few rude forts guarded these routes, but today there are no defenses anywhere along the United States-Canadian border. There has been no need for them for 130 years.

In our Revolutionary war the British invaded America at several places, the principal invasion, so far as enemy numbers were concerned, being at New York City. The New York invasion, however, was limited to the eastern seaboard. The neighborhood of West Point on the Hudson river marked the northern limit of this part of the British campaign.

But once again Canada had a part in the general picture, being invaded by the Americans and in turn providing the base from which the British invaded New York. Troops under the American Gen. Richard Montgomery invaded Canada from Lake Champlain and took Montreal. Another small army under Benedict Arnold, then a fearless fighting man but later a traitor to his country, struggled up thru the woods of Maine and the territory to the north to attack Quebec. Altho eventually reënforced by Montgomery, Arnold had too few men to take the Canadian stronghold. Montgomery was killed, Arnold wounded, and in the end the Americans were forced to retreat.

Their ill-fated expedition, however, proved scarcely so disastrous as the attempt by the British General Burgoyne to march south from Canada and cut New England off from the rest of the warring colonies. Burgoyne, floundering in the hostile forests and deserted in the end by his Indian allies, was forced to surrender at Saratoga, N. Y., and students of military history ever since have been trying to find a reasonable explanation of why he endured the dangers and hardships of this invasion thru the wildest of country when he more easily and at no danger might have landed at New York, which already was in possession of the British General Howe.

The British expeditions into the Carolinas were undertaken partly, at least, because of the large number of tories there, whom they trusted to fight on the side of the king. Just north of the boundary between North and South Carolina is a wooded hill called King's mountain. There on Oct. 7, 1780, a small army of British regulars and tory militia was surrounded by American mountaineers. Those of the British and tories who were not killed were taken prisoner. Eventually, after humerous sanguinary battles, the British were driven from the Carolinas and Georgia, the last serious fight being at Eatauw Springs, near the Santee river in South Carolina, on Sept. 8, 1781. Final surrender of the British was at Yorktown, Va., Oct. 19, 1781.

General Howe

While the British and Americans were battling in the Carolinas in 1781 the Spaniards, who then held all American territory west of the Mississippi river, conducted a demonstration against the British, which, altho on a small scale, can truly be termed an invasion. Sixty-five Spaniards and French residents of the little Spanish capital of St. Louis on the Mississippi set out across what now is Illinois, accompanied by 60 Indians. This was the first time (and the last) that the flag of Castile ever was borne in triumph across the Illinois country. The expedition marched to a British fort on the St. Joseph river, near where St. Joseph, Mich., now stands, captured the position, hauled down the British flag, and hoisted the flag of Spain. Being too few to hope to hold the fort for long, the members of the party soon departed on their return to St. Louis. The whole affair amounted to nothing more than to show that an invasion eastward from Spanish territories beyond the Mississippi was possible.

In the War of 1812 the British invaded the United States at several places. Most serious was the invasion from Canada, which resulted in the British capture of Detroit and the temporary loss by our country of the greatest expanse of territory ever carved off the republic. The United States frontier by this enemy action was thrust back to the line of the Maumee river in Ohio and the Wabash in Indiana. The British were making splendid headway in their Canadian based campaign against the United States until the two American victories on the lakes, that of Perry on Erie and that of Macdonough on Champlain, put a stop to their high ambitions.

The British invasion by the way of Chesapeake bay, which resulted in the burning of public buildings in Washington, and the aforementioned fruitless attempt to take New Orleans did not go far and were of brief duration.

Continental United States never since has been violated by a foreign power, except in the Mexican war incident previously described.

Mexico and Canada might be employed as bases for foreign invasions of the United States, since our borders along both are unfortified, but this would entail the violation of those neighboring countries themselves by powers from overseas. Both Canada and Mexico are friendly and to a certain extent dependent upon us. America's strength is available for the protection of these adjacent countries, which themselves are militarily strong.

"Picture, please . . . . in the dress you wore the day I left!"

says the V-Mail letter Mrs. Raymond J. Van Wagner, Jr. (right) is reading. It's from her husband, an Army Check Pilot, stationed half-way round the globe. "When men notice clothes as Ray does," says Mrs. Van Wagner, "a girl soon learns to keep things color-bright and trim. I baby my nice washables—and the children's—in gentle Ivory Flakes!"

"Don't risk a fade-out!"

With two youngsters to dress, Florence Van Wagner knows what a budget and buying problem clothes can be today. "Don't treat washables roughly. Don't use the wrong kind of soap," she warns. "Handle them gently and use pure, mild Ivory Flakes and they'll stay new-looking and bright up to twice as long." That's been proved! Yes, by slews of careful wash tests on rayons and woolens, slips and slipcovers.

Here's how to baby 'em!

Ivory Flakes are the fast flake form of baby's pure Ivory Soap. To keep all your washables lovely longer, follow Mrs. Van Wagner's rule: "Gently swish undies and stockings through Ivory Flakes suds after every wearing. And wash all your other sudsables—from girdles to dresses—frequently and carefully in lukewarm water and Ivory Flakes!"

V-MAIL gets there faster! It's the only mail that always flies. V-Mail saves vital space on planes and ships. Send all your overseas mail by V-Mail.

Just One Cake of Camay— and your Skin is Softer, Smoother!

THE SOAP OF BEAUTIFUL WOMEN

For romance, win a softer, smoother complexion. You can—with your very first cake of Camay—when you change from careless cleansing to the Camay Mild-Soap Diet. Doctors tested Camay's daring beauty promise under exact clinical conditions—on scores and scores of complexions. And the doctors reported that woman after woman—using just one cake of Camay—had fresher, clearer, softer skin. Even younger-looking skin!

—the former Helen Ann McManus
Mrs. Robert Mortenson
Newark, New Jersey

MRS. MORTENSON'S STORY

Rocking chair romance. Engaged, the happy light in Helen's eyes is matched by the glow of her complexion—clear, smooth, radiant. "My skin responds to Camay care," says Helen. "Really, my very first cake of Camay brought the livelier sparkle that a girl wants in her complexion."

"I'm forever telling friends," Helen adds, "that the Camay Mild-Soap Diet really works wonders!" Try it. Simply pat mild Camay over your face—over and over—each night and morning. Rinse warm. Finish with a cold splash if skin is oily. Doctors proved just one cake of Camay—so mild it cleanses without irritation—can bring softer, smoother skin.

Singin' in the snow—planning a "honeymoon holiday" every winter. "Bob and I want to stay young," confides Helen. "I like to hear his compliments—and to keep them coming, my complexion stays on the Camay Mild-Soap Diet."

Be saving—with everything! Make your Camay last—it's made from precious war materials.

it's as simple as that...

When you know how!

In 1831, Michael Faraday found that when a magnet is thrust into a coil of wire an electric current is set up in the wire. In essence, this is the principle of the electric generator and the electric motor.

The new TRIUMPH Flashlight Battery is an advancement in the dry cell comparable with Michael Faraday's epochal work in making and using electric power.

Constructed on a new principle, TRIUMPH Battery has NO SHELF DETERIORATION, even at high temperatures!

Regardless of when it was made or how long you keep it, your new TRIUMPH Flashlight Battery will be 100% efficient when you are ready to put it into use.

The bells of Pleasant Valley

The story is told about the bells that ring in a little village in the foothills of the Alleghenies. In the Year of Our Lord 1865, the folk of Pleasant Valley created an inspiring memorial to their loved ones lost in the Civil War.

Into one mighty heap they piled the relics of the war's bitter battles. The old brass cannon, the battered muskets, the broken swords and rusted bayonets. They melted them all down; and from this litter of war the gentle bells of Pleasant Valley were cast, to ring out over green fields and fertile farms throughout the years of tranquility and peace.

The time will come when something like that will happen to the mountainous litter of munitions for World War II. Olin Industries, too, will take their skill and knowledge and experience, their big stock pile of scientific research—all they have learned from fifty years of skillful operation through peace and war—and "melt them down" into things for peace. Instead of munitions for soldiers, there will once more be guns and ammunition for sportsmen. Instead of powder for bombs, there will be explosives for miners, farmers and builders. Instead of carbines for soldiers, there will be roller skates for kids—and there will be brass, bronze and other metals for radios, refrigerators, irons—a thousand old and new peace-time uses.

It will be a great day, when we can all "down tools" on the war job and pick up the tools for the job of peace once more. Then the songs of scores of machines making many things to make life better, will be as joyful to all ears as the bells of Pleasant Valley.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES
by MILTON CANIFF
PYZON HOLDS A NEUTRAL PASSPORT AND HUTCH'S IS AMERICAN ... ALL OTHER INHABITANTS OF THIS ISLAND ARE FARMERS OF VARIED NATIONALITIES, USED AS LABOR BY THE JAPS BEFORE THEY EVACUATED! RIGHT?
YES, SIR
MR. PYZON, YOU SAY THE JAPS ALLOWED YOU TO CONTINUE YOUR PREWAR AGRICULTURAL ACTIVITIES HERE—BUT WHY DID THEY TOLERATE HUTCH, IF HE IS AN AMERICAN CITIZEN?
THEY ARRESTED HIM, BUT SINCE HE COULD NOT ESCAPE, I ASKED THEM TO PAROLE HIM TO ME AS MY ASSISTANT...
"WHEN THE FIRST AMERICAN PLANES CAME OVER, THE JAPS WITHDREW HURRIEDLY... MR. HUTCH HID AND THEY DID NOT TAKE TIME TO SEARCH TOO THOROUGHLY...
VERY WELL THEN, YOU MAY CONTINUE TO OCCUPY YOUR QUARTERS, UNDER THE NORMAL RESTRICTIONS OF OCCUPATION, OF COURSE...
YOU SEE HOW PYZON TAKES CARE OF YOU, FELLOW? I SAVED THAT AMERICAN PASSPORT WHEN MY ACTUAL YANKEE ASSISTANT, NAMED HUTCH, WAS SHOT BY THE JAPS... THESE MARINES WILL NEVER KNOW YOU ARE AN ESCAPED MURDERER FROM THE PHILIPPINES!
GUESS YOU'RE SMART AT THAT, PYZON...GOOD THING THE REAL HUTCH HAD NO BEARD IN HIS PASSPORT PHOTOGRAPH!
MEANWHILE...
THE OLD MAN WANTS TO SEE YOU, LEE...
THANKS
SIR, LIEUT. LEE REPORTS AS DIRECTED!
SIR, LIEUT. LEE IS THE ARMY PILOT WHO FIRST CONTACTED OUR OBSERVATION AIRCRAFT FROM THIS ISLAND!
OH, YES, OF COURSE!... AT EASE, MR. LEE!
WE WERE SKEPTICAL OF YOUR REPORT, LEE! THE JAPS ARE NOT USUALLY SO GENEROUS TO THE MARINES AS TO GIVE UP AN ISLAND WITHOUT A FIGHT!
I KNOW, SIR! WE EXPLORED THE ISLAND THOROUGHLY BEFORE WE DARED BELIEVE IT OURSELVES WHO IS "WE"?
HEY!
GANGWAY!
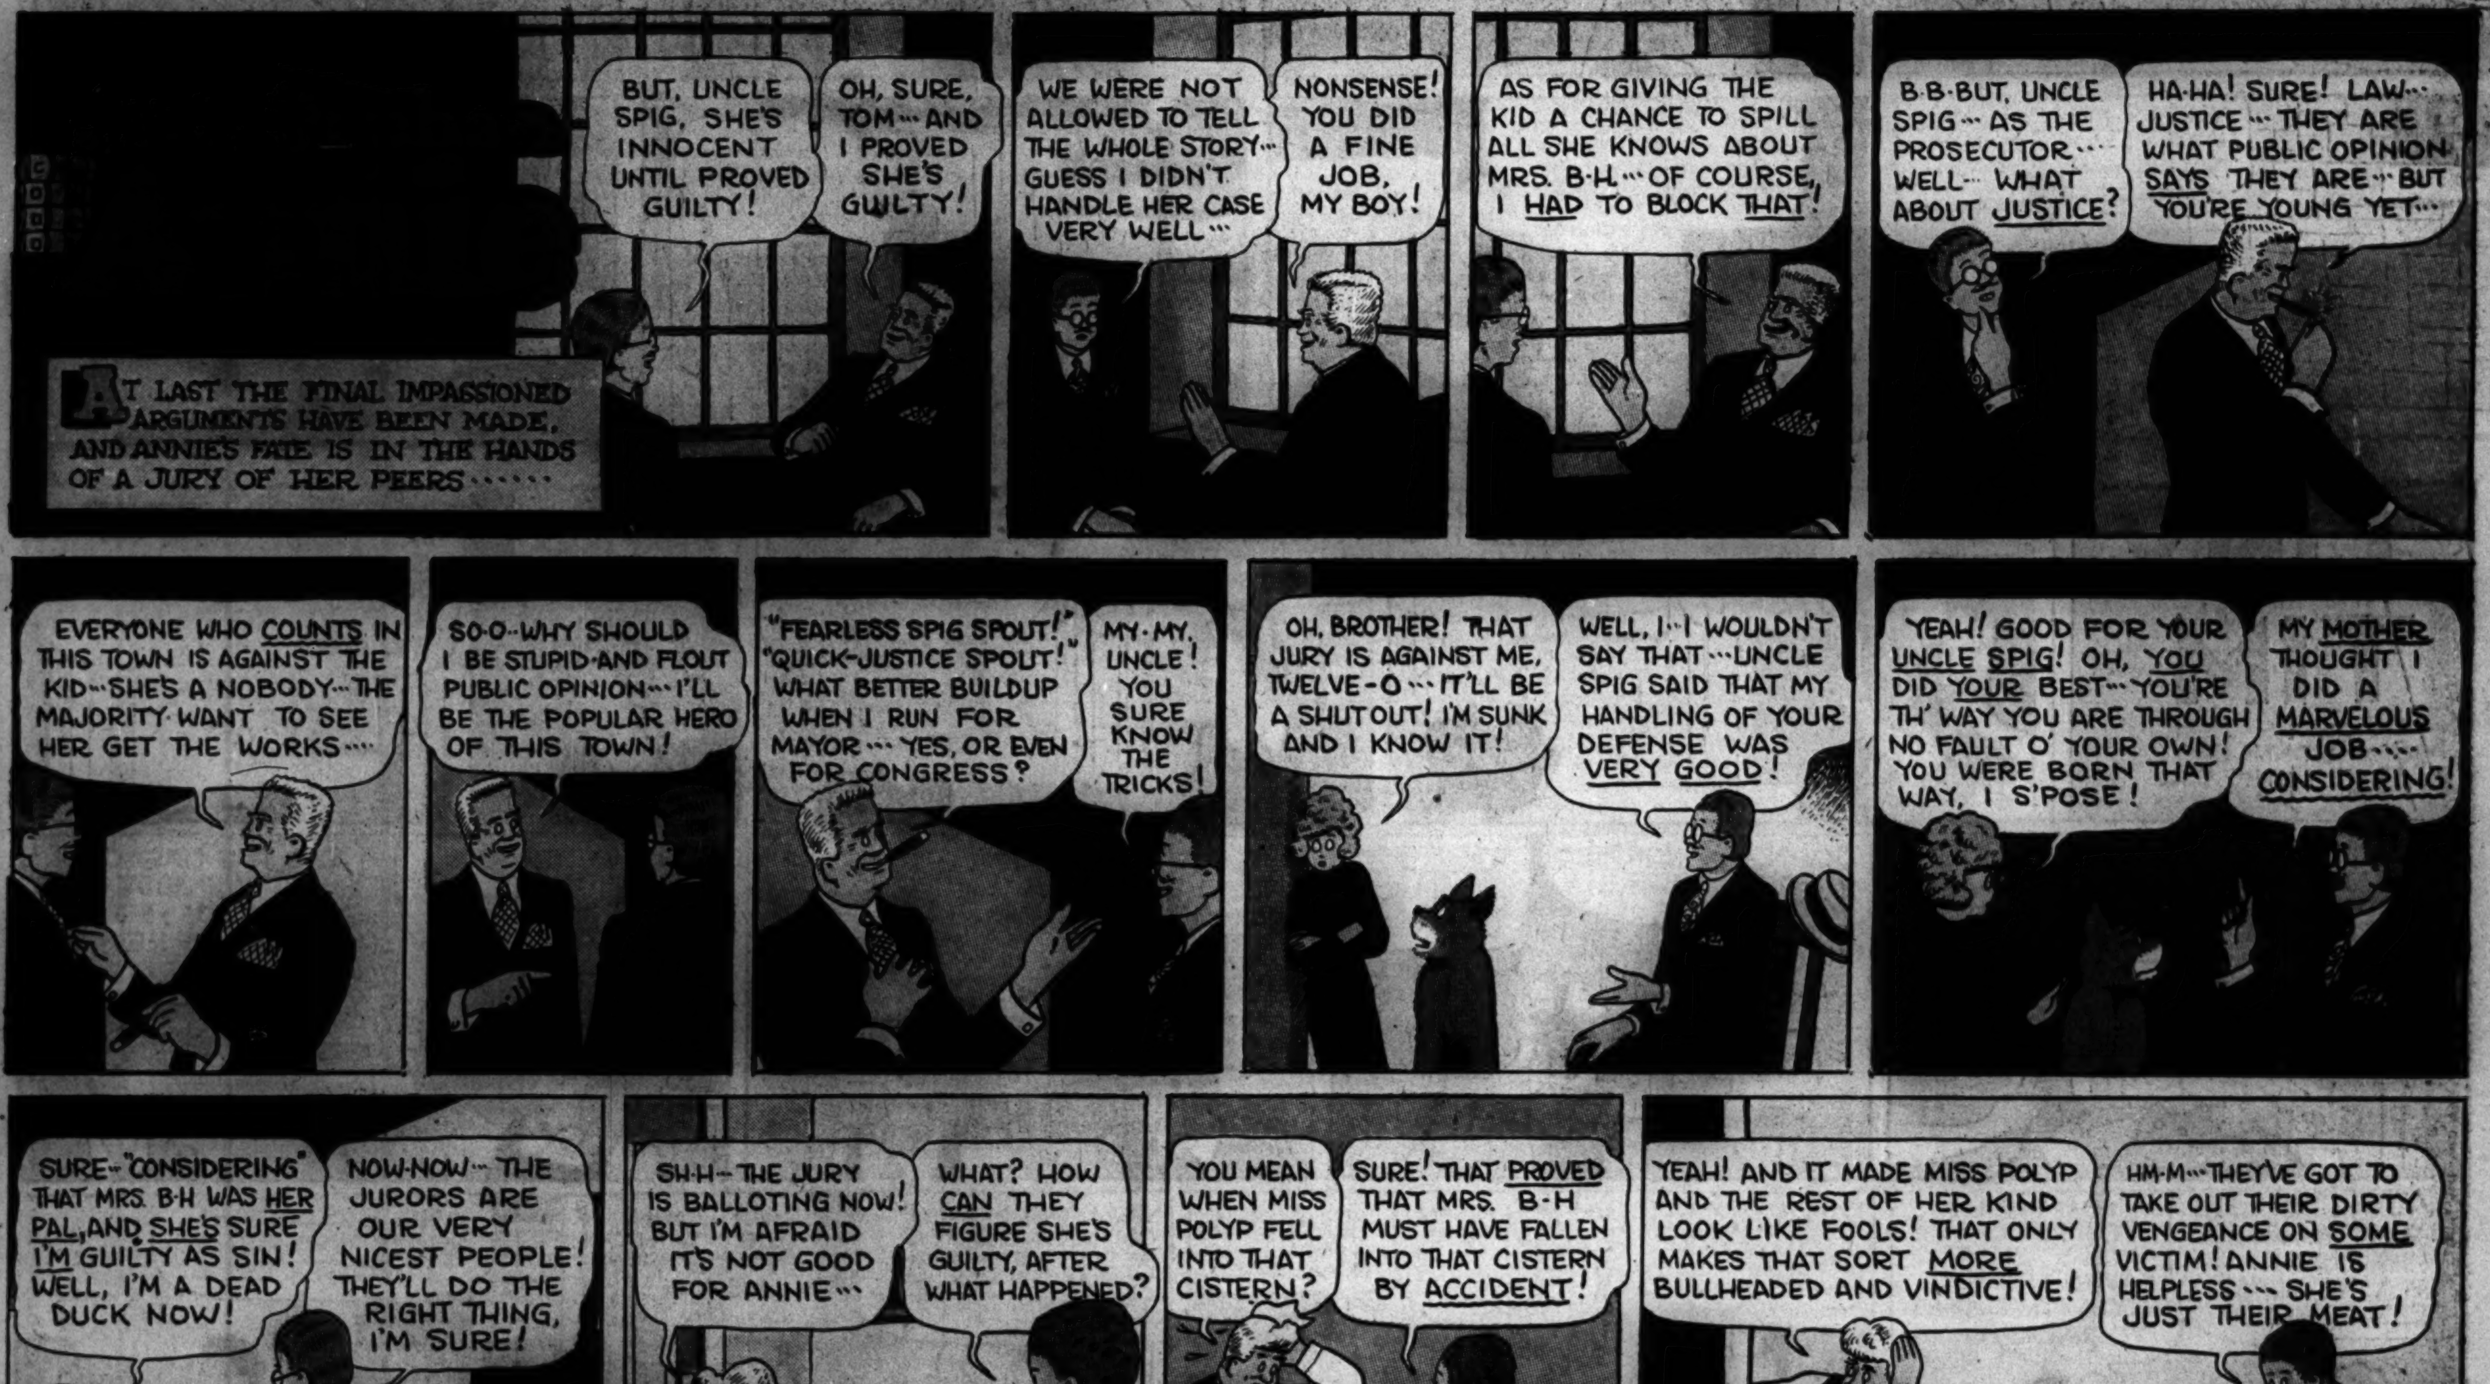
NO LANDING FLAPS ON THIS BEE-GEE-ZOOEE!



AT LAST THE FINAL IMPASSIONED ARGUMENTS HAVE BEEN MADE, AND ANNIE'S FATE IS IN THE HANDS OF A JURY OF HER PEERS ......
BUT, UNCLE SPIG, SHE'S INNOCENT UNTIL PROVED GUILTY!
OH, SURE, TOM··· AND I PROVED SHE'S GUILTY!
WE WERE NOT ALLOWED TO TELL THE WHOLE STORY··· GUESS I DIDN'T HANDLE HER CASE VERY WELL···
NONSENSE! YOU DID A FINE JOB, MY BOY!
AS FOR GIVING THE KID A CHANCE TO SPILL ALL SHE KNOWS ABOUT MRS. B-H··· OF COURSE, I HAD TO BLOCK THAT!
B-B-BUT, UNCLE SPIG··· AS THE PROSECUTOR··· WELL··· WHAT ABOUT JUSTICE?
HA-HA! SURE! LAW··· JUSTICE··· THEY ARE WHAT PUBLIC OPINION SAYS THEY ARE··· BUT YOU'RE YOUNG YET···
EVERYONE WHO COUNTS IN THIS TOWN IS AGAINST THE KID··· SHE'S A NOBODY··· THE MAJORITY WANT TO SEE HER GET THE WORKS···
SO-O-WHY SHOULD I BE STUPID-AND FLOUT PUBLIC OPINION··· I'LL BE THE POPULAR HERO OF THIS TOWN!
"FEARLESS SPIG SPOUT!" "QUICK-JUSTICE SPOUT!" WHAT BETTER BUILDUP WHEN I RUN FOR MAYOR··· YES, OR EVEN FOR CONGRESS?
MY-MY, UNCLE! YOU SURE KNOW THE TRICKS!
OH, BROTHER! THAT JURY IS AGAINST ME, TWELVE-O··· IT'LL BE A SHUTOUT! I'M SUNK AND I KNOW IT!
WELL, I-I WOULDN'T SAY THAT···UNCLE SPIG SAID THAT MY HANDLING OF YOUR DEFENSE WAS VERY GOOD!
YEAH! GOOD FOR YOUR UNCLE SPIG! OH, YOU DID YOUR BEST··· YOU'RE TH' WAY YOU ARE THROUGH NO FAULT O' YOUR OWN! YOU WERE BORN THAT WAY, I S'POSE!
MY MOTHER THOUGHT I DID A MARVELOUS JOB··· CONSIDERING!
SURE-"CONSIDERING" THAT MRS. B-H WAS HER PAL, AND SHE'S SURE I'M GUILTY AS SIN! WELL, I'M A DEAD DUCK NOW!
NOW-NOW··· THE JURORS ARE OUR VERY NICEST PEOPLE! THEY'LL DO THE RIGHT THING, I'M SURE!
SH-H-THE JURY IS BALLOTING NOW! BUT I'M AFRAID IT'S NOT GOOD FOR ANNIE···
WHAT? HOW CAN THEY FIGURE SHE'S GUILTY, AFTER WHAT HAPPENED?
YOU MEAN WHEN MISS POLYP FELL INTO THAT CISTERN?
SURE! THAT PROVED THAT MRS. B-H MUST HAVE FALLEN INTO THAT CISTERN BY ACCIDENT!
YEAH! AND IT MADE MISS POLYP AND THE REST OF HER KIND LOOK LIKE FOOLS! THAT ONLY MAKES THAT SORT MORE BULLHEADED AND VINDICTIVE!
HM-M···THEY'VE GOT TO TAKE OUT THEIR DIRTY VENGEANCE ON SOME VICTIM! ANNIE IS HELPLESS ··· SHE'S JUST THEIR MEAT!

YOU CAN SEE THE DIFFERENCE!

Tests show it...Millions know it!

No matter what leading tooth powder you are using now . . . Pepsodent Tooth Powder with Irium will make your teeth brighter!

Pepsodent makes this unqualified promise to you, without fear of contradiction . . . because test after test proves: Pepsodent Powder with Irium makes teeth far brighter.

Tests by impartial laboratories . . . tests with photoelectric devices . . . tests by identical twins . . . by dental clinics, by dentists themselves . . . produced overwhelming evidence for this one unshakable fact:

Pepsodent Powder produces a lustre on teeth twice as bright as the average of all other leading brands . . . brighter than any of them—bar none!

Change to Pepsodent Powder—the only powder containing Irium, the exclusive cleansing ingredient. Use it twice a day . . . and see it make your teeth brighter!

You can see the difference in one week!

Don't let your child lead with her chin!

This girl's undershot chin was spoiling her looks. Her lower teeth extended far beyond the uppers . . . and could not meet properly. However, with modern dental treatments it was possible to correct her undershot chin . . . bring her teeth and jaw back into normal position and improve her looks.

The important point is . . . her parents consulted a dentist early . . . while features were forming and correction was still possible. Watch your child's teeth carefully . . . especially during the growing years. Remember your child's looks and personality throughout life will be influenced by the early care the teeth get.

BEFORE
AFTER
Drawn from an actual case record

So take your child to the dentist regularly . . . and insist upon the habit of careful daily brushing with Pepsodent Powder to keep teeth shining brighter.

ONLY PEPSODENT CONTAINS IRIUM

PEPSODENT TOOTH POWDER

FABULOUS FABLES Nº 2

Once upon a time...

there was a singing Super-Toots named LORELEI whose Figure was something to WRITE HOME ABOUT, whose hair was even lovelier than her figure, and whose Smile was seduction itself. She used nothing but Listerine Tooth Paste. Now, Lorelei, for years, had tried her wiles on a handsome sailor until at last he melted, and so came the Happy Wedding Day.

Poppa was counting what was left after buying the Trousseau; Mamma was counting on a Son-in-Law who could help with the Dishes; the relatives were counting the Silverware; and the Detectives were counting the Relatives. At this moment up dashed Western Union with a message from the groom. All it said was, "Count me out!"

Well, if you think Lorelei wasn't Tossed into a Tizzy you are off your Rocker. "Somebody is going to pay for jilting me!" she sobbed, "and it's going to be Sailors."

So, knocking off the wedding cake all by herself, she plunged into the Sea, to live forever on a Barren Rock where she became the "bad-news baby," luring Ships and seamen to their doom. Sometimes all that was necessary was to sun herself upon the Rocks and . . . Bingo! . . . It was Curtains for the Sea Scouts! If that didn't work she'd croon a bit of Boogie-Woogie to the effect that she was lonesome, oh-so-lonesome. If that didn't go over, she'd comb her auburn hair which was come-on Number Three. And if that didn't lure them, what do you think she did then? Right you are, Sylvester! She did what any smart gal would do! "There's never a day I don't miss it—

I'M LOST WITHOUT dreft!"

...dreft works wonders no soap can do for silks, woolens, dishes!

"I miss dreft for dishes
IT MAKES EVEN GLASSES SHINE WITHOUT WIPING!"

IT'S TRUE! . . . No soap ever made can perform the dishwashing miracles that Dreft can! It makes dishes positively gleam without wiping. For Dreft leaves no streaks or cloudiness the way soaps do. Gets even glasses so clean they sparkle—without touching a towel to them!

UNCLE SAM COMES FIRST

Special materials employed in making Dreft are now being used by Uncle Sam. Of course we have been glad to cooperate in this emergency—to lend any aid possible to today's big effort. That is why Dreft has been unavailable—why very likely it is not now on your grocer's shelves.

For Dreft is different from soap—made from different materials. When such materials were suddenly needed for the war effort, Dreft gladly stepped aside. We do not know how much longer present shortage conditions will continue—but soon, we hope, Dreft will again be back. Watch for it!

"AND I miss dreft for lingerie
IT KEEPS COLORS SO MUCH FRESHER THAN SOAP!"

IT'S TRUE! . . . Dreft is so gentle to wash colors—it's as non-alkaline as pure drinking water. Keeps colors fresh far longer than finest soap flakes. Dreft leaves none of the deposits all soaps leave. Stockings washed with Dreft look so much fresher—precious new woolens wash softer and fluffier than with any soap you've ever used.

WORKS MIRACLES NO SOAP COULD EVER DO!

No soap in the world gives you the wonderful benefits Dreft gives. The special ingredients which went into Dreft are helping Uncle Sam. That's why so many people are having to do without it. But watch for its return . . . watch for Dreft!

NOW that the Teenie Weenie garden was growing nicely and the kitchen roof, which had been demolished by a baseball, had been fixed, the little people thought they had earned a holiday. They decided to have a picnic in the big woods and the day before was a busy one for the Teenie Weenie women and the Cook. They made enough Teenie Weenie sandwiches to completely fill a large Teenie Weenie basket, which had been fashioned from half an English walnut shell. The lady of Fashion made an acorn bowl of Teenie Weenie salad, and the Chinaman baked a basket of rice cakes, altho he was so busy with his laundry work he would not be able to go to the picnic. All the little folks were greatly excited over the picnic, and then the night before the Lady of Fashion sprained her ankle.

She stepped on a raisin seed, turned her tiny ankle, and the next morning it was swollen too badly to make the long walk to the woods. The Teenie Weenies wanted to put off the picnic until she was able to go along, and they would have probably done that very thing if Tilly Titter, the English sparrow, hadn't heard of the accident. She flew down in front of the shoe house and told the Teenie Weenies that she would send her husband to carry the Lady of Fashion to the picnic.

"I'd take you myself if I wasn't so busy gettin' worms for my younguns," she said out of the side of her beak, for she was holding a fat caterpillar in her mouth. "My 'usband can take you there and come and get you when you want to come 'ome. 'e spends most of 'is time fightin', and 'e might just as well be doin' somethin' useful and 'elpful."

Tilly flew away and in a few minutes her husband appeared. It was plain to see that Tilly had made him come, and that he was not very happy about being forced into being an airplane. However, he squatted down and the General and the Policeman helped the Lady of Fashion up onto his back. The Cook handed up to her the acorn basket of freshly baked rice cakes which the Chinaman had brought, and the bird took her to the woods, where a number of the little people had gathered.

The General, the Policeman, and the Cook came along a little later, and the Teenie Weenies spent a pleasant day in the woods. The Lady of Fashion was able to hobble about some with the help of the tiny cane the Old Soldier had made for her out of a toothpick, and in the late afternoon the bird came back and flew the Lady of Fashion home.

OXYDOL
washes so CLEAN your biggest wash comes
WHITE WITHOUT BLEACHING

NO WONDER IT'S WHITE! OXYDOL'S LIVELY SUDS LIFT DIRT OUT! EVEN THE GRIMIEST WASH COMES WHITE WITHOUT BLEACHING!

FAR AHEAD of Most Soaps in preventing "Dirty Grayness"!

Tests Prove Oxydol Washes Clothes CLEANER and WHITER!

Yes, Whiter! In wash tests Oxydol proved that it washes clothes cleaner and whiter than many other soaps which, unlike Oxydol, fail to get out that last possible trace of stubborn dirt and grime!

White and Bright Wash After Wash! Soaps often leave behind tiny discoloring particles caused by dirt in the clothes and the "hardness" of the water. Even with careful rinsing some of these impurities stick in the clothes and turn gray or yellow under ironing heat. But Oxydol combats "dirty grayness" in an unusual way. It actually helps prevent grayness particles from forming in the clothes!

New "Hustle-Bubble" Suds Lift Dirt Out! Oxydol's new "Hustle-Bubble" suds are so active they lift dirt out. And they work longer, too—long after suds from many other soaps are all tired out. Yes, with Oxydol all your white things—except for unusual stains—come so clean they're White Without Bleaching. Sparkling white!

So Safe for Colors, Too! Oxydol is so safe for wash colors, rayons and your own precious hands. Colored clothes come so clean they fairly sparkle!

Next washday use Oxydol. Remember...

OXYDOL WASHES WHITE WITHOUT BLEACHING!

AVOID SOAP WASTE! Soap is made of vital war materials, so soap waste is war waste! Make your Oxydol go farther!

N. AREAS MEET 7TH WAR LOAN QUOTA 3 TIMES

E. Lake View Leads Communities

Tripling their quota of $12,000,000 in the 7th war loan drive, workers of OCD district 6 received pledges totaling $36,394,330 to lead position in the city-wide campaign.

The amount represents 112,536 subscriptions for series E, F, G, and C bonds, and is the largest obtained thus far during house to house canvasses. District 6 participation in the seven war loan drives has accounted for more than $160,000,000

The leading community in value of pledges is East Lake View with a total of $8,712,086 against a quota of $1,750,000. The sum exceeds all previous subscriptions obtained in this or any other district of the city. Harry Pinter is community commander and Robert Himmel is war bond chairman.

Near North Side Second

Near north side ranks second with pledges of $7,200,515. Joseph L. Delacour is community commander; Henry Cassriel, lieutenant commander; and Clarence A. McCarthy, war loan chairman.

Lee Ross, district director, in announcing the results, said much of the drive's success was due to the coöperation of north shore banks and their leader, W. H. Davis, division war bond chairman.

Individual accomplishments also helped to spur the drive. Col. George T. Langhorne, 79, 1120 Lake Shore dr., reported pledges of $562,000 for his block. He was assisted in the canvass by Winfield Ellis, Chicago and Cook county chairman for the 1st war loan drive.

Best Canvass Record

In the Clark-Devon community Meyer C. Friedman obtained 351 subscriptions totaling $131,461 from the 272 homes in his block.

Uptown-Clark st. and the Howard business districts not only topped their quotas but chalked up the best canvass coverage records. With a population of 12,527 the Uptown-Clark st. group reported 5,840 subscriptions totaling $1,412,180. This community's quota was $400,000. Howard business district canvassed 98 per cent of the residents and chalked up results of $781,052. Victor Deckert is Uptown-Clark st. community commander and Walter Grau Jr. is war bond chairman. Howard business district commander is Joseph Klise. War bond chairman is George Deacon.

300 Per Cent Over Top!

Clark-Diversey with $1,336,042 and Edgewater with $1,956,370 oversubscribed their community quotas by more than 300 per cent. J. E. Beardmore and William Ellsworth are the commanders and Mrs. Ruth Satterlee and Clyde Bailey are war bond chairmen.

Other totals reported are: Lincoln park, $2,906,305; Lincoln-Fullerton, $1,127,613; West Lake View, $1,188,152; Sheridan-Center, $2,241,094; Ravenswood, $1,021,879; North Center, $436,955; Central-Uptown, $3,575,421; Lincoln square, $615,215; Northtown, $468,733; Devon-Sheridan, $413,971; Clark-Diversey, $535,345; Rogers Park-Clark st., $478,868; and Indian Boundary, $584,449.

Get an Early Start on Christmas Presents at Church Vacation School

"More fun than playing dolls," says 8 year old Sandra Ward as she uses hammer and saw in the junior intermediate department of the North Shore Baptist Church Vacation school, which is closing a three week session. Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Ward, 5241 Kenmore av., Sandra is one of 80 children who made gifts which will be given next Christmas to youngsters in Central Baptist Children's home, Maywood. Mrs. Emma Lambert Milne was head of the department.

The story of Peter Rabbit, his little Cottontails, and that villain, Mr. MacGregor, pleases tots of every generation, not excepting members of the vacation school beginners department. Mrs. Leslie Reid, superintendent, reads as Mrs. David Taylor, second from left, looks on. Mrs. John R. Gillespie stands on the stair with the youngest member of the group, 2½ year old Mary Lee Summers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Summers, 4717 Malden st. Mrs. Harold Culbreath, right, sits with the children.

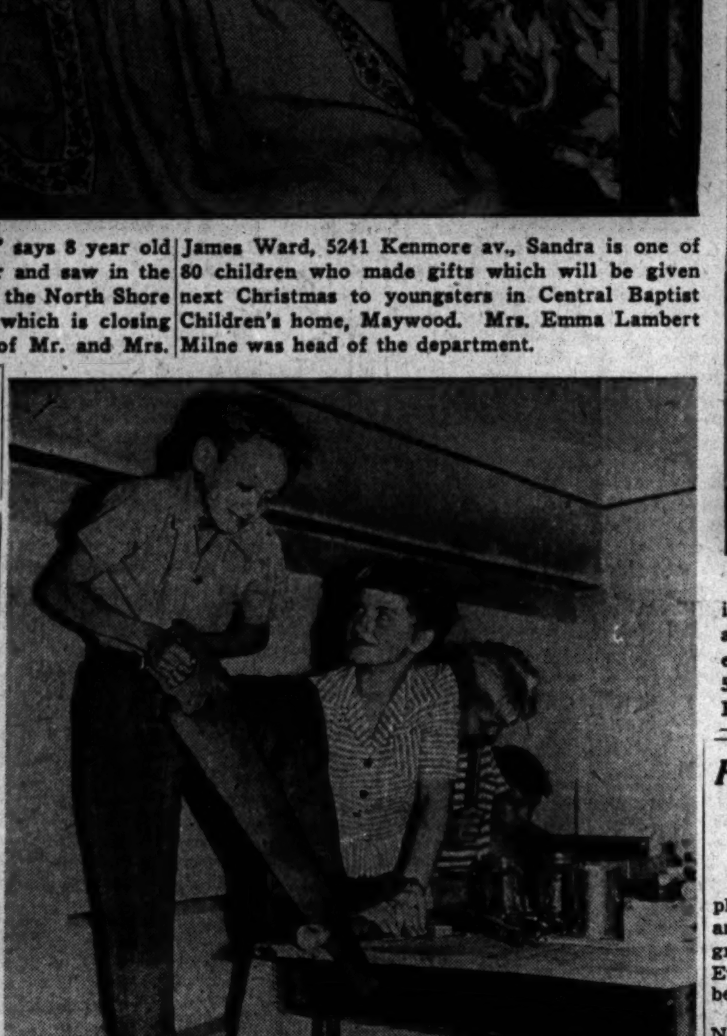
OPA rules may be a wet blanket to housewives, but not to girls in the cooking class who learned to use sugarless recipes, with jam and molasses as sweets substitutes. Of course, most of the fun was eating their own baking hot from the oven! Dorothy Lalumia, 10, of 5240 Clark st., runs the egg beater, as Betty Ann Noren, 13, of 1427 Berwyn av., sifts flour.



Women can be a help even in carpentry, Tommy Mannon, 5943 Lakewood av., finds as Mary Lou Buck, 857 Addison st., a young assistant in the junior intermediate department, holds the wood steady. Bruce Stults, 5338 Wayne av., second from right, and Billy Brown, 1426 Summerdale av., also are making Christmas gifts. Approximately 200 children 2 to 13 years old enrolled in the vacation school, conducted by 35 teachers and assistants. Crafts, music, drama, cooking, and sewing were taught. Mrs. Willis A. Reed was dean of the school.

PARKS DEVELOP PROGRAM FOR TASTES OF ALL

Residents Are Urged to Sign Up

In summers before the war, when folks studied vacation folders, they could take their choice of summer play spots without regard to travel restrictions. This year's wistful armchair travelers can make their dreams of fishing, yachting, participation in a game of shuffleboard, or just lazing in the sun come true by visiting their local park.

The park district has designed summer activity programs at 14 north side parks to meet the tastes of men, women, and children of all ages. Patriotic stay-at-homes will benefit in health and morale by registering in one or more of the sports, games, or craft classes, or thru participating in the evening social events.

Day Camps for Children

Children's day camps will be functioning at Welles park, 2333 Sunnyside av.; Stanton park, Evergreen and Vine sts.; Hamlin park, Wellington and Hoyne avs.; Indian Boundary park, 2500 Lunt av.; Seward park, 375 W. Elm st.; Paul Revere park, 2509 Irving park rd.; River park, 5100 N. Francisco av.; Simons park, 1640 N. Drake av., and Chase park, Ashland and Leland avs.

Young people enrolled in the camps will spend the entire day in outdoor activities such as sports, crafts, games, and instruction in nature lore. They will associate with children of their own age, take part in group activities, and lunch out of doors.

Will Teach Swimming

Special learn-to-swim courses are being offered children and adults at Hamlin, Stanton, Welles, and Lincoln parks. Camera fans will have the opportunity of developing their shots in the dark rooms at Chase park. Sand sculpture, bait casting, war gardening, and aircraft classes are among the more unusual offerings for adults.

For the inactively inclined there are handicraft and artcraft, story hours, croquet, and lapidary and jewelry making classes. Several parks within the north shore area will schedule outdoor motion pictures, and shows by park dramatic groups.

Choral and instrumental concerts and social and square dancing programs will be announced at several parks later.

Among Play Supervisors

V. K. Brown, director of recreation for the park district, has announced that play leaders and supervisors will be provided at each park wherever the present man power situation permits.

Participating park supervisors are: A. R. Carpenter, Paul Revere park; John Mario, Seward; Avis Overfield, Indian Boundary; H. G. Gaffney, Hamlin; Mary Joyce, Stanton; E. E. Schwartz, Welles; Gertrude Fern, Lake Shore park; 308 Lake Shore dr.; Robert Finn, 2650 Peterson rd.; Clara Boldenow, Pottawattomie, Rogers and Hilldale avs.; John Duffield, Chase; George Sonnenleiter, Simons, and James A. Vanderbosch, River park.

The community singing will continue a custom established in February, 1942, when Wilmette neighbors formed groups to "Sing for Victory." Sponsored by the music committee of the OCD, 18 groups, each with a membership of 50 or more persons, joined the movement. The tuneful recreation became so popular that the OCD and the Community council of Wilmette planned the present series.

WORRY IS OLD STORY IN THIS CALM MUSEUM

Oriental Institute Is Reassuring

The fifth of a series of articles telling of interesting places available to Chicagoans who are vacationing at home due to war time travel conditions.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET

Chicagoans desirous of starting out their vacations by forgetting the cares of today might profit by traveling back to the beginnings of civilization. At the Oriental institute they may look upon mummies of Egyptians who did their worrying 3,000 years ago. The Egyptians were bothered about taxes and laundry and other problems. The world has gone on.

Wars are an old story. On a column of dried mud, an Assyrian king back in 700 B. C. recorded his military victories. He tells us how with battering rams—the attack of infantry, by tunnels, breaches, and the use of axes he took the cities of Hezekiah.

An Early Propagandist

The Oriental institute not only displays the royal annals of Sennacherib, but a translation of the tooled inscriptions on the prism in the glass case can be found in the institute's library. The other side of the story is told in the Bible.

The Assyrian king apparently utilized propaganda in that far off day for he omits any reference to a plague with which, according to the Hebrew historian, his army was afflicted.

Looting the enemy's treasures was not an original idea with Goering. A ruling prince in Palestine 3,300 years ago left evidence that he knew what to expect from conquerors at the gate. He was successful in keeping his personal belongings hidden until eight years ago when the Institute's Megiddo expedition discovered them beneath a palace floor.

Fancy Razor Strop

Vacationing Chicagoans may gaze upon the cache. The prince owned a cosmetic jar rimmed with gold, a razor strop capped with gold, a ring with scarab setting, and beads of granulated gold. Within a glass case at the institute, they are still being safeguarded.

Travel had its difficulties in 2800 B. C. The Sumerian chariot had the advantage of not needing gas. A reconstructed model at the institute shows one of the chariots drawn by four patient onagers [wild donkeys]. The charioteer appears prepared for rough going as he stands astride a small ledge fixed above the axle. The wheels have nonskid rims to give them a better grip on the ground. Better to have stayed home in those early days unless the trip was really necessary.

If you have an idea that skyscrapers are something new, study the institute's model of the "Tower of Babel" made after a survey of the actual foundations in Babylon. Ancient architects used the same set-back plan that is utilized by modern builders.

Solomon as Horse Trader

The model of Solomon's stables also was based on the Institute's

OLD EVANSTON PARISH PLANS $125,000 WING

St. Mark's Will Enlarge Church House

Members of St. Mark's Episcopal church, 1509 Ridge av., Evanston, have completed plans for a post-war three story addition to the parish house to cost an estimated minimum of $125,000. Construction will begin as soon as material and labor are available.

Plans were initiated to provide space for an activities program for all ages. Members of the building fund committee pointed out that social facilities of the present building, completed in 1934, are slight since all space is given to classrooms, workrooms, and offices. Waiting rooms, additional office space, kitchen facilities, and an assembly room are needed, they said.

The church, third oldest religious organization in the suburb, numbers among its workers families from Lincoln park to Highland Park and west to Skokie. It has been called the mother church of the north shore, since several large parishes in the area have stemmed from it.

Plan Social Hall for 500

Perhaps the most important part of the addition will be a social hall on the second floor, 40 by 78 feet, with a seating capacity of 500. At one end will be a stage 24 by 35 feet. Dressing rooms, 16 by 16 feet, and a space 7 by 40 feet will be provided backstage. The hall also will accommodate banquets for 50 to 300 persons.

Adjoining the hall opposite the stage will be ample kitchen and serving space, with a dumbwaiter from a supply room on the ground floor. On the other side of the kitchen there will be two women's guild rooms, each about 25 by 30 feet, with lockers for coats and sewing machines and other equipment. Groups numbering 12 to 100 may be served in the guild rooms.

Outstanding additions to the first floor will include four classrooms, each about 16 by 18 feet, and a Sunday school chapel, 23 by 40 feet, seating 120 children. With an outside entrance, the chapel also may be used for weddings and other special events. A vestibule to the Ridge av. entrance will be built.

Parlor on First Floor

A church parlor 30 by 37 feet will be formed on the first floor by removing partitions. Enlarged offices, new dressing rooms, and increased storage space also will be provided.

Ground floor blueprints provide for large rooms for Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts, with adjacent showers, dressing rooms, and lockers. Storage facilities for kitchen supplies and janitor's equipment and a shaft for an elevator will be included. An entrance from Grove st. with a corridor and stair to the first floor will be built.

Committee members are Dr. Dwight F. Clark, Warren F. Sarle, Mrs. H. G. Marchant, Henry Barber, G. R. Folds, H. M. Huxley, H. V. Lytle Jr., D. S. Mackie, P. P. Page, Mrs. Basil R. Pither, E. D. Richards, Arthur Rogers, H. A. Scandrett, W. M. Schuemann, K. E. Shepard, and Mrs. Thomas I. Stacey. Dr. Harold L. Bowen is pastor.

Church Begins in 1864.

St. Mark's was organized in 1864, four months after Evanston was incorporated in December, 1863. First services were held in the old chapel of Northwestern university. Soon a wooden church was erected on a plot of ground given by university trustees, the site of the present Evanston postoffice.

In 1871 membership was strengthened greatly when the Chicago fire sent many persons to live in Evanston. In 1889 the group bought a lot at Ridge av. and Grove st., and in 1895 the present church was dedicated. The first parish house was built in 1904.

FRISCO PARLEY DISCUSSION SET BY METHODISTS

The united nations charter and proposals made by various church conferences during the last year will be compared in a panel discussion, "The Charter and the Churches," sponsored by the committee on world peace of First Methodist church, Evanston, at 8 p. m. July 23 in Glenna hall of the church.

Speakers, all of whom attended the San Francisco Conference, will be Dr. T. Otto Nall, managing editor of the Christian Advocate; Leland D. Case, editor of The Rotarian magazine, and Frances M. Nall, history teacher in Evanston Collegiate institute.

Dr. Ernest F. Tittle, pastor, will be chairman. The arrangements committee includes Mrs. Russell Burge, Harold Nauman, John D. Hastings, Mrs. Adella Langill, Vernon G. Lippitt, and R. E. Wolseley.

SUPER FORT VET OF WILMETTE BECOMES MAJOR

Veteran of 20 Super Fortress missions over Japan, Van R. Parker of Wilmette has been promoted to major at a bomber base on Guam. He is commander of the B-29, "City of Chicago," assigned to 21st bomber command's 314th bombardment wing.

Maj. Parker entered military service in May, 1941, after a year's employment in Chicago. He has been on Guam since last February.

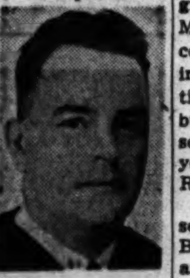
NAME EVANSTON RESIDENT DEAN AT ILLINOIS TECH

Dr. John Day Larkin, 1732 Chicago av., Evanston, has been appointed dean of arts and sciences at Illinois Institute of Technology to succeed Dr. C. L. Clarke. He is former chairman of the institute's political and social science department and has been national WLB mediation representative and regional WLB vice chairman.

A graduate of Berea [Ky.] college in 1923, Dr. Larkin received a master's degree from the University of Chicago and a doctor's degree from Harvard university, Cambridge, Mass.

Dr. Larkin taught in Hamline university, St. Paul, Minn.; the University of North Dakota at Grand Forks; Harvard university, and the College of the City of New York before coming to Tech in 1937.

DR. O. A. MUECKE TO FILL PULPIT IN RAVENSWOOD



Dr. Muecke

The Rev. Otto A. Muecke will conduct his first service as pastor of Ravenswood Evangelical and Reformed church, Pensacola and Hoyne avs., at 11 a. m. Aug. 5. He succeeds the Rev. Paul R. Meyer, who has accepted the pastorate of Salem church, New Orleans, La.

Dr. Muecke comes from St. Stephen's church, Merrill, Wis. He was pastor of Zion church, LeSueur, Minn., for 18 years. He is a member of the Commission on Higher Education of the Evangelical and Reformed church national council and a delegate to the Alliance of Reformed Churches. He was a member of the North Wisconsin synod board of examiners and for eight years was president of the Northern synod.

Wil Be Fifth Pastor

Dr. Muecke will be the fifth pastor of Ravenswood church since its organization in 1887 as St. Johannes Evangelical church. One pastor, the Rev. Alfred E. Meyer, served the congregation more than 30 years.

The church is an outgrowth of a German mission established by the New England Congregational church in 1885 in a chapel at Sedgwick and Blackhawk sts. Two years later Dr. G. A. Zimmermann, a minister and Chicago public schools instructor in German, assumed temporary leadership of the group, an arrangement which lasted 15 years. In 1894 the body severed its connection with the Congregational church and became a member of the Evangelical synod.

Build Church in 1923

Turning its attention to finding a suitable church building, the congregation purchased a building in Mohawk st., formerly used by Lincoln Park Congregational church, in May, 1895. They met at that location until 1923 when the present building, a gymnasium, and a parsonage were completed. In the same year the group became known as Ravenswood Evangelical church.

Almost as old as the church itself is its monthly publication. Begun by Dr. Zimmermann in 1890 as the Anzeiger, it has been printed without interruption since then. It now is called the Ravenswood Echo.

A recent development of the congregation has been the formation of a Council of Christian Education, which, in addition to directing Sunday School activities, has initiated a monthly social program to make the church a community center.

Scholarship for Graduate Study Given Barbara Bell

Barbara Bell, daughter of Mrs. George I. Bell, Winnetka, has received a Harvard Annex fellowship for graduate study at Radcliffe college, Cambridge, Mass. Miss Bell expects to enroll this fall and study for a doctorate in astronomy. She received a bachelor of arts degree summa cum laude from Radcliffe in 1944. Last year she attended Northwestern university. The fellowship is awarded annually to a Radcliffe graduate.

VETS ACQUIRING SKILLS TAUGHT BY VOLUNTEERS

It takes a steady hand to tie a fly or fashion bright colored fishing lures which will sell in the commercial market. Fishermen are a demanding breed.

But many would pause in the midst of flipping his bait if he realized that the fly, which was getting the big fellows, had been tied by some veteran recently home from the war whose fishing trips are taken in fancy on a hospital bed.

At Great Lakes naval hospital hands are being taught control, and fingers, which no longer stiffen at their task of getting the ammunition away, are skilfully lacing the flys. This is but one of arts and crafts being taught by volunteers from the arts and skills division of the Red Cross.

Need for More Teachers

Men and women employed as professional artists, commercial designers, musicians, as well as those who work in arts and crafts as a hobby, are donating their leisure hours to instructing the patients in the hospital at Great Lakes and at Vaughan and Gardiner hospitals.

Tho the corps is well filled with north shore recruits, the need for more volunteers from this area is great. Each month finds a rising total of wounded or sick veterans home for treatment. These men may not need a paying hobby, but they must have diversion which will be suited to their handicaps. More soldiers and sailors want teachers in fly tieing and lure making.

Shows Paintings at Theater

Release from nervous tension, and renewal of faith in their own abilities have come to these veterans thru arts and craft instruction. Some even enter on new careers as has Rex Mason, hospitalized for two months at Great Lakes after one and a half years in the Pacific theater.

Max recently had a one man show of his paintings, which were largely inspired thru volunteer instructors, at the Esquire theater, Oak st. and Michigan av. Several of his pieces have been sold and Max now is diligently following a new course—in textile design.

Persons who have skills or hobbies which can be taught veterans are asked to apply from 4 to 5 p. m. the 1st and 3d Wednesday of the month at the Art institute, Adams st. and Michigan av. Volunteers should bring at least three examples of their work for presentation to the admissions committee. Candidates will be given an orientation course at the institute before assignment to one of the hospitals.

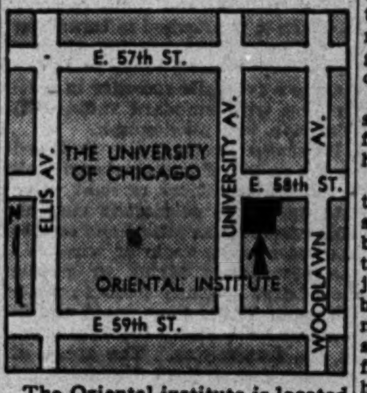
discoveries and it indicates that Solomon, as well as being a wise man, was a horse trader on an international scale.

Visitors are amazed to learn that the Egyptian bed at the Institute is more than 5,000 years old and they agree that the material of which it was made is still in remarkably good condition, but they are puzzled by its small size. They ask if it were not a child's bed. It is explained that such beds were customarily short, obliging the sleeper to lie with legs drawn up.

At the Institute there is the black stone statue of a falcon that was the sacred bird of the solar god, Horus, whose temple, in 1090 B. C., was at Edfu. Now this bird gave plenty of advice to persons who have long since passed from the earth, but it had but two answers, yes or no. Look closely and you will find a hole drilled thru it from head to base. The branch opening thru the beak suggests that the bird made a movement in response to the manipulation of strings. The stone bird has survived his questioners by too many centuries to be taken to task by any of them now for any of its faulty decisions.

King Tut a Young Ruler

One of the visitor's first impressions of the colossal statue of Tutenkhamon is that he was a young man when he ruled Egypt. The statue, fully restored, is one of two the Institute discovered in its crusade to uncover records which man had left behind and which nature had filed away in stratified deposits. Both statues were cut in red quartzite. The second is in the Cairo museum in Egypt.



The Oriental institute is located at 58th st. and University av. It may be reached by taking Illinois Central trains to the 59th st. station; the elevated to 51st st. and transferring to an eastbound street car, and street cars No. 1 to 55th st. and University av., and Nos. 4 and 5 to 58th st. and Cottage Grove av.

Awe inspiring is the Institute's Assyrian winged bull from King Sargon's palace that fills the east wall of the Egyptian hall. The great human-headed bull was carved from a single block of stone, weighs 40 tons, and stands more than 16 feet high.

So massive is the exhibit which was found in a dozen pieces that it has been given a foundation separate from the rest of the building. The visitor is a puny figure before this guardian creature that was called a "cherub" by the ancients.

We are told that this cherub was one of a pair adjoining another pair that flanked the portal leading from the palace courtyard to the throne-room. He was imposing enough to give the king's callers an inferiority complex.

The Institute appeals especially to scholars, but many who have had no formal training in archeology visit here time and again.

The floor plan of the museum in the James Henry Breasted hall is so arranged that visitors need not be confused by the array of collections. There is an information desk just inside the entrance of the building. Arrangements are gladly made for groups from schools or societies and guides are provided free during the regular museum hours.

The five halls—Iranian, Babylonian, Assyrian, Palestinian, and Egyptian—with their many alcoves, surround a court. Some of the objects have been acquired by purchase, but most of them have been drawn from the Institute's 14 field expeditions.

Many organized groups have thought it worth while to come a long distance to visit the Institute. Chicagoans need not travel far to round out their knowledge of the Near East. Guides have become familiar with the remark:

"I'm coming again. I didn't realize the Oriental Institute offered so much to see in such a short time."

I was Taken For a Ride...

. . . just two weeks ago July! It was a heavenly day and I was in the mood for a new emotional lift. So . . . when Jack, my great big hunk o' man (just discharged from the Air Corps) said: "Honey, what say we do a little soaring in the clouds?" I came quick with the answer, "Jack, my lad, I'm your gal."

So . . . we hied ourselves out to Pal-Waukee Airport . . . got us a solid ship and as easy as a blackbird whistling a tune we were off the ground and in the air and off into the wild blue yonder. Came the lift . . . came a new lyric sweetness . . . and when we touched the ground again, I was a sold pigeon that wanted to spread its wings and fly, fly, fly for ever after!

P. S. I'm on my third lesson now and believe me, gals and guys—THE AIR'S DEE-VINE!

SEE MANY USES FOR FACSIMILE AFTER THE WAR

Sends Printed, Pictorial Matter by Radio

BY LARRY WOLTERS

That word "facsimile" has been appearing with increasing frequency lately. In case you don't recall its meaning, facsimile involves the transmission of printed, pictorial, or other graphic matter by radio or telephone circuits. All works in this field for the public was stopped in December, 1941. It has been greatly developed since for war uses.

"The experience gained in developing and building [facsimile] for the armed services will be reflected in post-war models showing impressive advances in this art," a statement by Finch Telecommunications asserts. W. G. H. Finch, head of the company and a pioneer in this field, is serving as a commander in the navy.

Provides Permanent Record

Facsimile, like television, is visual. But television is transient, while facsimile provides a permanent, exact replica. It can transmit anything that can be written—maps, charts, signatures, legal documents, drawings, half tone photographs. It may be capable of transmitting newspapers into the homes of the nation.

The facsimile "recorder" or "printer" is automatic in its operation as long as the radio receiver to which it is attached is turned on and tuned to the sending station. Many radio receivers may some day include a facsimile recorder in combination with standard radio, FM, television, and phonograph.

Facsimile transmission is based on the ability of a photoelectric cell to change variations of light value into variations of electric current. This current is amplified and sent to the recorder by radio or wire. At the recorder a stylus or needle moves over specially treated recording paper at the same speed and in synchronization with the light beam at the transmitter. The speed of transmission, when typographical matter is sent, exceeds average reading speed.

Many Services Foreseen

Among the unique services that facsimile will provide is the reception of written or printed matter aboard machines in motion—planes, ships, trains, automobiles. The value of written messages is obvious. A plane pilot will have on file written messages or orders for reference at any time. Weather maps, storm warnings, barometric readings, wind velocity, and other data are reduced to permanent, visible records. Facsimile will relieve the pilot for attention to other matters.

Facsimile will have similar advantages for ships at sea, harbor tugs, lighters, and other craft, including fishing fleets. It will be useful for sending permanent messages long distances. In tests aboard the Queen Mary photographs were successfully transmitted to New York over a distance of 2,900 miles.

Useful in Police Work

In police radio work facsimile is expected to make for speed and accuracy of orders, secrecy, details of fingerprints, and identifications. Policemen on patrol, at precincts or in booths will get written messages. Cost of equipment, it is said, will be within reach of even the smallest police force.

In offices and industrial plants, facsimile may point the way to reduce the waste and some times dangers that result thru errors of misunderstanding. It will facilitate the rule, so often disregarded: Put it in writing.

Among the industries and professions which are showing an interest in this new medium of communication are newspapers, banks, distribution houses, hospitals, attorneys, railroads, chain stores, department stores, libraries, insurance companies, and manufacturing companies.

Luboshutz, Nemenoff Philharmonic Soloists

Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff, duo-pianists, will be soloists in Mozart's Concerto in E-flat major for Two Pianos and Orchestra on the New York Philharmonic program over WBBM-CBS at 2 p. m. today. The orchestra, conducted by George Szell, will offer the overture to Weber's "Der Freishutz" and Mendelssohn's "Italian" Symphony No. 4 in A major.

Sings with Lopez

Gerry Larsen sings on the Luncheon with Lopez show aired over W-G-N-Mutual Monday, Wednesday, and Friday at 12:30 p. m.

ROBERT QUICK IS SOLOIST ON THEATER OF AIR

A program of popular musical selections will be presented on the Summer Concert hour of the Chicago Theater of the Air from 9 to 10 p. m. Saturday over W-G-N, WGNB, and the Mutual network.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will speak.

Henry Weber will conduct the W-G-N concert orchestra and chorus. Bruce Foote, baritone, and Ruth Slater, contralto, are to be the principal singers. Robert Quick, concert master, will interpret Tschaikowsky's "Melodie" on the violin, accompanied by the orchestra.

Other numbers include "Pilgrim's Chorus" from "Tannhauser," by the chorus; "Air de Lia" from "L'Enfant Prodigue," by Ruth Slater; "Just a-Wearin' for You," by the chorus; "Bacchanale" from "Samson and Delilah," by the orchestra; "Open Thy Heart," by Miss Slater and chorus; "My Sword and I" from the "Three Musketeers," by Foote and chorus; "Morning Journal's Waltz" by the orchestra, and "Siboney," by the entire ensemble.

John Barclay will be narrator and John Mallow, announcer. Jack La Frandre, writer-producer of the series, will direct the performance.

Whiteman to Highspot 'Sweet Lady' on Air

Paul Whiteman record fans who recall his "Sweet Lady," made over 20 years ago, will hear a repeat of the record during "Now and Then" time on the Summer Show over WENR-ABC at 5 p. m. today. Other selections to be offered by the orchestra, Georgia Gibbs, and the Merry Macs include "Rosemary," "Singin' Down the Road," and "Baia."

Miss Lindley, who recently received her bachelor of science degree at St. Xavier's college, will continue her studies in physical therapy at Northwestern university medical school.

IMPORTANT NOTICE
to wage-earners in the Chicago area

DO YOU WANT TO SERVE YOUR COUNTRY?
DO YOU WANT TO PREPARE FOR THE FUTURE?

You are needed to take a job at Douglas at once!

We are building vitally needed aircraft . . . C-54 Combat Air Transports . . . designed for the conflict against Japan. No one knows how long it will take to defeat the Japanese. In any case, we do know that the real struggle is just beginning. Iwo Jima and Okinawa have shown us how bitterly our victory will be contested and how great the price in American lives. If we are unable to turn out the planes—needed now more than ever—thousands of American boys may die unnecessarily . . . because of our failure here in Chicago.

Some may object—"The war is almost over and now is not the time to take a so-called war job." But the war is NOT over. It is apparent that the most difficult and bloody phase is just starting.

Others may feel that they'd better "get set" now in a peacetime job before the flood of demobilization starts. But no real advantage can thus be gained. When complete demobilization comes—if it ever does—ability will find its own level everywhere. Each of us will then find and hold the job for which we are fitted. It is a law of nature.

Meanwhile we need more production workers—urgently! There is no better way to serve America and prepare for the future than by coming to work at Douglas . . . NOW!

NO CUTBACKS HERE

Instead of cutting production, our schedules are actually being increased. The Army wants more and more Douglas C-54's as fast as we can build them. To help us obtain workers needed to build them War Manpower Commission has granted us a No. 2 Labor Priority, higher than any other war plant in Chicagoland. This is your opportunity to learn the aviation trade. Apply at once.

MUSIC FESTIVAL OF NEGROES TO BE ON FRIDAY

Jones Will Direct Choir of 1,000

(Picture on page 2)

Music favorites—red hot band leaders as well as name singers from concert and musical comedy stages—will entertain at the sixth American Negro Musical festival Friday night at White Sox park. Based on past festival records, Friday's show is expected to draw 50,000 spectators.

J. Wesley Jones

An interracial choir of 1,000 voices, under direction of J. Wesley Jones, well known choral director, will exemplify the cause of racial good will to which the festival is dedicated.

Anne Brown, lyric soprano and the original Bess in George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," will repeat the melodies which she introduced and made famous. She also will be heard in Negro art and folk songs. Miss Brown soon will be seen in the film version of the life of the late George Gershwin, "Rhapsody in Blue."

Lionel Hampton to Play

Lionel Hampton, chosen the most outstanding band of the year in a poll of Chicago Defender readers, will add a hepcat flavor to the evening. In recognition of this distinction, Mayor Kelly has been asked to present a trophy to the band leader.

A solemn note will be interjected when a memorial ceremony honoring President Roosevelt will be held. Against a background of united nations flags a soldier and sailor color guard will stand at attention while the massed choir sings the favorite hymn of the late President, "Faith of Our Fathers." Petty Officer Graham Jackson, accordionist who played "Going Home" as the body of the President was borne from Warm Springs, Ga., will play that favorite again. Then the lights of the stadium will be darkened and the audience will stand for a moment of silent prayer.

Paul Muni in Show

Hollywood wil be represented at the festival by Paul Muni who will appear in a specially written dramatic sketch depicting interracial unity.

Outstanding among the evening performers will be the 1,000 voiced choir singing patriotic and religious songs. Director Jones was assisted in the training of this group by the following directors from south side churches:

Calvin B. Williams, John E. Rogers Jr., W. E. Gossett, Herbert Carter, Mrs. Cora W. Swift, George Gullett, Mrs. Omega King, Elmur Simpson, Mrs. Sadie B. Owens, Mrs. Antionette Tompkins, D. T. Birdwell, Blanche Thompson, E. C. Welch, Thomas A. Dorsey, Mrs. Marion Randall, William Orr, Ozias H. Taylor, James H. Barr, Herman Billingsly, and J. T. Campbell.

W. C. Handy Honorary Chairman

W. C. Handy, often called the Father of the Blues, has been chosen honorary chairman of the festival. The 72 year old composer of "St. Louis Blues" last year received a festival scroll for distinguished service in the field of music.

Other festival officers are: W. Louis Davis, president; John H. Sengstacks, vice president; Arthur W. Sewell, secretary-treasurer, and Dr. E. W. Beasley, assistant treasurer. Members of the board of directors are Whipple Jacobs, chairman; John D. Chamberlin, Jesse A. Jacobs, Mrs. Joe Louis Barrow, and Arthur Sewell.

Military organizations which will participate in the festival will include: John R. Tanner camp of United Spanish War Veterans; Maj. Charles L. Hunt post, V. F. W.; Shannon C. Taylor post, V. F. W.; George L. Giles American Legion post; 92d Division War Veterans' association; John H. Shelton Legion post; McDuffie Freeman Legion post; John R. Marshall Legion post; Military Order of the Cootie, V. F. W., and civil air patrol units.

Hurst Family Discovers Cookie Is Synonym for Chaos in Any Well Ordered Home

Any one who doesn't believe a bird can't develop into a major personality as well as a family pet should contact Mrs. Charles Hurst, 5470 Cornell av. and she will introduce them to Cookie, her 7 month old budgereegah, or love bird. Cookie, who is learning to talk, is anxious to display his personality before guests. His shrill whistle might be considered flattering except that it is directed for the most part to himself. He is never above lauding his own charms by informing guests that Cookie is a pretty bird. When all else fails to make visitors pay attention he will drag out, amid much noisy chatter, his toys which include clothespins, balls, bells, and other objects small enough to push or carry.

"Like most infants, baby birds have a tendency to take sudden cat naps," said Mrs. Hurst. It is plain that Topsy, Cookie's playmate, was about to do just that while perched on his mistress' finger to have his picture taken. Mopsy, his twin, seems to be slightly more alert. The birds, 6 weeks old, recently left their nest for the first time. They were taught to crack seeds and eat by their dad, and are now about to leave home, Mrs. Hurst hopes. In addition to Mopsy and Topsy, the Hurst's have two adult pairs, plus the incorrigible Cookie.

"It may look crude to humans," apologized Mrs. Hurst, "but the birds think their gymnasium is swell." Viewing the apparatus for the first time are Mopsy and Topsy, while Cookie, an old hand at gymnastics, gets an upside down, bird's eye view of his visitors. Mrs. Hurst has been raising birds for several years, but Cookie is the first one she ever taught to talk. "His vocabulary is rather limited as yet," she reported, "but he shows signs of becoming quite a conversationalist."

Trade Leaders Value Return to College Life

Why does an executive who has, seemingly at least, reached the top of the ladder, spend good time and money to go back to school?

Answers to this question, when asked of seven south side residents recently graduated from the University of Chicago's executive program, fell into two categories: Graduates believe management should keep abreast of business trends in a modern business civilization; none believed he was at the top of the ladder, rather that there is always room for growth.

Ralph E. Hoover, 1724 E. 70th st., of the personnel office of the Booz, Allen, and Hamilton Business Survey company, believes the executive who having attained his high position stops being interested in new business developments belongs to a vanishing race. He said, "Many's the time I've heard business men talk about going to night school to study economics or finance, but the courses offered never approached subjects from the management angle."

Thinks Time Well Spent

Hoover felt that the required 12 to 15 hours a week outside work was well worth it, even tho he was practically given up by his wife and two children, for he still feels he can "work up" to higher position.

Egil Krogh, 7136 Crandon av., merchandise manager of Marshall Field & Co.'s basement store, discovered the executive course when he was asked to select one of his employes to attend. "Before recommending it," he said, "I decided I could use a brushup on the subjects myself. So I selected myself to attend."

Both he and his assistant, David J. Jones, 5429 Drexel av., who also attended, agreed the course was just what they needed to bring them up to date on government regulations and help iron out problems between capital, management, and labor.

Instructors Praise Classes

Walgreen company's Cecil R. Campbell, 7935 Oglesby av., was first introduced to the course thru a friend, Willard J. Graham, director of business studies at the university. Following in the course are two more Walgreen men who will be graduated next year.

Instructors were most enthusiastic about this first group to be graduated. They declared that altho some students hadn't attended school for 20 years, that some never had gone to college, and that all probably were used to giving instead of taking orders, classes were the most stimulating they ever had conducted.

Form Alumni Association

"It was almost a two way proposition," said Prof. Graham, "for the instructors agree that while teaching business theory, they learned a great deal about the practical problems confronting business men daily."

As for the students, they have become so enthusiastic [especially since exams are over] about the program they are trying to promote an advanced course to be given next year. For the most part classes were informal, and extra curricular activities included such popular all-American sports as poker and gin rummy. These last sessions were so much fun, an alumni association already has been formed . . . possibly for just such activities.

Other south side graduates were Brice D. Maddox, 6856 Oglesby av.; Harold B. Smith, 5519 Blackstone av., and H. Fred Wilson, 7123 East End av.

SET DEADLINES FOR SINGERS IN MUSIC FESTIVAL

Entries Will Close at 6 P. M. Tomorrow

BY PHILIP MAXWELL

Deadline for entry of singers residing on the south and southwest sides of Chicago in the Cook county vocal contest for the 16th annual Chicago Music Festival will be tomorrow at 6 p. m. All entry blanks must be in festival headquarters in Tribune Tower at that time.

The two night south and southwest side contests will be held in the ballroom of the Shoreland hotel on Tuesday and Wednesday nights, July 24 and 25 at 7 p. m. The festival concert will be held in Soldiers' Field Saturday night, Aug. 18, when the two best men and two best women singers of the vocal contest will appear before 90,000 persons in the vocal finals.

Young Contralto Enters

Among the contestants already entered is Miss Winifred Heckman, 21 year old contralto of 7818 Crandon av. Miss Heckman won the contralto division of the Cook county contest in 1942 and has won many other competitions.

Another entrant is Carol Lois Merrill, 17, a coloratura soprano, who lives at 8216 Harper av. Miss Merrill was a precocious child. She carried a tune when she was 18 months old and began her piano training at the age of 4. She has perfect pitch. She is a graduate of Hirsch High school.

Vocal Teachers to Judge

On her entry blank she wrote: "I hope to make a career of music and appreciate the opportunities the Chicago Music Festival contests are offering young students."

The singers will be judged by a committee of three vocal teachers. Public admission price to the auditions is 50 cents. The festival and its preliminary contests are sponsored by the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc. All profits go to this fund. Dramatic sopranos, mezzos, tenors, contraltos, and baritones will be heard July 24 and on the following night coloratura and lyric sopranos, bass-baritones, and basses will be auditioned.

GRANDSON OF OLD POP ANSON STILL CAN BAT 'EM WHERE THEY AIN'T

Lt. Adrian Anson Cherry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carroll E. Cherry, 6919 Crandon av., recently was home on leave after nine months overseas as navigator-bombardier on an 8th air force B-24.

Lt. Adrian Cherry

Grandson and namesake of Adrian C. [Pop] Anson, well known ball player of the '90s, Lt. Cherry lived up to his grandad's reputation while stationed in England. The baseball team of which he was captain won 11 games out of 12 in a league of 12 teams within the various bombing groups.

A graduate of Hyde Park High school, Lt. Cherry was a student at the University of Chicago prior to entering service. He now has left for duty in the Pacific theater.

Appomattox Club to Hear of Attorney's African Trip

James B. Cashin, attorney and member of the civil service commission, will speak before the Appomattox club at 4 p. m. today in club headquarters, 3630 South Park way. He will be introduced by Roscoe Simmons, writer and orator. Cashin, who recently completed a war department assignment in Africa, will speak of his trip. The program is under direction of the civic committee of which James H. Clarke is chairman.

GREENWOOD AV. CENTER OPENS FOR CHILDREN

Baptists Back House of Friendship

The tentative title Friendship House, given to the new neighborhood club center at 7208 Greenwood av., would seem a particularly descriptive one, judging from the various activities and the spirit in which they are being offered the young people of the district.

The house was opened recently under auspices of the Elim Baptist church with the Rev. Carl H. Lundquist, pastor, as director. It is for children of all denominations. Its purpose, stated by the Rev. Mr. Lundquist, to whom the house is the realization of an old wish, is to "help keep children off the streets during the summer, simply by offering them a supervised program of activities in which they are interested."

Open Boys, Girls Clubs

With the opening of the building came the inauguration of a neighborhood Boys club and Girls club. Each will meet one evening a week. A two hour program has been planned with supervision in hobbycraft, making model airplanes, braiding, whittling, and wood work for boys; for girls braiding, basket weaving, sewing, painting, and cooking.

Helping the Rev. Mr. Lundquist are Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Swanson, 7231 Evans av.; Wesley Carlson, 7521 Kimbark av.; Ralph Carlson, 7343 University av.; Al Youngstrom, 7343 University av.; Mrs. Elsie Risberg, 7118 Dobson av., and Gloria Vonesh, 9237 Dobson av.

Offer General Recreation

Other activities will be sponsored thruout the summer. It will be the meeting place for Scout troops and teen-age groups in the evening. It will be open afternoons for the general recreation of youngsters who want to play pingpong, shuffleboard, darts, or just want company.

Center sponsored boys and girls groups are open to all youngsters 9 or older. The Rev. Mr. Lundquist emphasized that tho the house is sponsored by the church, the work is intended to help the community rather than to be just a local church project.

WORRY IS OLD STORY IN THIS CALM MUSEUM

Oriental Institute Is Reassuring

The fifth of a series of articles telling of interesting places available to Chicagoans who are vacationing at home due to war time travel conditions.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET

Chicagoans desirous of starting out their vacations by forgetting the cares of today might profit by traveling back to the beginnings of civilization. At the Oriental institute they may look upon mummies of Egyptians who did their worrying 3,000 years ago. The Egyptians were bothered about taxes and laundry and other problems. The world has gone on.

Wars are an old story. On a column of dried mud, an Assyrian king back in 700 B. C. recorded his military victories. He tells us how with battering rams—the attack of infantry, by tunnels, breaches, and the use of axes he took the cities of Hezekiah.

An Early Propagandist

The Oriental institute not only displays the royal annals of Sennacherib, but a translation of the tooled inscriptions on the prism in the glass case can be found in the institute's library. The other side of the story is told in the Bible.

The Assyrian king apparently utilized propaganda in that far off day for he omits any reference to a plague with which, according to the Hebrew historian, his army was afflicted.

Looting the enemy's treasures was not an original idea with Goering. A ruling prince in Palestine 3,300 years ago left evidence that he knew what to expect from conquerors at the gate. He was successful in keeping his personal belongings hidden until eight years ago when the Institute's Megiddo expedition discovered them beneath a palace floor.

Fancy Razor Strop

Vacationing Chicagoans may gaze upon the cache. The prince owned a cosmetic jar rimmed with gold, a razor strop capped with gold, a ring with scarab setting, and beads of granulated gold. Within a glass case at the institute, they are still being safeguarded.

Travel had its difficulties in 2800 B. C. The Sumerian chariot had the advantage of not needing gas. A reconstructed model at the institute shows one of the chariots drawn by four patient onagers [wild donkeys]. The charioteer appears prepared for rough going as he stands astride a small ledge fixed above the axle. The wheels have nonskid rims to give them a better grip on the ground. Better to have stayed home in those early days unless the trip was really necessary.

If you have an idea that skyscrapers are something new, study the institute's model of the "Tower of Babel" made after a survey of the actual foundations in Babylon. Ancient architects used the same set-back plan that is utilized by modern builders.

Solomon as Horse Trader

The model of Solomon's stables also was based on the Institute's discoveries and it indicates that Solomon, as well as being a wise man, was a horse trader on an international scale.

Visitors are amazed to learn that the Egyptian bed at the Institute is more than 5,000 years old and they agree that the material of which it was made is still in remarkably good condition, but they are puzzled by its small size. They ask if it were not a child's bed. It is explained that such beds were customarily short, obliging the sleeper to lie with legs drawn up.

At the Institute there is the black stone statue of a falcon that was the sacred bird of the solar god, Horus, whose temple, in 1090 B. C., was at Edfu. Now this bird gave plenty of advice to persons who have long since passed from the earth, but it had but two answers, yes or no. Look closely and you will find a hole drilled thru it from head to base. The branch opening thru the beak suggests that the bird made a movement in response to the manipulation of strings. The stone bird has survived his questioners by too many centuries to be taken to task by any of them now for any of its faulty decisions.

King Tut a Young Ruler

One of the visitor's first impressions of the colossal statue of Tutenkhamon is that he was a young man when he ruled Egypt. The statue, fully restored, is one of two the Institute discovered in its crusade to uncover records which man had left behind and which nature had filed away in stratified deposits. Both statues were cut in red quartzite. The second is in the Cairo museum in Egypt.

Awe inspiring is the Institute's Assyrian winged bull from King Sargon's palace that fills the east wall of the Egyptian hall. The great human-headed bull was carved from a single block of stone, weighs 40 tons, and stands more than 16 feet high.

Needs Separate Foundation

So massive is the exhibit which was found in a dozen pieces that it has been given a foundation separate from the rest of the building. The visitor is a puny figure before this guardian creature that was called a "cherub" by the ancients.

We are told that this cherub was one of a pair adjoining another pair that flanked the portal leading from the palace courtyard to the throne room. He was imposing enough to give the king's callers an inferiority complex.

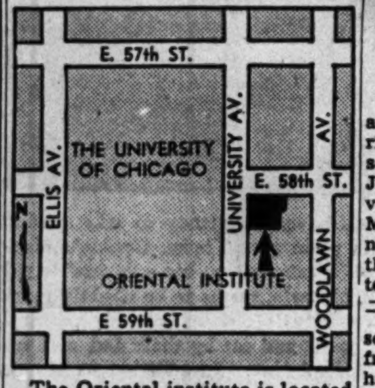
The Institute appeals especially to scholars, but many who have had no formal training in archeology visit here time and again.

The floor plan of the museum in the James Henry Breasted hall is so arranged that visitors need not be confused by the array of collections. There is an information desk just inside the entrance of the building. Arrangements are gladly made for groups from schools or societies and guides are provided free during the regular museum hours.



The Oriental institute is located at 58th st. and University av. It may be reached by taking Illinois Central trains to the 59th st. station; the elevated to 51st st. and transferring to an eastbound street car, and street cars No. 1 to 55th st. and University av., and Nos. 4 and 5 to 58th st. and Cottage Grove av.

The five halls—Iranian, Babylonian, Assyrian, Palestinian, and Egyptian—with their many alcoves, surround a court. Some of the objects have been acquired by purchase, but most of them have been drawn from the Institute's 14 field expeditions.

Many organized groups have thought it worth while to come a long distance to visit the Institute. Chicagoans need not travel far to round out their knowledge of the Near East. Guides have become familiar with the remark:

"I'm coming again. I didn't realize the Oriental Institute offered so much to see in such a short time."

LOVE BIRD TAKES DIP IN GIN BATH; STAGGERS TO TOP

BY JANET PECK

Strangers entering the Charles Hurst apartment at 5470 Cornell av. often are surprised to hear a shrill noise such as might be given by sailors admiring the passing scenery.

"Surprise turns to laughter, however, when they meet the whistler himself . . . the object of his own affections—absorbedly admiring himself in the mirror while he whistles and chatters, "Cookie! Pret-ty bird."

Visitors have to agree with him . . . Cookie is a pretty bird, with his bright blue plummage and shoebutton eyes typical of the budgereegah species, commonly known as love birds. Perhaps he has a right to such out-and-out vanity, for in addition to great beauty, Cookie is learning to talk!

He Starts from Scratch

He was raised from an egg by Mrs. Hurst, who is taking his education in hand. "He's only seven months' old," she apologized, "so his vocabulary is limited, but he's a good listener. That's one of the requirements, they say, of a good talker."

As the owner says, he's a good listener, so good he practically sticks his head in your mouth while you're talking. He not only wants people to say something, but to say it to him.

For an infant bird, Cookie has had some thrilling experiences. Not long ago when the Hursts were serving cocktails the little egotist was showing off as he always does when guests are present. Just to be smart he accepted a swallow of gin. Just to be doubly sophisticated he did it again. The third time he fell in the glass. His dignity upset, Cookie sank to the depths of the drink, his wings bedraggled, his tail feathers frantically waving. Had his vocabulary been more extensive he, no doubt, would have "sworn off the darn stuff."

Bird Takes Flier

Even more tragic, if possible, was the time he flew out an open window. Clipped wings don't make for long distance flying. His gay blue feathers practically stood on end with fear as the wind buffeted him about in an adjacent tree.

Once safely home again he quickly regained his old jauntiness and in nothing flat was climbing his play stand, a sort of miniature gymnastic set with ladders, swings, and little tin mirrors to flatter his vanity.

"He's a most affectionate pet, but he does love to tease," Mrs. Hurst insists. Just how she tells when he's kissing and when he's biting, and when he's teasing or being ornery is something only a bird lover must know. People have been known to shrink at something less than an exotic blue bird with a gleam in his eye swooping down in search of a landing site on their shoulders.

All Is Forgiven

A lot of things look better at a distance, however, and once the little feathered fiend is back on the floor demanding attention by bobbing his head and ringing the little bell he holds, some of his past trespasses are forgiven.

Whether he realizes it, other members of his species are living in the kitchen. Here in cages Mrs. Hurst has two more pairs of birds, plus two recently hatched young. Here is Cookie's father, Frisco, helping his mate SanFran raise another brood, while the other couple chatters bird-talk. "Cookie is kept apart," said Mrs. Hurst, "on the theory that that is the way to get him to talk."

This is the first "talker" the couple has had. They have been rasing the birds as a hobby for several years and this, plus their ardent enthusiasm for photography, has resulted in a scrapbook full of pictures of the birds at all ages.

SEE MANY USES FOR FACSIMILE AFTER THE WAR

Sends Printed, Pictorial Matter by Radio

BY LARRY WOLTERS

That word "facsimile" has been appearing with increasing frequency lately. In case you don't recall its meaning, facsimile involves the transmission of printed, pictorial, or other graphic matter by radio or telephone circuits. All works in this field for the public was stopped in December, 1941. It has been greatly developed since for war uses.

"The experience gained in developing and building [facsimile] for the armed services will be reflected in post-war models showing impressive advances in this art," a statement by Finch Telecommunications asserts. W. G. H. Finch, head of the company and a pioneer in this field, is serving as a commander in the navy.

Provides Permanent Record

Facsimile, like television, is visual. But television is transient, while facsimile provides a permanent, exact replica. It can transmit anything that can be written—maps, charts, signatures, legal documents, drawings, half tone photographs. It may be capable of transmitting newspapers into the homes of the nation.

The facsimile "recorder" or "printer" is automatic in its operation as long as the radio receiver to which it is attached is turned on and tuned to the sending station. Many radio receivers may some day include a facsimile recorder in combination with standard radio, FM, television, and phonograph.

Facsimile transmission is based on the ability of a photoelectric cell to change variations of light value into variations of electric current. This current is amplified and sent to the recorder by radio or wire. At the recorder a stylus or needle moves over specially treated recording paper at the same speed and in synchronization with the light beam at the transmitter. The speed of transmission, when typographical matter is sent, exceeds average reading speed.

Many Services Foreseen

Among the unique services that facsimile will provide is the reception of written or printed matter aboard machines in motion—planes, ships, trains, automobiles. The value of written messages is obvious. A plane pilot will have on file written messages or orders for reference at any time. Weather maps, storm warnings, barometric readings, wind velocity, and other data are reduced to permanent, visible records. Facsimile will relieve the pilot for attention to other matters.

Facsimile will have similar advantages for ships at sea, harbor tugs, lighters, and other craft, including fishing fleets. It will be useful for sending permanent messages long distances. In tests aboard the Queen Mary photographs were successfully transmitted to New York over a distance of 2,900 miles.

Useful in Police Work

In police radio work facsimile is expected to make for speed and accuracy of orders, secrecy, details of fingerprints, and identifications. Policemen on patrol, at precincts or in booths will get written messages. Cost of equipment, it is said, will be within reach of even the smallest police force.

In offices and industrial plants, facsimile may point the way to reduce the waste and some times dangers that result thru errors of misunderstanding. It will facilitate the rule, so often disregarded: Put it in writing.

Among the industries and professions which are showing an interest in this new medium of communication are newspapers, banks, distribution houses, hospitals, attorneys, railroads, chain stores, department stores, libraries, insurance companies, and manufacturing companies.

COL. F. X. KREBS PRESENTED WITH CROIX DE GUERRE

Was the Leader of Troop Carrier Group

Col. Frank Krebs

In ceremonies at Chartres, France, recently Col. Frank X. Krebs, whose parents reside at 658 E. 91st-st., was awarded the croix de guerre with palm by the French government for his part in the liberation of that country.

Col. Krebs, who enlisted in the army air forces in 1931, was one of the first army aviators to be sent to Alaska at the outbreak of the war to prepare air defenses there. Completing his assignment, he returned to this country and joined the newly formed troop carrier command.

Given Troop Carrier Command

He was given command of the 440th troop carrier group at the time of its activation, and after completing training, led it in combat from D-day to V-E day. After dropping the 101st air borne division in Normandy, Col. Krebs and his group moved to an Italian base, dropped paratroops and gliders in southern France and rushed back to England to drop the 82d air borne division in the invasion of Holland.

During the Holland invasion, Col. Krebs was shot down over Breda but turned up at his base 40 days later dressed as a farmer and telling some hair raising tales of his experiences while being passed back to allied lines thru the Dutch underground.

Carry Supplies to 101st

At the height of the Bastogne battle the colonel and his group sent aircraft and gliders with supplies to the surrounded 101st airborne division despite heavy anti-aircraft fire. Then came the airborne crossing of the Rhine where the 440th towed 90 heavily loaded gliders. Immediately afterwards the group was given a task that was to last until V-E day, that of hauling plane loads of gasoline and ammunition to the spearheads of Gen. Patton's tank columns.

In addition to the croix de guerre with palm, Col. Krebs holds the distinguished flying cross with cluster, the air medal and cluster, the Purple Heart, and distinguished unit badge. He also wears the insignia of the Caterpillar club for an emergency parachute jump in combat. The colonel's wife, Mrs. Jean Krebs, and daughter live in Salem, O.

DENTIST WORKS ON GIs FREED FROM GERMANS

Capt. Hollander

Working under field conditions with a mobile dental laboratory built from a British touring bus, Capt. Walter Hollander, whose wife, Betty, lives at 5000 Cornell av., was one of a hand picked contingent of army dentists rushed to LeHavre, France, to give special dental treatment to 10,000 ex-war prisoners homeward bound.

Capt. Hollander has been a dental officer for the last 15 months in England. He told of the long lines of men awaiting treatment. "This was the first dental care that any of them had had since being captured by the Germans," he said. "Most of the men's teeth were decayed—many of them well beyond the danger point. The Germans, for some reason, took away their toothbrushes, and when their teeth went bad, no care whatever was given them."

Capt. Hollander received his dentistry degree in 1941 at the University of Illinois and prior to entering service was affiliated with the Michael Reese hospital.

CORPORAL FREED FROM NAZIS AT GARDINER NOW

Corp. Harry V. Roberts, whose wife, June, lives at 5214 Woodlawn av., is at Gardiner General hospital recovering from malnutrition following his release from a German prison camp.

Corp. Roberts was serving with the 4th armored division when captured and imprisoned last December. The British grenadier guards armored division attacked the camp in April. German army officers attempted to surrender.

However, they were prevented from doing so, and forced by the Nazi S. S. troops to defend themselves and the camp for a week when they were overcome by the British.

GOLDEN STAGE DAYS RECALLED BY SHOW FOLKS

Old Actors Relive Youth's Glories

BY AGNES LYNCH

"We didn't leave the stage. The stage left us." That is the consensus among members of Show Folks, Inc., who have headquarters at 1839 Monroe st. in a three story brick house that like some actors has seen better days.

Many of them featured players and some of them stars in the '80s, '90s, and the turn of the century, they look back with nostalgia at the pre-moving picture era which was the heyday for vaudeville and road companies.

Even yet, however, the majority refuses to think of themselves as "retired." Chet Genter, 76, one time hero of melodrama, scoffs at the thought of leaving the stage.

Not Thru Yet

"Retire?" he sniffs. "Not for a long time yet. Why just two months ago I played the captain in 'Winter Sunshine' at the Group theater. Still play a part whenever I can get one. The stage is in my blood, I guess."

"But say," his face brightens reminiscently as he speaks, "you should have seen me when I was younger. Played Buffalo Bill and a lot of other important characters in those days. You wouldn't think it to look at me now, but I used to weigh 235 pounds. Never had any trouble finding good roles then."

Founded in 1938 by a small group of former actresses, Show Folks has increased rapidly in membership. Its chief purpose is to help any one in show business who is down on his luck.

Home Gift of Nonprofessional

The home on Monroe st. was donated by Ann Lynch, a nonprofessional, but an ardent admirer of the theater. Any actor who is in need may live rent free at the home. While there he is treated as a guest of fellow members of his profession.

Membership dues in Show Folks, Inc., have been fixed at $2 a year, but donations help swell the resources of the organization. The group also operates a resale shop at 21 S. Wolcott av. There old costumes, stage jewelry, and second hand clothing are sold, and proceeds are turned into the general benefit fund.

Membership in the organization is not necessary to secure help from Show Folks. Any one who has been on the stage can be sure of assistance if he needs it.

Aid Circus Performer

Not long ago an old circus performer, now crippled, asked for assistance in getting to New York City where he thought he could get along better than in Chicago. Altho he was not a member, transportation was arranged for him. Just before he left an additional $25 was tucked into his wallet to tide him over the period of getting settled in Manhattan.

Some of the members of Show Folks have switched to other professions or engage in businesses of their own. These help the less solvent members with a camaraderie that makes no distinction between those who have and those who have not.

Jess Harlow, 65, vice president of the organization, is one of those who often drops around to help with the chores. The day we visited the home he was busily cutting grass on the front lawn.

Had Own Company

A former actor of light comedy roles on the major theatrical circuits, he left the stage in 1912 to become assistant director for Universal pictures. Later he formed his own company, the Dixie Film corporation in Chicago, producing and directing his own pictures.

When the film industry shifted its headquarters to Hollywood, Harlow remained in Chicago. He is now owner of a company which manufactures his inventions, among them a miniature mechanical golf game which may be played on city lots.

Another active member is tall, distinguished looking Capt. Ralph Emerson, who for many years owned and operated show boats on the Mississippi river. One of his boats, the Cotton Blossom, achieved nation-wide fame when Edna Ferber used it as the basis of her novel, "Show Boat." Later the book was dramatized by Florenz Ziegfeld.

Audiences Willingly Gave Reactions

"We loved the show boat audiences and they loved us, too," says Capt. Emerson. "The people who came to see our plays were never ashamed of showing their reactions. They laughed and cried with the members of the cast, hissed the villain, and cheered the hero vigorously.

"Our arrival was always an occasion in the towns we visited for show boats provided the only outside amusement that reached the vast area thru which flowed the mighty Mississippi, Missouri, and Ohio rivers.

"When the show boat reached a town we used to announce our presence with loud tunes on the calliope. The piano player always doubled on the calliope and enjoyed it, except when the breeze blew steam and hot water in his face.

One Show a Day

"Actors used to like to work on show boats because they were assured of nine months work on each run," remembers Capt. Emerson. "There were no exhausting rehearsals except at the beginning of the season. The show boat was a delightful place to live. We gave

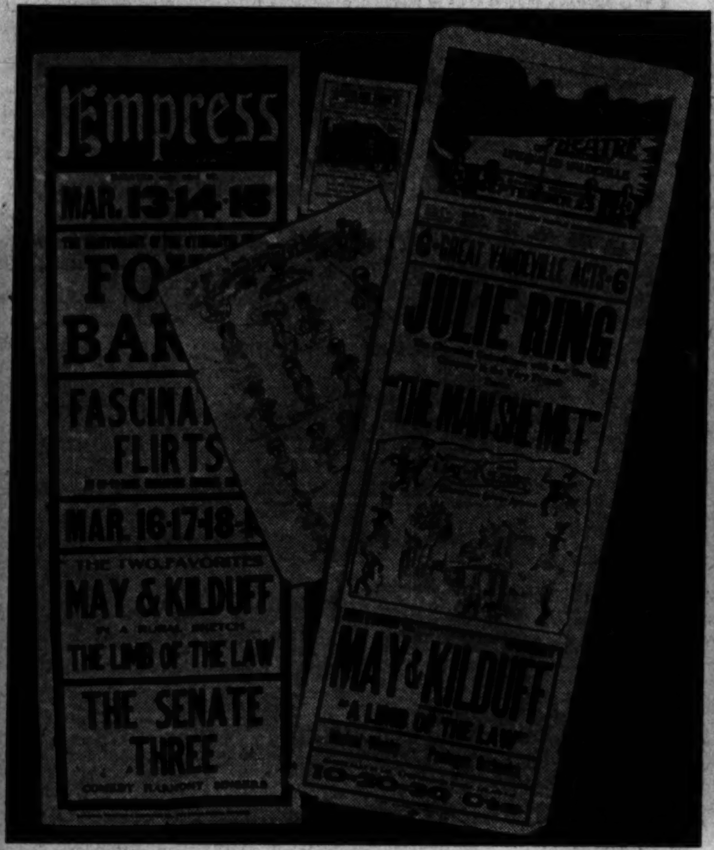
'Ha, My Fair Beauty!' Lives Only in Memory for Show Folks of Another Era

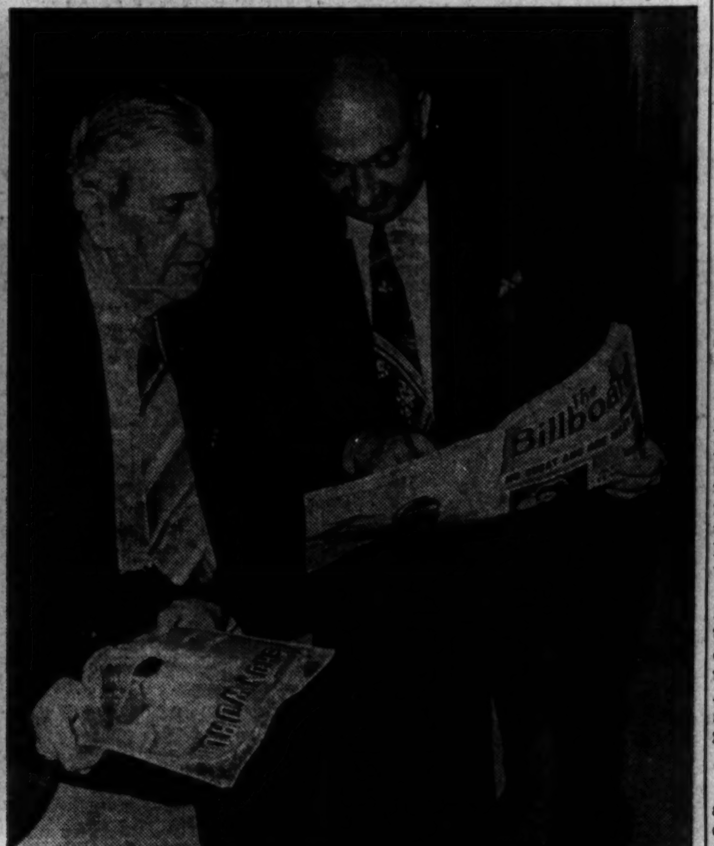
Masks of comedy and tragedy above the doorway of a three story brick house at 1839 Monroe st. symbolize the lives of actors of the pre-motion picture era who have headquarters there. Organized in 1938 as Show Folks, Inc., the group gives assistance to needy actors. On the balcony are Arthur O. May and Mrs. E. Roy Woodside. As a rural comedian, May played vaudeville thruout the country. Mrs. Woodside also played in vaudeville and stock, and worked with Tom Mix and Will Rogers in early motion pictures.

A trio of seasoned troupers (left to right) are Madam Grace Pinxy, Josephine Fairchild, and Chet Genter. Noted for her deft work with puppets, Madam Pinxy has been manipulating the animated dolls since she became the 5 year old owner of a dummy her mother brought from Paris. Miss Fairchild formerly starred in melodrama at the old Criterion theater at Division and Sedgwick sts. Genter played in many stock productions, one of his most famous roles being that of Buffalo Bill.

Children are fascinated by George Pinxy's marionettes. One of the youngest to be enthralled by the stringed dolls is Riccardo Ballesteros, 7 months, who lives next door to Show Folks headquarters. Steadying baby Riccardo is another neighbor, Nancy Lehman, 1837 Monroe st. Pinxy and his wife recently returned from the Caribbean, where they took part in U. S. O. shows.

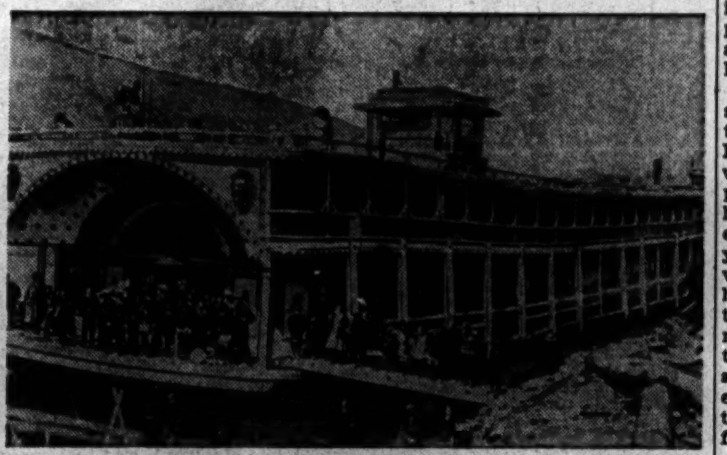


Many players, including Mr. May, have preserved the posters which advertised their acts. The program for Austin and Stone's museum of Boston, Mass., carried the ad of the Union Lunch company which offered a "full meal, 10 cents." Civilians were urged to travel to Denver, Colo., and San Francisco, Cal., at "wonderfully low rates." A contemporary note is struck in one program, however, when a miraculous machine is guaranteed to produce "50 perfectly formed cigarets from a package of tobacco."



Floating theaters traveled river routes to bring the stage to residents of shore towns. Owner and manager of some of the largest showboats was Capt. Ralph Emerson (left). His Cotton Blossom was used by Edna Ferber as the basis for her well known novel, "Show Boat." Scanning the latest theatrical news is Morton Schaeffer, president of Show Folks. A lawyer, he is a skilled pianist.

"A Tale of Two Cities—with Apologies to Dickens," was the vaudeville skit in which Violet Lamey (left) toured the Orpheum circuit with her husband, Jack Lamey, shown in the photograph she is holding. Holding a portrait painted when she was at the height of her stage career is Rose Paige, manager of the Monroe st. home. In such dramas as "The Three Twins" and "Alma Where Do You Live?" she played from coast to coast.



Over the gangplank to Capt. Emerson's famous showboat, the Cotton Blossom, trooped eager townsfolk who wept unashamedly at the perils of the heroines. "The plays always pointed a strong moral," says Capt. Emerson, "because country audiences wouldn't stand for anything else." Showboats usually carried a band of 14 pieces, and at least eight actors, in addition to the crew. A towboat accompanied the larger vessels.

Casting a speculative eye at Eddie McIntyre, whose master likes to demonstrate he is no dummy, is Bessie Lee Tibbils. She began her stage career at 8 at the Criterion theater in Chicago. The roster of plays in which she has appeared includes "East Lynne," "Beware of Men," and "The Cat and the Canary." Holding Eddie is Herman Stoike, billed as Uncle Herman.

Name Community Fund Chairman for S. W. Side

The appointment of George Fisher, Lombard, as Community and War fund chairman for southwest Chicago has been announced by James R. Sterling, 3750 Lake Shore dr., city division chairman. J. C. Lowry, Midlothian, has been named region secretary to coördinate the southwest area campaign with the city-wide project.

WORRY IS OLD STORY IN THIS CALM MUSEUM

Oriental Institute Is Reassuring

The fifth of a series of articles telling of interesting places available to Chicagoans who are vacationing at home due to war time travel conditions.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET

Chicagoans desirous of starting out their vacations by forgetting the cares of today might profit by traveling back to the beginnings of civilization. At the Oriental institute they may look upon mummies of Egyptians who did their worrying 3,000 years ago. The Egyptians were bothered about taxes and laundry and other problems. The world has gone on.

Wars are an old story. On a column of dried mud, an Assyrian king back in 700 B. C. recorded his military victories. He tells us how with battering rams—the attack of infantry, by tunnels, breaches, and the use of axes he took the cities of Hezekiah.

An Early Propagandist

The Oriental institute not only displays the royal annals of Sennacherib, but a translation of the tooled inscriptions on the prism in the glass case can be found in the institute's library. The other side of the story is told in the Bible.

The Assyrian king apparently utilized propaganda in that far off day for he omits any reference to a plague with which, according to the Hebrew historian, his army was afflicted.

Looting the enemy's treasures was not an original idea with Goering. A ruling prince in Palestine 3,300 years ago left evidence that he knew what to expect from conquerors at the gate. He was successful in keeping his personal belongings hidden until eight years ago when the Institute's Megiddo expedition discovered them beneath a palace floor.

Fancy Razor Strop

Vacationing Chicagoans may gaze upon the cache. The prince owned a cosmetic jar rimmed with gold, a razor strop capped with gold, a ring with scarab setting, and beads of granulated gold. Within a glass case at the institute, they are still being safeguarded.

Travel had its difficulties in 2800 B. C. The Sumerian chariot had the advantage of not needing gas. A reconstructed model at the institute shows one of the chariots drawn by four patient onagers [wild donkeys]. The charioteer appears prepared for rough going as he stands astride a small ledge fixed above the axle. The wheels have nonskid rims to give them a better grip on the ground. Better to have stayed home in those early days unless the trip was really necessary.

If you have an idea that skyscrapers are something new, study the institute's model of the "Tower of Babel" made after a survey of the actual foundations in Babylon. Ancient architects used the same set-back plan that is utilized by modern builders.

Solomon as Horse Trader

The model of Solomon's stables also was based on the Institute's discoveries and it indicates that Solomon, as well as being a wise man, was a horse trader on an international scale.

Visitors are amazed to learn that the Egyptian bed at the Institute is more than 5,000 years old and they agree that the material of which it was made is still in remarkably good condition, but they are puzzled by its small size. They ask if it were not a child's bed. It is explained that such beds were customarily short, obliging the sleeper to lie with legs drawn up.

At the Institute there is the black stone statue of a falcon that was the sacred bird of the solar god, Horus, whose temple, in 1090 B. C., was at Edfu. Now this bird gave plenty of advice to persons who have long since passed from the earth, but it had but two answers, yes or no. Look closely and you will find a hole drilled thru it from head to base. The branch opening thru the beak suggests that the bird made a movement in response to the manipulation of strings. The stone bird has survived his questioners by too many centuries to be taken to task by any of them now for any of its faulty decisions.

King Tut a Young Ruler

One of the visitor's first impressions of the colossal statue of Tutenkhamon is that he was a young man when he ruled Egypt. The statue, fully restored, is one of two the Institute discovered in its crusade to uncover records which man had left behind and which nature had filed away in stratified deposits. Both statues were cut in red quartzite. The second is in the Cairo museum in Egypt.

Awe inspiring is the Institute's Assyrian winged bull from King Sargon's palace that fills the east wall of the Egyptian hall. The great human-headed bull was carved from a single block of stone, weighs 40 tons, and stands more than 16 feet high.

Needs Separate Foundation

So massive is the exhibit which was found in a dozen pieces that it has been given a foundation separate from the rest of the building. The visitor is a puny figure before this guardian creature that was called a "cherub" by the ancients.

We are told that this cherub was one of a pair adjoining another pair that flanked the portal leading from the palace courtyard to the throne-room. He was imposing enough to

41ST ORPHANS' OUTING TO FETE 5,000 ON AUG. 8

Gala Day Will Be Held in Lincoln Park

In 1903 when the automobile was quite a wonder and a novelty, A. J. Banta, pioneer Chicagoan, and a group of his friends took 100 orphans for a ride and picnic in Washington park. The outing was such a success that the following year a group of citizens formed the Orphans' Automobile Day association to take orphans, crippled children, and aged people for an annual day's outing.

This year nearly 5,000 persons are looking forward to the 41st outing Aug. 8, sponsored by the association. It will be held in Lincoln park at the site just south of the Grant monument.

Fete More Than 2,000

Since its inception the association, composed of business men who donate their time, has entertained more than 200,000 children and adults. Approximately 50 homes and institutions thruout the city and suburbs have participated.

The outing will begin at 9 a. m. with a concert by St. Mary's Training school band. Continuous entertainment will be donated by stage, screen, and radio performers thruout the day. On the program will be 20 clowns who make up the clown band.

Buses will be used to take the crippled children to the outing. Others will be taken in private cars. An urgent appeal for donations of automobiles for this purpose is being made by John P. Keating, chairman of transportation. Those wishing to donate cars may make arrangement by calling Keating at Longbeach 8801.

Candy, Toys for Children

Each child will receive a bag of toys and favors, a box lunch, ice cream, and orangeade. Adults will be given sandwiches, coffee, ice cream, and orangeade. Each year more than 1,500 gallons of orangeade are dispensed.

Thru efforts of the medical committee a trailer equipped for first aid and an ambulance are in constant attendance. Volunteer workers care for the crippled children and act as chaperons to the others until 4 p. m., when the automobiles take the various groups home.

Spend $5,000 on Food

Altho transportation, entertainment, and medical services are donated, all food supplies are purchased as a health measure. The annual budget for food is approximately $5,000.

West siders who are members of the association include James E. Duffield, 215 Forest av., Oak Park; Edward L. Cleary, Hinsdale; Andrew T. Frain, 1830 Madison st.; Peter M. Schoenberg, 1011 Madison st., Oak Park; V. O. Winkenweder, La Grange, and Nate Jacobs, 209 Jackson blvd.

ORIANA CHORUS HOLDS BANQUET, SEATS LEADERS

The Oriana a cappella choir, with headquarters at Austin academy of fine arts, 631 N. Central av., recently installed officers for the 1945-'46 season during its annual banquet at the Graemere hotel.

The incoming officers include Martin J. Argall, president; Richard Young, vice president; Doris Gnatt secretary; William Dombrow treasurer; H. E. Bendigkeit, business manager; Sydney Laftry, social chairman, and Josephine Schultz, librarian.

Board members are Bernice Rothenberger, Gladys White, Charles Miller, and Gerhard Hasse.

CITE SERGEANT IN SEIZURE OF MINED NAZI DAM

A silver star has been awarded Pvt. Pat De Mario, 1037 S. Racine av., for his part in the seizure of a mined dam and power plant near Ering, Germany. In army service since January, 1944, Pvt. De Mario has been overseas six months. He attended Crane Technical High school.

Hold Little Flower Circle Outing Tuesday Morning

Little Flower circle will hold an outing at 11:30 a. m. Tuesday at Sacred Heart seminary, Melrose Park. Guests will bring their own lunches. Coffee will be served. Mrs. Charles J. Flynn is chairman.

GOLDEN STAGE DAYS RECALLED BY SHOW FOLKS

only one performance a day, so members of the company could fish or swim in the afternoon.

"The show boat would start out in the spring from Pittsburgh," he says, "playing small towns on the Ohio, Tennessee, Illinois, and upper Mississippi rivers. In the early fall we would go south to New Orleans, also playing towns on Bayou Lafourche and Bayou Teche, closing about Jan. 1. There were mighty grand audiences all along the way."

Mementos of past glories are treasured by members of Show Folks, in yellowed scrapbooks whose fading print does not dim for them the luster of laudatory press notices. Some of the life stories that may be gleaned from the clippings are as full of adventure as the plays in which the actors appeared.

Mrs. E. Roy Woodside, 66, was once a Kentucky belle. One of her ancestors, William Owsley, came to America in 1613 with Sir Walter Raleigh, and the family was long prominent in Louisville social circles. When her father, an architect, lost his money, Mrs. Woodside went on the stage.

She played in stock and vaudeville thruout the country, then in the early years of the century produced her own wild west show. The venture was not a financial success. In 1906 while the show, heavily in debt, was playing outside New Haven, Conn., Mrs. Woodside was informed the constable was coming. With a speed reminiscent of a scene from a melodrama she fled, leaving the horses to fall into the hands of the law.

Later Mrs. Woodside played in the early motion pictures, riding bronchos with Tom Mix and Will Rogers at the old Selig studios in Chicago. At present she is employed as a film binder by the Society for Visual Education.

give the king's callers an inferiority complex.

The floor plan of the museum in the James Henry Breasted hall is so arranged that visitors need not be confused by the array of collections. There is an information desk just inside the entrance of the building. Arrangements are gladly made for groups from schools or societies and guides are provided free during the regular museum hours.

Many organized groups have thought it worth while to come a long distance to visit the Institute. Chicagoans need not travel far to round out their knowledge of the Near East. Guides have become familiar with the remark:

"I'm coming again. I didn't realize the Oriental Institute offered so much to see in such a short time."

SELL WHEATON CHILDREN'S HOME SITE TO COLLEGE

Buildings to Be Used by Academy Students

Sale by the University of Chicago of the property of the Country Home for Convalescent Children at Prince Crossing to Wheaton college recently was announced by the two institutions. In September Wheaton college academy will be transferred to the new site and buildings, which will provide accommodations for 125 boarding and 75 commuting students

The sale involved a cash price of $137,500. The property includes several buildings, furnishings, and 25 acres of farmland. The buildings, with some remodeling, will provide classrooms, dormitories, dining rooms, recreation rooms, science laboratories, and housing facilities for faculty and staff members.

Capacity Never Taxed

Frederic Woodward, vice president emeritus of the U. of C. and chairman of the board of trustees of the Country home, said changes in methods of handling orthopedic cases have reduced so greatly the time of convalescence that the home at no time in the last five years has operated at more than half of its 120 bed capacity.

"Also," said Woodward, "there has been a trend away from placing children in institutions, away from their family environment. It now is considered better practice to keep the children at home as much as possible and provide medical care with a minimum of separation from the family. Transfer of the work to the campus will avoid further waste of charitable funds and ineffective use of medical personnel."

Affiliate Home in 1938

The Country home, founded by the late William J. Chalmers and his wife, became affiliated with the university in 1927 and was amalgamated in 1938.

The several memorial funds which have sustained the home will be continued, with preservation of memorial tablets, under present plans which call for the erection of a new building near the university within two years, Woodward said. The building will be established as a permanent memorial to the Chalmerses and will form part of the integrated medical center at the university.

JUNIORS WIELD HAMMERS, SAWS IN NEW OFFICES

A hum of activity now breaks the silence of the top floor of the old Eagles hall, 5241 Madison st., where every afternoon and evening youthful business "executives" are readying the premises for the local central offices of Junior Achievement of Chicago.

The new premises, to be known as the West Side Business center, contain 6,300 square feet and will accommodate 500 members. Boys and girls belonging to Junior Achievement form their own companies and engage in business enterprises under supervision of civic leaders who volunteer as counselors.

Houses Many Companies

The new headquarters will be converted into woodworking and plastic shops, as well as photography, chemistry, graphic arts, and newspaper offices for 30 to 40 junior companies. It will serve the area between Oak Park and Western avs., and from northern Cicero to Fullerton av.

"For the first time in the five year history of Junior Achievement many of our youth companies will be under one roof, Henry DeBoer, executive director, said. "Before we secured the new center, our plants on the west side were located wherever rents were cheap, in unused basements, attics, and storerooms."

DeBoer added that the new property will minimize the supervision problem and permit development of group activities impossible in scattered locations.

Board to Manage Property

The center will be managed by a junior board of directors, which will have offices in the building.

All remodeling, designing of offices, and purchases of equipment, is being done by the board. The center is scheduled to open Sept. 1.

Members of the board, all teenagers, include Howard Satin, 5535 Congress st.; Leonard Weinman, 4830 Adams st.; Dan Kling, 1510 N. Lotus av.; Arthur and Howard Johnson, 4947 W. Carl Hayford, president of the village of Brookfield, recently gave official emphasis to the grocer-consumer anti-inflation campaign in his community with a proclamation advising food retailers and shoppers to give heed to ceiling price lists and join patriotically in the effort to protect home front economy.

The proclamation points out that military victories do not remove the dangers of disastrous inflation, or insure continued equality of distribution of goods.

SEE MANY USES FOR FACSIMILE AFTER THE WAR

Sends Printed, Pictorial Matter by Radio

BY LARRY WOLTERS

That word "facsimile" has been appearing with increasing frequency lately. In case you don't recall its meaning, facsimile involves the transmission of printed, pictorial, or other graphic matter by radio or telephone circuits. All works in this field for the public was stopped in December, 1941. It has been greatly developed since for war uses.

"The experience gained in developing and building [facsimile] for the armed services will be reflected in post-war models showing impressive advances in this art," a statement by Finch Telecommunications asserts. W. G. H. Finch, head of the company and a pioneer in this field, is serving as a commander in the navy.

Provides Permanent Record

Facsimile, like television, is visual. But television is transient, while facsimile provides a permanent, exact replica. It can transmit anything that can be written—maps, charts, signatures, legal documents, drawings, half tone photographs. It may be capable of transmitting newspapers into the homes of the nation.

The facsimile "recorder" or "printer" is automatic in its operation as long as the radio receiver to which it is attached is turned on and tuned to the sending station. Many radio receivers may some day include a facsimile recorder in combination with standard radio, FM, television, and phonograph.

Facsimile transmission is based on the ability of a photoelectric cell to change variations of light value into variations of electric current. This current is amplified and sent to the recorder by radio or wire. At the recorder a stylus or needle moves over specially treated recording paper at the same speed and in synchronization with the light beam at the transmitter. The speed of transmission, when typographical matter is sent, exceeds average reading speed.

Many Services Foreseen

Among the unique services that facsimile will provide is the reception of written or printed matter aboard machines in motion—planes, ships, trains, automobiles. The value of written messages is obvious. A plane pilot will have on file written messages or orders for reference at any time. Weather maps, storm warnings, barometric readings, wind velocity, and other data are reduced to permanent, visible records. Facsimile will relieve the pilot for attention to other matters.

Facsimile will have similar advantages for ships at sea, harbor tugs, lighters, and other craft, including fishing fleets. It will be useful for sending permanent messages long distances. In tests aboard the Queen Mary photographs were successfully transmitted to New York over a distance of 2,900 miles.

Useful in Police Work

In police radio work facsimile is expected to make for speed and accuracy of orders, secrecy, details of fingerprints, and identifications. Policemen on patrol, at precincts or in booths will get written messages. Cost of equipment, it is said, will be within reach of even the smallest police force.

In offices and industrial plants, facsimile may point the way to reduce the waste and some times dangers that result thru errors of misunderstanding. It will facilitate the rule, so often disregarded: Put it in writing.

Among the industries and professions which are showing an interest in this new medium of communication are newspapers, banks, distribution houses, hospitals, attorneys, railroads, chain stores, department stores, libraries, insurance companies, and manufacturing companies.

NAME WAR FUND SECTION HEADS FOR WEST AREA

Four west siders have been named section chairmen for the forthcoming Community and War Fund campaign by Ernest A. Otto, manager of Wieboldt's Department store, 106 S. Ashland av., who is west side chairman in the fund's city division. The campaign will begin Oct. 1.

New appointees are Bernard Baer, 3959 W. Madison st., E. B. Bruner, 4750 W. Monroe st., Carmi Vacca, 3400 W. Chicago av., and Arthur P. Morrison, 825 S. St. Louis av.

Stuart W. Cochran, chairman of the fund's suburban division, has announced the appointment of eight chairmen in west side suburbs. They are Sanborn O. Houser, 629 N. Marion st., Oak Park, chairman of Oak Park-River Forest; Andy H. Frenzel, Melrose Park, chairman of Melrose Park; George R. Murphy, West Chicago, chairman of West Chicago.

List Other Appointees

Don C. Burkholder, Warrenville, chairman of Warrenville; L. M. Haskin, Lombard, chairman of York Center; Rudolph B. Mueller, Elmhurst, chairman of Yorkfield; David W. Russell, Downers Grove, chairman of Downers Grove; and Nels G. Lundgren, Maywood, chairman of Maywood.

Responsibilities of the Community and War Fund are now greater than ever before, Otto said. Reasons cited for the continuance of the combined appeal were the huge relief problems of devastated countries, the upkeep of the fighters' morale with U. S. O. and U. S. O. camp shows, and the necessity for maintaining a strong home front thru 187 health and welfare agencies.

Name Fund's Beneficiaries

The Community and War Fund represents the National War Fund thruout Cook, Lake, and Du Page counties, raising money for U. S. O., U. S. O. camp shows, United Seamen's service, War Prisoners aid, American Field service and 14 allied relief and refugee aid agencies.

Funds raised in Chicago also aid the 187 health and welfare agencies of the Community Fund, but money raised in the suburbs goes only to suburban chests and charities and the war related agencies. The Community and War Fund also maintains the Veterans' Information Center, 105 W. Adams st.

CITE EFFICIENCY OF HAWTHORNE CAR POOL PLAN

Western Electric company's Hawthorne works recently was awarded a citation by the OPA for the efficient operation of a share-the-ride car pool that brings 6,753 persons to work daily with an average of 3.9 riders a car. It was the first plant in the Chicago area to be so honored, according to the OPA.

The citation, signed by Chester Bowles, national OPA administrator; Rae E. Walters, regional administrator, and James F. Riley, acting metropolitan area director, was presented during a ceremony in the plant court yard by Riley to William F. Fels, chairman of the plant's labor management transportation committee.

Riley congratulated the employes for their plan, and emphasized the need for continued gasoline, tire, and automobile conservation until the end of the war with Japan.

The pool uses three filing systems to coördinate finding of rides for persons without cars and finding riders for drivers without passengers. It also works with scores of local rationing boards which handle about 1,000 gas applications and 130 tire applications a month.

About 55 per cent of the employes used cars before the war. Now 25 per cent travel to and from work in car pools. The rest use public transportation.

One phase of the auto conservation plan was the conducting of evening school courses at which employes were told how to make their pre-war cars last longer.

VETERAN MUSES OVER 3D PURPLE HEART CLUSTER

'This Is Enough,' Says Rueful Sergeant

A 25 year old veteran of the 7th infantry's four campaigns recently added a third oak leaf cluster to his Purple Heart, declaring, "This is enough." He is Sgt. Warner W. Marquardt of Melrose Park, wounded during fighting on Okinawa and now recuperating in a hospital on Guam

Sgt. Marquardt

"Attu seems like a century ago," Marquardt said, "but that was still the toughest. Let's see—that was back in May, '43." He continued, "Out here it seems funny to think that we almost froze to death in one campaign but that's a fact. Attu was plenty tough."

Hit Twice in Three Weeks

Marquardt was wounded twice in the three week Attu campaign, the 7th's first action. Subsequently, the division moved to the Hawaiian Islands for a course of jungle warfare indoctrination, after which it was dispatched to the Marshalls with Kwajalein as the objective.

"Kwajalein was only a four day battle," the sergeant recalled, "but I got winged on the second day."

After Kwajalein the division returned to the Hawaiian Islands to prepare for the invasion of the Philippines in which it participated as a component of the 24th army corps.

Calls Leyte Tough Fight

"That was a tough fight we had on Leyte," Marquardt declared, "and strangely I didn't get wounded even once."

On April 21, while engaged in the battle for a place the doughboys named Skyline ridge, Sgt. Marquardt was wounded for the fourth time in almost four years in the army. In recalling Okinawa, he said it was the worst since Attu as far as he is concerned, but "the first two days were just a track meet."

Son of Mrs. Minna Marquardt, Melrose Park, Marquardt was employed by the American Car company, Maywood, prior to joining the 7th division in 1941.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, July 16

Gardeners are urged to continue to combat destructive insects. Spray with any recommended preparations about once a week, or until the pests are under control. Aphids must be controled by using contact sprays or dusts, such as tobacco or nicotine, pyrethrum or rotenone. The latter useful against eating insects or worms.

Aphids on hawthorn trees and the cottony maple aphid on soft maple trees may be controled with a contact spray.

Keep cultivating the garden until the plants touch one another and it is difficult to work between them.

Tuesday, July 17

Pinch outdoor chrysanthemums, give them plenty of water and mulch with decayed manure, if procurable. Tie up all plants in need of it or the stems may be blown down or fall from their own weight. Tie plants so they appear in a natural position, without stakes showing.

Order pansy seed for early sowing, calla bulbs or rhizomes, and freesia bulbs. Send for a few of the better begonias for indoors.

Make another sowing of beans, corn, beets, and keep the tomatoes well watered, but not to the point of saturation.

Mulch tomatoes with any suitable material. Use sawdust, grass clippings, peat moss [wet before using], decayed manure, or anything that is at hand.

Wednesday, July 18

If there is a horse chestnut tree in the yard and the leaves turn brown the chances are it is infested with a fungous disease. To control spray frequently with Bordeaux mixture. Collect all fallen leaves and burn them.

When transplanting cabbage and cauliflower be sure to firm the soil around the plants. Turnips are useful to follow early crops, but do not overplant.

Oriental poppies die down around this time. The plants can be lifted, divided, and transplanted. If a large number of new plants are wanted, the roots can be cut into 2 inch lengths and planted in a cold frame or where some protection can be given.

Thursday, July 19

If the foliage of the delphinium plants are malformed or blackened spray or dust with rotenone or pyrethrum at one week intervals. The condition is caused by cyclamen mite.

If evergreen turn rusty, examine them for red spider. To control, syringe with water and repeat at close intervals. Sulphur also will serve as a control. If there are brown spots in the lawn examine them for sod web worms. If any are present, water with a can of pyrethrum preparation at the rate of one gallon to each square yard.

Friday, July 20

Do not mow the lawn very short at this season. About 1½ to 2 inches is right. Once a week watering of the lawn is sufficient if a thoro saturation is made.

Violas will give better flowers if cut back and given plant food now. Keep roses well watered; mulching will aid them in keeping in healthy growth with good blooms. Two inches of peat moss used as a mulch makes it unnecessary to water so much.

Saturday, July 21

Many soils in city gardens lack humus, formerly supplied by plowing or spading under manure in the fall. Since this is not generally available a green manure may be used. This is obtained by sowing winter rye in the fall and spading under early in April. An application of plant food also should be made at the rate of 3 to 4 pounds per 100 square feet.

Partly rotted straw or alfalfa hay may be spaded under in the fall and it will be decayed by spring. Wherever possible, the gardener should have a compost heap which is simply decomposed refuse, such as corn stalks, cabbage stems, soft weeds, garbage, grass clippings, leaves, manure, or anything that will decay. Some lime and a complete fertilizer added will hasten decay.

The heap should be kept moist at all times for dry material will not decay rapidly. It will be ready to use in six months to a year. The compost is valuable for spading under, for top dressing, or when used as a basis for potting soil.

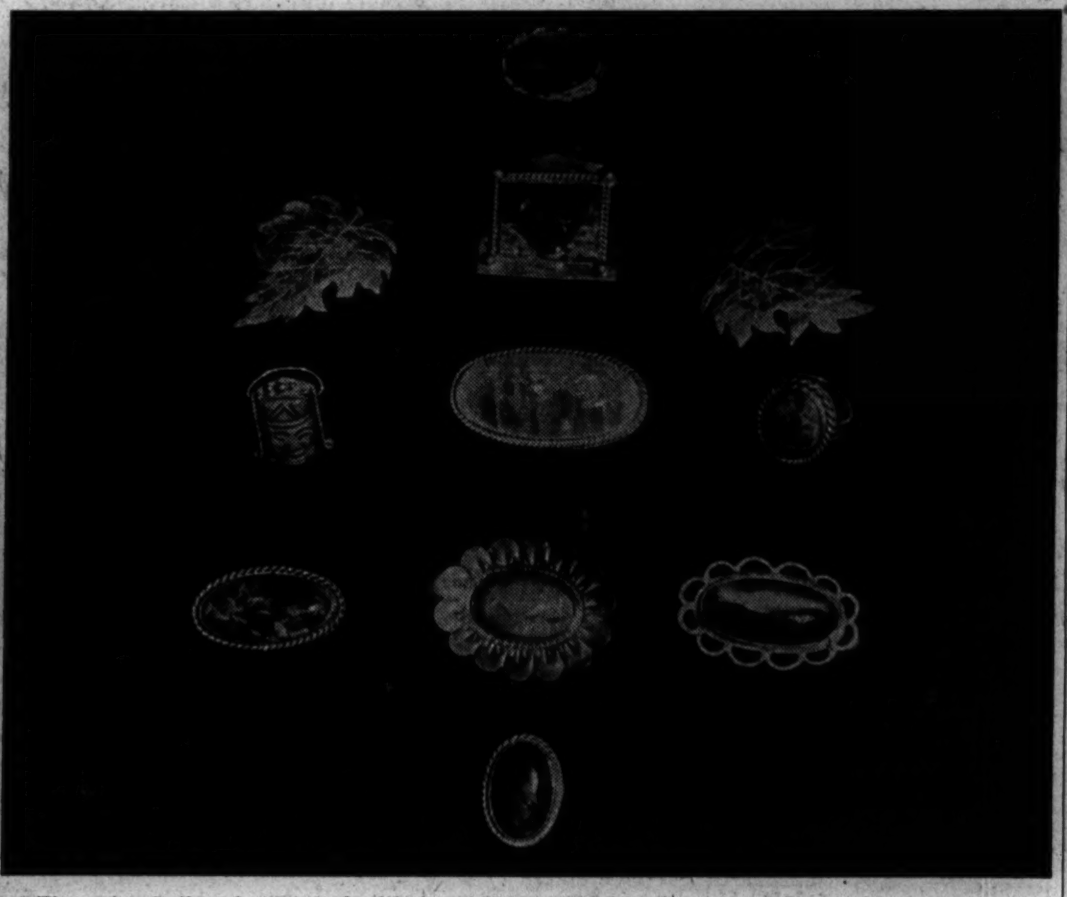
Humble Rocks Glow with Polished Beauty in Skilled Hands of Lapidists

With a husband whose hobby is collecting, cutting, and polishing stones, orderly Mrs. Florence Rudiger set out to find a good place to put the finished products. That place, after due consideration of beauty, she found to be in pin and ring mountings which she learned to make. For a pin she draws the design on a flat piece of silver. Then, after some tedious work with a silver saw, she has an artistic background for any stone her husband, Gilbert, may be polishing.



The twisted silver band is a familiar mounting on rings. It's quite simple, Mrs. Rudiger says, but requires four hands so her husband is summoned from his polishing wheel long enough to help her twist the wire over a flame. Most of the silver mounting demands heating for shaping and impressions.

Altho Mrs. Rudiger scuffs up dry creek beds out west with her husband on rock hunting expeditions, it's Rudiger who is ever willing to continue the search. He is never sure he has a find until he slices the stone. Then he grinds away the unwanted part of the stone on the homemade machine in his basement.

Stuck on a dop stick, the stone is ground to size, smoothed and polished. The whole mechanical process could be done in about an hour, but Rudiger prefers to work slowly, deciding whether the stone would look better in Uncle Dud's tie clasp or Aunt Min's pin.

3 Gold, 3 Blue Stars Tell of Sons in Battle

BY EDNA CARROLL

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Mrozek have decided to move from their 10 room home at 5129 Roscoe st. They're going to a smaller place where the voices of their surviving sons won't rattle around in empty rooms. They have a six starred service flag on their front door. Three of the stars are gold.

The first blue star blotted out was for Edward, a sergeant, killed in France last July. Edward was the last of the Mrozek boys to enter service. His wife, Mary, lives at 5149 Belmont av. There won't be a memorial mass at the family church, St. Ladislaus, until a year has passed. Somebody could have made a mistake.

Bill First to Go in '41

The Mrozek boys started trickling into service back in June, 1941, when Boleslaus, nicknamed Bill, enlisted. Next was Stanley, shortly after Pearl Harbor, then Walter, Chester, Eugene, and then Edward. There's one still at home, Edwin, 19, and 1-A.

The second gold star was for Stanley. Mrs. Mrozek and Lucky, the curly dog, were together when the telegram came, informing them Staff Sgt. Stanley Mrozek had been killed on Luzon on March 30 when he threw himself on a grenade to save some sleeping buddies. Stanley had survived three years of Pacific invasions. His family had never seen him in uniform.

It wasn't the way they had planned things, the homecoming of Chester. Mrs. Mrozek remembered how the boys had looked forward to a grand reunion to swap war stories. Now Chester was flying home to comfort his parents on Stanley's death.

Eager to See Chester

But they were looking forward to seeing Chester. Lucky was all wiggles and joy, and Edwin rushed to answer the doorbell, expecting Chester's telegram announcing his arrival time. That was when the third blue star went out.

Lt. Chester W. Mrozek had completed 35 missions over enemy territory as a bomber pilot. He was killed in a plane crash near Sweetwater, Tex., on his way home.

Mr. and Mrs. Mrozek are slow to answer their doorbell now. They sit and look at each other for some minutes when an official looking car pulls up in front of the house.

Good News of Bill

But the last time an official envelope arrived, it contained good news. Lt. Boleslaus T. Mrozek was decorated with the silver star for gallantry in action in the battle for Munich. He was commended for his "aggressive leadership, bold actions and utter disregard for his own safety" when he took over his unit when his company commander was killed.

He was decorated a few hours after he learned of his brothers' deaths, his sister, Mrs. Berenice Polowy who lives at home, learned. Bill's wife, Eleanor, and son, Ronald, live at 5254 Roscoe st.

Shanklin has been overseas 19 months and is stationed in China. He admits Susie's the meanest monkey in China and only by alert attention has the sergeant rescued Susie from a burst of .30 caliber slugs from some of the GIs she's nipped, playfully, of course.

Lapidary Art Is Collecting Personalities

To a lapidist of the Gilbert I. Rudiger stripe, it isn't the stone polishing so much as the people he meets in getting the stones that makes his hobby interesting.

As a matter of fact, Rudiger, who will be principal of South and Central schools in Des Plaines next fall, guesses he collects "characters" as well as stones. He was principal of North school last term.

He and his hobby were introduced in 1935 thru a "character" he knew out west—a railroad engineer who came off his run with his overall chest puffed out like a pouter pigeon with the stones he had collected. The fascination of making smart jewelry was transferred from the engineer to Rudiger, and he immediately became a "rock hound."

Prefers Candy to Agate

That's the way he met the little sheep herder with the sweet tooth in Wyoming who would gladly trade any amount of agate for a candy bar. Also the hermit jeweler who let dust obscure his wares while he went rock hunting with Rudiger.

It's the way he met Gutzon Borglum who carved the Mount Rushmore monument in South Dakota. Rudiger made seven trips to the Memorial and became a close friend of Borglum.

It's the way he met the other hundreds of nameless rock hounds with whom he sat on curbstones in western towns licking stones. It's the stone licking, Rudiger declares, that brands you a real rock hound. Moistening the stone gives some idea how it will look after polishing, he explained.

Travels 30,000 Miles

Rudiger is proud of the fact he does not collect with a silver pick [a term designating one who collects by purchase]. He and his wife, who is something of a silversmith to supplement the stone polishing avocation of her husband, have traveled more than 30,000 miles to hunt rocks. A couple of hundred of these have been on foot, up and down dry creek beds where the most desirable stones hide, His only concession to the easy way of doing it was a purchase of several opals from Australia.

With a long standing interest in geology, Rudiger is a member of the Marquette Geologist association, serving as program chairman three years and as president in 1942.

Shop in His Basement

The stones he collects in the west become the finished product in the complete lapidary outfit in the basement of his apartment at 714 Lee st. in Des Plaines. Most of the machinery he made himself.

It isn't until after he slices the stone that he knows he has a find which will look well as a tie clasp for Uncle Dud. While he sands and polishes the stone, his wife, Florence, cuts a design in silver for the setting, an art she learned from her husband.

Those trips up creek beds, straddling boulders and old tree stumps, are more than should be expected of an ordinary car, Rudiger says, so he's looking forward to enlisting a jeep.

WORRY IS OLD STORY IN THIS CALM MUSEUM

Oriental Institute Is Reassuring

The fifth of a series of articles telling of interesting places available to Chicagoans who are vacationing at home due to war time travel conditions.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET

Chicagoans desirous of starting out their vacations by forgetting the cares of today might profit by traveling back to the beginnings of civilization. At the Oriental institute they may look upon mummies of Egyptians who did their worrying 3,000 years ago. The Egyptians were bothered about taxes and laundry, and other problems. The world has gone on.

Wars are an old story. On a column of dried mud, an Assyrian king back in 700 B. C. recorded his military victories. He tells us how with battering rams—the attack of infantry, by tunnels, breaches, and the use of axes he took the cities of Hezekiah.

An Early Propagandist

The Oriental institute not only displays the royal annals of Sennacherib, but a translation of the tooled inscriptions on the prism in the glass case can be found in the institute's library. The other side of the story is told in the Bible.

The Assyrian king apparently utilized propaganda in that far off day for he omits any reference to a plague with which, according to the Hebrew historian, his army was afflicted.

Looting the enemy's treasures was not an original idea with Goering. A ruling prince in Palestine 3,300 years ago left evidence that he knew what to expect from conquerors at the gate. He was successful in keeping his personal belongings hidden until eight years ago when the Institute's Megiddo expedition discovered them beneath a palace floor.

Fancy Razor Strop

Vacationing Chicagoans may gaze upon the cache. The prince owned a cosmetic jar rimmed with gold, a razor strop capped with gold, a ring with scarab setting, and beads of granulated gold. Within a glass case at the institute, they are still being safeguarded.

Travel had its difficulties in 2800 B. C. The Sumerian chariot had the advantage of not needing gas. A reconstructed model at the institute shows one of the chariots drawn by four patient onagers [wild donkeys]. The charioteer appears prepared for rough going as he stands astride a small ledge fixed above the axle. The wheels have nonskid rims to give them a better grip on the ground. Better to have stayed home in those early days unless the trip was really necessary.

If you have an idea that skyscrapers are something new, study the institute's model of the "Tower of Babel" made after a survey of the actual foundations in Babylon. Ancient architects used the same set-back plan that is utilized by modern builders.

Solomon as Horse Trader

The model of Solomon's stables also was based on the Institute's discoveries and it indicates that Solomon, as well as being a wise man, was a horse trader on an international scale.

Visitors are amazed to learn that the Egyptian bed at the Institute is more than 5,000 years old and they agree that the material of which it was made is still in remarkably good condition, but they are puzzled by its small size. They ask if it were not a child's bed. It is explained that such beds were customarily short, obliging the sleeper to lie with legs drawn up.

At the Institute there is the black stone statue of a falcon that was the sacred bird of the solar god, Horus, whose temple, in 1090 B. C., was at Edfu. Now this bird gave plenty of advice to persons who have long since passed from the earth, but it had but two answers, yes or no. Look closely and you will find a hole drilled thru it from head to base. The branch opening thru the beak suggests that the bird made a movement in response to the manipulation of strings. The stone bird has survived his questioners by too many centuries to be taken to task by any of them now for any of its faulty decisions.

King Tut a Young Ruler

One of the visitor's first impressions of the colossal statue of Tutenkhamon is that he was a young man when he ruled Egypt. The statue, fully restored, is one of two the Institute discovered in its crusade to uncover records which man had left behind and which nature had filed away in stratified deposits. Both statues were cut in red quartzite. The second is in the Cairo museum in Egypt.

Awe inspiring is the Institute's Assyrian winged bull from King Sargon's palace that fills the east wall of the Egyptian hall. The great human-headed bull was carved from a single block of stone, weighs 40 tons, and stands more than 16 feet high.

Needs Separate Foundation

So massive is the exhibit which was found in a dozen pieces that it has been given a foundation separate from the rest of the building. The visitor is a puny figure before this guardian creature that was called a "cherub" by the ancients.

We are told that this cherub was one of a pair adjoining another pair that flanked the portal leading from the palace courtyard to the throne-room. He was imposing enough to give the king's callers an inferiority complex.

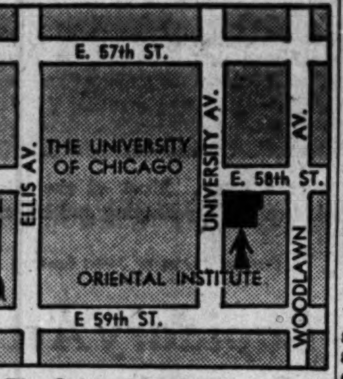
The floor plan of the museum in the James Henry Breasted hall is so arranged that visitors need not be confused by the array of collections. There is an information desk just inside the entrance of the building. Arrangements are gladly made for groups from schools or societies and guides are provided free during the regular museum hours.



The Oriental institute is located at 58th st. and University av. It may be reached by taking Illinois Central trains to the 59th st. station; the elevated to 51st st. and transferring to an eastbound street car, and street cars No. 1 to 55th st. and University av., and Nos. 4 and 5 to 58th st. and Cottage Grove av.

Many organized groups have thought it worth while to come a long distance to visit the Institute. Chicagoans need not travel far to round out their knowledge of the Near East. Guides have become familiar with the remark:

IMPORTANT NOTICE
to wage-earners in the Chicago area

DO YOU WANT TO SERVE YOUR COUNTRY?
DO YOU WANT TO PREPARE FOR THE FUTURE?

You are needed to take a job at Douglas at once!

We are building vitally needed aircraft . . . C-54 Combat Air Transports . . . designed for the conflict against Japan. No one knows how long it will take to defeat the Japanese. In any case, we do know that the real struggle is just beginning. Iwo Jima and Okinawa have shown us how bitterly our victory will be contested and how great the price in American lives. If we are unable to turn out the planes—needed now more than ever—thousands of American boys may die unnecessarily . . . because of our failure here in Chicago.

Some may object—"The war is almost over and now is not the time to take a so-called war job." But the war is NOT over. It is apparent that the most difficult and bloody phase is just starting.

Others may feel that they'd better "get set" now in a peacetime job before the flood of demobilization starts. But no real advantage can thus be gained. When complete demobilization comes—if it ever does—ability will find its own level everywhere. Each of us will then find and hold the job for which we are fitted. It is a law of nature.

Meanwhile we need more production workers—urgently! There is no better way to serve America and prepare for the future than by coming to work at Douglas . . . NOW!

NO CUTBACKS HERE
Instead of cutting production, our schedules are actually being increased. The Army wants more and more Douglas C-54's as fast as we can build them. To help us obtain workers needed to build them War Manpower Commission has granted us a No. 2 Labor Priority, higher than any other war plant in Chicagoland. This is your opportunity to learn the aviation trade. Apply at once.

IF YOU LIVE NORTH OR NORTHWEST . . . and are not now in essential industry . . .
APPLY AT ONCE AT PLANT, Mannheim, Higgins & Devon, or Douglas Office, 4070 Milwaukee Ave. (near Irving Park), or any North or Northwest U.S.E.S. Office of WMC.

Johnson appealed for more volunteers to offer cars for transportation to the outing. Individuals who donate their cars will pick up the guests at 9 a. m. at the institutions. Trigger Fingers Also Good with Brush and Oils

Italy, land of the renaissance painters, has a new artist, a radio operator-gunner with the 15th army air force who finds time heavy on his hands since V-E day.

He is Tech. Sgt. Harry T. Baseleon, 3700 Chicago av., who spends most of his spare time painting a portrait of his mother, Mrs. Theodore M. Baseleon.

Somewhat handicapped by lack of materials, Baseleon salvaged some Italian oils and brushes and a canvas made from a bleached flour sack. The portrait is painted partly from a photograph and largely from memory.

A former student of psychology at the Illinois Institute of Technology, Sgt. Baseleon entered the service in February, 1943. His 10 months' service with the 454th Liberator bombardment group in Italy has earned for him the air medal with two clusters, and the European-African-Middle Eastern ribbon with six stars.

DR. LEE RETIRES AT ILLINOIS TECH TO WRITE BOOK

Dr. Judson F. Lee of Mount Prospect has announced his retirement as professor of business and economics at Illinois Institute of Technology where he has served as a member of the faculty since 1910.

In 1910 he was appointed instructor in history and economics at the institute. He later became head of the economics department, and then head of the administration department, which position he held until his retirement.

Historian and economist, Dr. Lee is author of "Transportation as a Factor in the Development of Illinois." He is a member of the American Economic association, American Historical association, and Mississippi Valley Historical association.

Dr. Lee plans to travel in Europe to gather material on post-war economic problems which will be incorporated into a new book.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, July 16

Gardeners are urged to continue to combat destructive insects. Spray with any recommended preparations about once a week, or until the pests are under control. Aphids must be controled by using contact sprays or dusts, such as tobacco or nicotine, pyrethrum or rotenone. The latter useful against eating insects or worms.

Aphids on hawthorn trees and the cottony maple aphid on soft maple trees may be controled with a contact spray.

Keep cultivating the garden until the plants touch one another and it is difficult to work between them.

Tuesday, July 17

Pinch outdoor chrysanthemums, give them plenty of water and mulch with decayed manure, if procurable. Tie up all plants in need of it or the stems may be blown down or fall from their own weight. Tie plants so they appear in a natural position, without stakes showing.

Order pansy seed for early sowing, calla bulbs or rhizomes, and freesia bulbs. Send for a few of the better begonias for indoors.

Make another sowing of beans, corn, beets, and keep the tomatoes well watered, but not to the point of saturation.

Mulch tomatoes with any suitable material. Use sawdust, grass clippings, peat moss [wet before using], decayed manure, or anything that is at hand.

Wednesday, July 18

If there is a horse chestnut tree in the yard and the leaves turn brown the chances are it is infested with a fungous disease. To control spray frequently with Bordeaux mixture. Collect all fallen leaves and burn them.

When transplanting cabbage and cauliflower be sure to firm the soil around the plants. Turnips are useful to follow early crops, but do not overplant.

Oriental poppies die down around this time. The plants can be lifted, divided, and transplanted. If a large number of new plants are wanted, the roots can be cut into 2 inch lengths and planted in a cold frame or where some protection can be given.

Thursday, July 19

If the foliage of the delphinium plants are malformed or blackened spray or dust with rotenone or pyrethrum at one week intervals. The condition is caused by cyclamen mite.

If evergreen turn rusty, examine them for red spider. To control, syringe with water and repeat at close intervals. Sulphur also will serve as a control. If there are brown spots in the lawn examine them for sod web worms. If any are present, water with a can of pyrethrum preparation at the rate of one gallon to each square yard.

Friday, July 20

Do not mow the lawn very short at this season. About 1½ to 2 inches is right. Once a week watering of the lawn is sufficient if a thoro saturation is made.

Violas will give better flowers if cut back and given plant food now. Keep roses well watered; mulching will aid them in keeping in healthy growth with good blooms. Two inches of peat moss used as a mulch makes it unnecessary to water so much.

Saturday, July 21

Many soils in city gardens lack humus, formerly supplied by plowing or spading under manure in the fall. Since this is not generally available a green manure may be used. This is obtained by sowing winter rye in the fall and spading under early in April. An application of plant food also should be made at the rate of 3 to 4 pounds per 100 square feet.

Partly rotted straw or alfalfa hay may be spaded under in the fall and it will be decayed by spring. Wherever possible, the gardener should have a compost heap which is simply decomposed refuse, such as corn stalks, cabbage stems, soft weeds, garbage, grass clippings, leaves, manure, or anything that will decay. Some lime and a complete fertilizer added will hasten decay.

SEE MANY USES FOR FACSIMILE AFTER THE WAR

Sends Printed, Pictorial Matter by Radio

BY LARRY WOLTERS

That word "facsimile" has been appearing with increasing frequency lately. In case you don't recall its meaning, facsimile involves the transmission of printed, pictorial, or other graphic matter by radio or telephone circuits. All works in this field for the public was stopped in December, 1941. It has been greatly developed since for war uses.

"The experience gained in developing and building [facsimile] for the armed services will be reflected in post-war models showing impressive advances in this art," a statement by Finch Telecommunications asserts. W. G. H. Finch, head of the company and a pioneer in this field, is serving as a commander in the navy.

Provides Permanent Record

Facsimile, like television, is visual. But television is transient, while facsimile provides a permanent, exact replica. It can transmit anything that can be written—maps, charts, signatures, legal documents, drawings, half tone photographs. It may be capable of transmitting newspapers into the homes of the nation.

The facsimile "recorder" or "printer" is automatic in its operation as long as the radio receiver to which it is attached is turned on and tuned to the sending station. Many radio receivers may some day include a facsimile recorder in combination with standard radio, FM, television, and phonograph.

Facsimile transmission is based on the ability of a photoelectric cell to change variations of light value into variations of electric current. This current is amplified and sent to the recorder by radio or wire. At the recorder a stylus or needle moves over specially treated recording paper at the same speed and in synchronization with the light beam at the transmitter. The speed of transmission, when typographical matter is sent, exceeds average reading speed.

Many Services Foreseen

Among the unique services that facsimile will provide is the reception of written or printed matter aboard machines in motion—planes, ships, trains, automobiles. The value of written messages is obvious. A plane pilot will have on file written messages or orders for reference at any time. Weather maps, storm warnings, barometric readings, wind velocity, and other data are reduced to permanent, visible records. Facsimile will relieve the pilot for attention to other matters.

Facsimile will have similar advantages for ships at sea, harbor tugs, lighters, and other craft, including fishing fleets. It will be useful for sending permanent messages long distances. In tests aboard the Queen Mary photographs were successfully transmitted to New York over a distance of 2,900 miles.

Useful in Police Work

In police radio work facsimile is expected to make for speed and accuracy of orders, secrecy, details of fingerprints, and identifications. Policemen on patrol, at precincts or in booths will get written messages. Cost of equipment, it is said, will be within reach of even the smallest police force.

In offices and industrial plants, facsimile may point the way to reduce the waste and some times dangers that result thru errors of misunderstanding. It will facilitate the rule, so often disregarded: Put it in writing.

Among the industries and professions which are showing an interest in this new medium of communication are newspapers, banks, distribution houses, hospitals, attorneys, railroads, chain stores, department stores, libraries, insurance companies, and manufacturing companies.

WORRY IS OLD STORY IN THIS CALM MUSEUM

Oriental Institute Is Reassuring

The fifth of a series of articles telling of interesting places available to Chicagoans who are vacationing at home due to war time travel conditions.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET

Chicagoans desirous of starting out their vacations by forgetting the cares of today might profit by traveling back to the beginnings of civilization. At the Oriental institute they may look upon mummies of Egyptians who did their worrying 3,000 years ago. The Egyptians were bothered about taxes and laundry and other problems. The world has gone on.

Wars are an old story. On a column of dried mud, an Assyrian king back in 700 B. C. recorded his military victories. He tells us how with battering rams—the attack of infantry, by tunnels, breaches, and the use of axes he took the cities of Hezekiah.

An Early Propagandist

The Oriental institute not only displays the royal annals of Sennacherib, but a translation of the tooled inscriptions on the prism in the glass case can be found in the institute's library. The other side of the story is told in the Bible.

The Assyrian king apparently utilized propaganda in that far off day for he omits any reference to a plague with which, according to the Hebrew historian, his army was afflicted.

Looting the enemy's treasures was not an original idea with Goering. A ruling prince in Palestine 3,300 years ago left evidence that he knew what to expect from conquerors at the gate. He was successful in keeping his personal belongings hidden until eight years ago when the Institute's Megiddo expedition discovered them beneath a palace floor.

Fancy Razor Strop

Vacationing Chicagoans may gaze upon the cache. The prince owned a cosmetic jar rimmed with gold, a razor strop capped with gold, a ring with scarab setting, and beads of granulated gold. Within a glass case at the institute, they are still being safeguarded.

Travel had its difficulties in 2800 B. C. The Sumerian chariot had the advantage of not needing gas. A reconstructed model at the institute shows one of the chariots drawn by four patient onagers [wild donkeys]. The charioteer appears prepared for rough going as he stands astride a small ledge fixed above the axle. The wheels have nonskid rims to give them a better grip on the ground. Better to have stayed home in those early days unless the trip was really necessary.

If you have an idea that skyscrapers are something new, study the institute's model of the "Tower of Babel" made after a survey of the actual foundations in Babylon. Ancient architects used the same set-back plan that is utilized by modern builders.

Solomon as Horse Trader

The model of Solomon's stables also was based on the Institute's discoveries and it indicates that Solomon, as well as being a wise man, was a horse trader on an international scale.

Visitors are amazed to learn that the Egyptian bed at the Institute is more than 5,000 years old and they agree that the material of which it was made is still in remarkably good condition, but they are puzzled by its small size. They ask if it were not a child's bed. It is explained that such beds were customarily short, obliging the sleeper to lie with legs drawn up.

At the Institute there is the black stone statue of a falcon that was the sacred bird of the solar god, Horus, whose temple, in 1090 B. C., was at Edfu. Now this bird gave plenty of advice to persons who have long since passed from the earth, but it had but two answers, yes or no. Look closely and you will find a hole drilled thru it from head to base. The branch opening thru the beak suggests that the bird made a movement in response to the manipulation of strings. The stone bird has survived his questioners by too many centuries to be taken to task by any of them now for any of its faulty decisions.

King Tut a Young Ruler

One of the visitor's first impressions of the colossal statue of Tutenkhamon is that he was a young man when he ruled Egypt. The statue, fully restored, is one of two the Institute discovered in its crusade to uncover records which man had left behind and which nature had filed away in stratified deposits. Both statues were cut in red quartzite. The second is in the Cairo museum in Egypt.

Awe inspiring is the Institute's Assyrian winged bull from King Sargon's palace that fills the east wall of the Egyptian hall. The great human-headed bull was carved from a single block of stone, weighs 40 tons, and stands more than 16 feet high.

Needs Separate Foundation

So massive is the exhibit which was found in a dozen pieces that it has been given a foundation separate from the rest of the building. The visitor is a puny figure before this guardian creature that was called a "cherub" by the ancients.

We are told that this cherub was one of a pair adjoining another pair that flanked the portal leading from the palace courtyard to the throne-room. He was imposing enough to

Girl Farmers Lend Best Efforts to Provide Service Men with Fresh Vegetables

A bumper crop of tomatoes soon will be heading to the service men's centers from the Marquette park vegetable gardens. The park's method of cultivation is responsible for the size of the crop. Gloria Filipoff, 5649 S. Albany av., is giving special attention to the plants since they were taken from the greenhouse and set in the outdoor flats. Each plant is surrounded by an upright sewer pipe 15 inches high. Planted in this manner, a more luxuriant growth of vegetables results. Miss Filipoff, who has been working at the nursery two summers, says.

Roman J. Weyrich, foreman of floriculture at the park, instructs Shirley Wunderlich (center), 6832 Justine st., and Carol Browning, 5645 Troy st., how to use the automatic cabbage planter. While one girl drops the young plant into a funnel, the other presses on a handle which digs a hole, places the root to the correct depth, and covers it with soil. This method not only speeds planting, but prevents strained back muscles.

Some azaleas in the nursery are more than 45 years old. Because azaleas do not like direct sunlight, a protective ceiling and walls of laths, spaced two inches apart, permit only a small amount of sunlight to reach the leaves. Marge McGrath, 6958 S. Wolcott av., waters the plants with two special formulas which include iron sulphate and aluminum sulphate. Margie McGuigan, 7029 S. Wolcott av., rakes the ground free of weeds.

Peter Mikesh, 5630 Trumbull av., developed the espalier which is set alongside the greenhouse. Nine years ago he grafted a pear cutting to a quince tree. Now he has to use a ladder to pick the ripe fruit. While the tree looks like quince the fruit is a succulent pear variety.

Handling a wheelbarrow is but one task done by Joan Halper, 6515 S. Seeley av., and the 20 other high school and college girls employed at Marquette park, 67th st. and Kedzie av. Working six days a week, the girls do much of the planting, pruning, digging, and other chores around the nursery and propagating farm.

WOUNDED DOLL LEADS OTHERS AT EXHIBITION

She Is a Survivor of Normandy Battle

Protocol to the contrary, a French peasant girl wounded by shrapnel takes precedence over British military officers and American WACS and WAVES in the doll collection of Mrs. Albert F. Heino, Dolton, and her daughter, Peggy Jean, 8. Tho not so grim as most battle souvenirs, the 27 war time dolls presented an effective picture of World War II. in a recent exhibit at Chicago Lawn library, 6234 S. Kedzie av.

The French peasant girl, a yarn doll, was given by a family in Normandy to Mrs. Heino's brother, Sgt. Lyle Monson of New Windsor, Ill., and traveled across her native land with American troops. Shrapnel, which penetrated the knapsack in which she was carried, tore the doll's skirt but did not injure Sgt. Monson.

From England Sgt. Monson sent his sister and niece a set of eight dolls representing a British sailor, soldier, flyer, Boy Scout, civil service worker, Red Cross nurse, junior nurse, and a member of the women's land army. The dolls were made by British Red Cross volunteers. Among Sgt Monson's other contributions are a doll from an antique shop in England and another from Belgium.

Dolls in WAC and WAVE uniforms, a paratrooper, a Greek soldier, and a mischievous gremlin have places in the military family.

Mrs. Heino and Peggy Jean began their collection in 1938, and now have 350 dolls of various nationalities and materials.

Canning Classes

Homemakers wishing to learn proper canning methods may attend a series of lectures at Commonwealth Edison company, 852 W. 63d st., on Tuesday afternoons.

New Library Opens

The Chicago library has opened a new sub-branch in the Altgeld Gardens housing project, 192d st. and Ellis av. Miss Frances Howland and Mrs. Mae Rochelle will be in charge.

SET DEADLINES FOR SINGERS IN MUSIC FESTIVAL

Entries Will Close at 6 P.M. Tomorrow

BY PHILIP MAXWELL

Deadline for entry of singers residing on the south and southwest sides of Chicago in the Cook county vocal contest for the 16th annual Chicago Music Festival will be tomorrow at 6 p. m. All entry blanks must be in festival headquarters in Tribune Tower at that time.

The two night south and southwest side contests will be held in the ballroom of the Shoreland hotel on Tuesday and Wednesday nights, July 24 and 25 at 7 p. m. The festival concert will be held in Soldiers' Field Saturday night, Aug. 18, when the two best men and two best women singers of the vocal contest will appear before 90,000 persons in the vocal finals.

Young Contralto Enters

Among the contestants already entered is Miss Winifred Heckman, 21 year old contralto of 7818 Crandon av. Miss Heckman won the contralto division of the Cook county contest in 1942 and has won many other competitions.

Another entrant is Carol Lois Merrill, 17, a coloratura soprano, who lives at 8216 Harper av. Miss Merrill was a precocious child. She carried a tune when she was 18 months old and began her piano training at the age of 4. She has perfect pitch. She is a graduate of Hirsch High school.

Vocal Teachers to Judge

On her entry blank she wrote: "I hope to make a career of music and appreciate the opportunities the Chicago Music Festival contests are offering young students."

The singers will be judged by a committee of three vocal teachers. Public admission price to the auditions is 50 cents. The festival and its preliminary contests are sponsored by the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc. All profits go to this fund. Dramatic sopranos, mezzos, tenors, contraltos, and baritones will be heard July 24 and on the following night coloratura and lyric sopranos, bass-baritones, and basses will be auditioned.

Conduct Campaign

Policemen in Chicago Heights are conducting a drive to enforce a city ordinance requiring all dogs to be registered and wear tags.

Name Community Fund Chairman for S. W. Side

The appointment of George Fisher, Lombard, as Community and War fund chairman for southwest Chicago has been announced by James R. Sterling, 3750 Lake Shore dr., city division chairman. J. C. Lowry, Midlothian, has been named region secretary to coördinate the southwest area campaign with the city-wide project.

Goodwill Firm Looks to War Torn Futures

BY ELOISE EDSON

Walter Loague

Ability to earn a living is important, but the capacity for enjoying that living is even more essential. This fact, in the opinion of a Chicagoan experienced in employing handicaped persons, must be a prime consideration in the rehabilitation of battle front and industrial front victims.

For 24 years executive director of the city's Goodwill Industries, Inc., at 2425 Wallace st., Walter C. Loague has aided thousands of persons with ortheopedic, organic, mental, and other handicaps to learn trades thru which they are now self-supporting. More important to these people than vocational training, however, has been the renewal of their self-confidence and enthusiasm for life. This same personality adjustment, Loague insists, must play a part in the treatment of war casualties.

Take Case of Helen

How this theory may be given practical application is exemplified in the case histories of Chicagoans who have benefited in the past from the Goodwill project.

Helen, an attractive blonde, 23, lost all self-confidence when her right hand was amputated after a factory accident. Normally friendly and popular, she withdrew from social life, shunned her friends. In the presence of others she tried to

Jones Will Direct Choir of 1,000

J. Wesley Jones

Music favorites—red hot band leaders as well as name singers from concert and musical comedy stages—will entertain at the sixth American Negro Musical festival Friday night at White Sox park. Based on past festival records, Friday's show is expected to draw 50,000 spectators.

An interracial choir of 1,000 voices, under direction of J. Wesley Jones, well known choral director, will exemplify the cause of racial good will to which the festival is dedicated.

Anne Brown, lyric soprano and the original Bess in George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," will repeat the melodies which she introduced and made famous. She also will be heard in Negro art and folk songs. Miss Brown soon will be seen in the film version of the life of the late George Gershwin, "Rhapsody in Blue."

Lionel Hampton to Play

Lionel Hampton, chosen the most outstanding band of the year in a poll of Chicago Defender readers, will add a hepcat flavor to the evening. In recognition of this distinction, Mayor Kelly has been asked to present a trophy to the band leader.

A solemn note will be interjected when a memorial ceremony honoring President Roosevelt will be held. Against a background of united nations flags a soldier and sailor color guard will stand at attention while the massed choir sings the favorite hymn of the late President, "Faith of Our Fathers." Petty Officer Graham Jackson, accordionist who played "Going Home" as the body of the President was borne from Warm Springs, Ga., will play that favorite again. Then the lights of the stadium will be darkened and the audience will stand for a moment of silent prayer.

Paul Muni in Show

Hollywood will be represented at the festival by Paul Muni who will appear in a specially written dramatic sketch depicting interracial unity.

Outstanding among the evening performers will be the 1,000 voiced choir singing patriotic and religious songs. Director Jones was assisted in the training of this group by the following directors from south side churches:

Calvin B. Williams, John E. Rogers Jr., W. E. Gossett, Herbert Carter, Mrs. Cora W. Swift, George Gullett, Mrs. Omega King, Elmur Simpson, Mrs. Sadie B. Owens, Mrs. Antionette Tompkins, D. T. Birdwell, Blanche Thompson, E. C. Welch, Thomas A. Dorsey, Mrs. Marion Randall, William Orr, Ozias H. Taylor, James H. Barr, Herman Billingsly, and J. T. Campbell.

W. C. Handy Honorary Chairman

W. C. Handy, often called the Father of the Blues, has been chosen honorary chairman of the festival. The 72 year old composer of "St. Louis Blues" last year received a festival scroll for distin-

GOODWILL FIRM LOOKS TO WAR VICTIM'S FUTURE

Director Puts Industrial Casualty in Plans

hide her handicap. She was unable to look directly at any one while talking.

When Helen applied for employment at Goodwill industries at the suggestion of her physician, she was given work in which there was ample opportunity to exercise her own initiative. Altho she first used only her left hand, keeping the stump of her right wrist in a pocket, she became so interested in her work that she unconsciously began to use her right arm. Simultaneously with awareness that she was doing so came realization that her fellow workers were not startled or repulsed by her handicap. Soon she was using both arms with facility.

Will Wed Service Man

After serving efficiently as a department head at Goodwill headquarters, Helen left for a good job in private industry. Today she is as happy and popular as ever. Her engagement to a service man was announced recently.

How was this transformation effected? In Helen's case, as in others, credit goes both to the trained supervisors at Goodwill and too other employes, Loague says.

"Matter of fact acceptance by fellow workers is a real morale builder for handicapped persons," he explained. "Tho a man may at first be painfully conscious of his handicap, he soon realizes that no one else here thinks anything of it. Then, too, he is sure to see others with greater troubles, and self-pity is replaced by a conviction that he is really very lucky."

Gain Spiritual Help

Another factor in this all-round training for life is spiritual guidance. Convinced that religion can help a person accept his handicap emotionally as well as logically and develop wholesome attitudes, Goodwill leaders include worship services in the plant schedule.

In a chapel which the workers themselves have fitted with altars and second hand stained glass windows, services are conducted three times weekly visiting clergymen of various faiths or by Loague. In an adjoining room, hymns are sung and messages delivered in sign language at a service for deaf employes.

Chapel attendance is not compulsory, but the majority of Goodwill workers attend and, like Helen, are given guidance in finding the spiritual values of their own faiths.

Paints Chicago Picture

Thru these three factors—the aid of trained psychologists and others, understanding on the part of associates, and spiritual guidance—men coming back from Europe and the Pacific with handicaps may return to a worthwhile and pleasant civilian life, Loague believes.

Or will service men be the only war victims in need of this assistance. It has been estimated that at the close of the war, Chicago will have 400,000 handicapped residents, many of whom will have been injured in war plant accidents. The employment of untrained workers, use of outdated machinery, speedup of production, and lack of experienced supervisors have contributed to the industrial accident rate.

May Forget Factory Workers

"Veterans are assured of treatment and assistance," the Goodwill director says, "but there is danger that these factory workers who are also war victims will be neglected and forgotten. They, too, must be given help in mental and physical adjustment."

The Goodwill system, followed in Chicago for a quarter of a century, is simple and workable. Provision is made for workers of three groups: Those who need specialized training for jobs in which their physical limitations are not a handicap; those who need supervised sheltered work as a bridge between hospitalization and regular employment, and those whose physical or mental condition is such that they never can return to private industry, but who thru Goodwill can be self-supporting.

Employs 170 Workers

A vocational training school and therapeutic shops are operated at 613 W. 31st st. In the shelter shops at Goodwill headquarters, handicapped employes are paid good wages for the repair of clothing, toys, and other items contributed by families over the city and picked up by Goodwill trucks. Thru sales of those goods in nine stores and by mail, the Goodwill project is more than 90 per cent self-supporting. Other funds come from individual contributions, the federated tag day, and the community fund. Approximately 170 white and colored workers, of all ages, are now on the pay roll.

In preparation for increased post-war demands for aid of the type offered by Goodwill, a large scale expansion program is now under way. Negotiations have been opened for a building three times larger than the former factory building on Wallace st. Officials are looking forward to eventual establishment of three complete units to serve the north, west, and south sides.

BARE SECRETS BEHIND BEAUTY OF CITY PARKS

A Storehouse of Nature Kept on S. W. Side

Have you seen in a park a spiring elm blown down by the wind or struck by lightning? If so, perhaps you have noticed how park district employes removed the dead tree—roots and all—replacing it with another of the same variety, size, and shape, and you wondered how the replacement could be obtained so quickly.

Visitors to the year around flower shows in park conservatories have found another phenomenon: A display of blooming poinsettias on exhibit one day and two days later a thousand azaleas blossoming in their stead.

For those interested in the secret of these quick transformations of trees and flowers, a visit to the Marquette park greenhouse and nursery, 67th st. and Kedzie av., will explain these seeming miracles.

30 Gardeners on Staff

Situated in the southwest section of this 322 acre park are a floral propagating house, nursery, greenhouse, and vegetable gardens. Under direction of Roman J. Weyrich of 3442 62d pl., plantation foreman, a staff of 30 tends the many varieties of shrubs, flowers, trees, vines, and vegetables.

More than 3,000 trees of various types and stages of growth are cared for in the nursery. They are grown for replacement purposes only, however, because, according to Weyrich, it has not been found economical for a city or park district to attempt to grow trees for extensive planting. "When wanted, there would not be enough of a particular age, size, or kind, and the cost is greater than if they were purchased from commercial nurseries," he explained.

Many Hazards to Trees

Chief cause of damage to trees in the 136 parks of the park district is automobile accidents. Other injurious factors are wind and lightning, gas poisoning from leaky pipes beneath the soil, disease, lack of water and nourishment due to pavements covering the roots, and small boys with axes and knives.

When a tree dies the causes are investigated carefully, the roots and trunk are measured, and an order is sent to the nursery for a replacement. Arborists select a tree that meets the specifications and superintend the replanting process.

Twenty varieties of shrubs—almost 70,000 separate plants—are grown adjacent to the nursery. They, too, are for replanting. In addition, 30,000 cuttings provide new growths as older shrubs are sent to new locations. About 10,000 vines are tended.

Thousands of Plants, Flowers

The propagating houses generally are not open to the public. In these extensive greenhouses and flats are grown many of the plants later to be set out in flower beds in various parks and boulevards. In an average year more than 100,000 flowering and other decorative plants are grown by the cutting method of propagation and 75,000 from seed.

Here, between exhibits, also rest plants from the conservatories at Garfield park. During this time they are given little water or nourishment and a minimum of light to retain them in a dormant state.

Azaleas 45 Years Old

A total of 1,200 azaleas, some of them 45 years old and among the largest in the country, are tended in outdoor lath houses. Laths are spaced to keep out direct sunlight.

Near-by 800 hydrangeas are grown in a soil of high acid content. Other varieties of rare and showy flowers include African violets, oleanders, rhododendrons, cyclamens, bougainvillaea, and chrysanthemums. Recently developed is a strain of lilies grown from seed and to blossom in 18 months.

Both patriotic and practical is the four acre area given over to a vegetable garden. Five varieties of corn, celery, cabbage, beets, and carrots are grown in addition to the principal crop, 1,400 tomato plants. All of these vegetables are donated to service men's centers.

Expect Good Tomatoes

A bumper tomato crop is expected this year from the park's unique method of cultivation. With warm weather the plants were transplanted from the greenhouse to outdoor flats where each was set in an upright sewer pipe 15 inches high. Planted in this manner, none of the branches touched the ground and a luxuriant growth of the fruit bearing branches has resulted.

This is the second summer that high school and college girls have been hired as assistant gardeners. They work six days a week and are, according to Weyrich, as efficient as professional gardeners and just as interested in their work.

give the king's callers an inferiority complex.

The floor plan of the museum in the James Henry Breasted hall is so arranged that visitors need not be confused by the array of collections. There is an information desk just inside the entrance of the building. Arrangements are gladly made for groups from schools or societies and guides are provided free during the regular museum hours.

Many organized groups have thought it worth while to come a long distance to visit the Institute. Chicagoans need not travel far to round out their knowledge of the Near East. Guides have become familiar with the remark:

"I'm coming again. I didn't realize the Oriental Institute offered so much to see in such a short time."

PARENTS OF SIX REAR CHILDREN BY FAMILY CODE

Tested and proved thru a decade of use, a list of 10 commandments for parents, devised by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Veerman, Joliet, has helped them bring up what they describe as "just a plain American family—but a very, very happy one." In a recent broadcast on W-G-N, Mrs. Veerman told a coast-to-coast audience of the rules she and her husband devised 10 years ago and have followed with their six children.

Included in the Veerman family are Geraldine, 21, now Mrs. George Beverly; Gloria, 19, Arthur, 17, Harlan, 15, Rita, 13, and Leon, 5. Harlan and Rita are public school pupils and Leon will go to school for the first time next fall.

Show, Don't Tell Them

These are the commandments:

1. Teach children that the home is the place where all the family can live together in happiness and harmony.

2. Show children how to live, rather than telling them.

3. Don't do things you wouldn't want your children to do.

4. Listen attentively when your child wants to tell you of his experiences.

5. Make it easy for your children to confide their troubles and problems in you, so they won't confide in strangers.

Be a Companion

6. Never punish your children for telling the truth, but explain to them how they were wrong.

7. Be strict, but not arbitrarily so, lest the children learn to fear you.

8. Be a companion to your children, teaching them to enjoy your hobbies.

9. Do not show partiality among your children.

10. Keep any promise you make to your children, whether they be for pleasures or punishments.

The activities of each member of the Veerman family are of interest to the other seven, Mrs. Veerman explains.

SEE MANY USES FOR FACSIMILE AFTER THE WAR

Sends Printed, Pictorial Matter by Radio

BY LARRY WOLTERS

That word "facsimile" has been appearing with increasing frequency lately. In case you don't recall its meaning, facsimile involves the transmission of printed, pictorial, or other graphic matter by radio or telephone circuits. All works in this field for the public was stopped in December, 1941. It has been greatly developed since for war uses.

"The experience gained in developing and building [facsimile] for the armed services will be reflected in post-war models showing impressive advances in this art," a statement by Finch Telecommunications asserts. W. G. H. Finch, head of the company and a pioneer in this field, is serving as a commander in the navy.

Provides Permanent Record

Facsimile, like television, is visual. But television is transient, while facsimile provides a permanent, exact replica. It can transmit anything that can be written—maps, charts, signatures, legal documents, drawings, half tone photographs. It may be capable of transmitting newspapers into the homes of the nation.

The facsimile "recorder" or "printer" is automatic in its operation as long as the radio receiver to which it is attached is turned on and tuned to the sending station. Many radio receivers may some day include a facsimile recorder in combination with standard radio, FM, television, and phonograph.

Facsimile transmission is based on the ability of a photoelectric cell to change variations of light value into variations of electric current. This current is amplified and sent to the recorder by radio or wire. At the recorder a stylus or needle moves over specially treated recording paper at the same speed and in synchronization with the light beam at the transmitter. The speed of transmission, when typographical matter is sent, exceeds average reading speed.

Many Services Foreseen

Among the unique services that facsimile will provide is the reception of written or printed matter aboard machines in motion—planes, ships, trains, automobiles. The value of written messages is obvious. A plane pilot will have on file written messages or orders for reference at any time. Weather maps, storm warnings, barometric readings, wind velocity, and other data are reduced to permanent, visible records. Facsimile will relieve the pilot for attention to other matters.

Facsimile will have similar advantages for ships at sea, harbor tugs, lighters, and other craft, including fishing fleets. It will be useful for sending permanent messages long distances. In tests aboard the Queen Mary photographs were successfully transmitted to New York over a distance of 2,900 miles.

Useful in Police Work

In police radio work facsimile is expected to make for speed and accuracy of orders, secrecy, details of fingerprints, and identifications. Policemen on patrol, at precincts or in booths will get written messages. Cost of equipment, it is said, will be within reach of even the smallest police force.

In offices and industrial plants, facsimile may point the way to reduce the waste and some times dangers that result thru errors of misunderstanding. It will facilitate the rule, so often disregarded: Put it in writing.

Among the industries and professions which are showing an interest in this new medium of communication are newspapers, banks, distribution houses, hospitals, attorneys, railroads, chain stores, department stores, libraries, insurance companies, and manufacturing companies.

PRISONER OF WAR SELLS ENEMY ON EXCELLENT DEAL

They Agree to Surrender and Save Scalps

Sgt. James Havron

Sgt. James Havron has had comparatively little experience in the merchandising field, but for one super selling job while a prisoner of the Nazis he was voted the outstanding trooper in his battalion.

Havron persuaded a garrison of 150 men and its commander to surrender to him while he was in a German prison camp.

The sergeant, who in two years has seen combat service in Sicily, Italy, Normandy, Holland, Belgium, and Germany was captured last spring. Twenty-four hours later he was transferred to a prison camp not far from the front lines.

Artillery Awakens Him

The following morning he was awakened by a terrific artillery blast which he reasoned must be of American origin. The sergeant promptly asked to see the Nazi commandant.

When admitted the Yank proposed the Nazi surrender his garrison to him, saying it was useless to resist the superior forces of the Americans. The German and all his men turned their weapons over to Havron.

The sergeant then requested a white flag which the enemy quickly supplied. Havron and one German noncommissioned officer set off for the American lines, where he found an officer to accept the Nazi garrison's surrender.

Returns with Four Pistols

Havron returned to his company later that day. As souvenirs he carried four German officers' pistols.

His mother, Mrs. Stephen Havron, lives at 7255 Perry av. He attended Parker High school and, prior to entering the army, was employed by the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Co. In addition to the European ribbon with four battle stars, Havron wears the Purple Heart for wounds received in Normandy, the combat infantryman's badge and the distinguished unit citation.

Orland Community Plans Picnic for Next Sunday

The third annual picnic sponsored by the Orland Community committee, of which Edward Gee is chairman, will be held next Sunday in the Orland Park picnic grove. Proceeds will be used for improvements in the high school homemaking department and gymnasium.

ROSE BOWL PLAYER SCORES TOUCHDOWN ON THREE NIP SHIPS

Lt. Gallarneau

Time was when Marine Lt. Hugh Gallarneau, 9325 Vanderpoel av., was an important cog in the intricate T formation of the famed Stanford university football team which played in the Rose bowl in 1941. After that he played with the Chicago Bears.

He showed he still is a good formation man during the recent campaign on Okinawa by assisting his wing of Hellcat fighters to knock out three Jap planes in night fighting.

The lieutenant has been in the marines since December, 1942.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, July 16

Gardeners are urged to continue to combat destructive insects. Spray with any recommended preparations about once a week, or until the pests are under control. Aphids must be controled by using contact sprays or dusts, such as tobacco or nicotine, pyrethrum or rotenone. The latter useful against eating insects or worms.

Aphids on hawthorn trees and the cottony maple aphid on soft maple trees may be controled with a contact spray.

Keep cultivating the garden until the plants touch one another and it is difficult to work between them.

Tuesday, July 17

Pinch outdoor chrysanthemums, give them plenty of water and mulch with decayed manure, if procurable. Tie up all plants in need of it or the stems may be blown down or fall from their own weight. Tie plants so they appear in a natural position, without stakes showing.

Order pansy seed for early sowing, calla bulbs or rhizomes, and freesia bulbs. Send for a few of the better begonias for indoors.

Make another sowing of beans, corn, beets, and keep the tomatoes well watered, but not to the point of saturation.

Mulch tomatoes with any suitable material. Use sawdust, grass clippings, peat moss [wet before using], decayed manure, or anything that is at hand.

Wednesday, July 18

If there is a horse chestnut tree in the yard and the leaves turn brown the chances are it is infested with a fungous disease. To control spray frequently with Bordeaux mixture. Collect all fallen leaves and burn them.

When transplanting cabbage and cauliflower be sure to firm the soil around the plants. Turnips are useful to follow early crops, but do not overplant.

Oriental poppies die down around this time. The plants can be lifted, divided, and transplanted. If a large number of new plants are wanted, the roots can be cut into 2 inch lengths and planted in a cold frame or where some protection can be given.

Thursday, July 19

If the foliage of the delphinium plants are malformed or blackened spray or dust with rotenone or pyrethrum at one week intervals. The condition is caused by cyclamen mite.

If evergreen turn rusty, examine them for red spider. To control, syringe with water and repeat at close intervals. Sulphur also will serve as a control. If there are brown spots in the lawn examine them for sod web worms. If any are present, water with a can of pyrethrum preparation at the rate of one gallon to each square yard.

Friday, July 20

Do not mow the lawn very short at this season. About 1½ to 2 inches is right. Once a week watering of the lawn is sufficient if a thoro saturation is made.

Violas will give better flowers if cut back and given plant food now. Keep roses well watered; mulching will aid them in keeping in healthy growth with good blooms. Two inches of peat moss used as a mulch makes it unnecessary to water so much.

Saturday, July 21

Many soils in city gardens lack humus, formerly supplied by plowing or spading under manure in the fall. Since this is not generally available a green manure may be used. This is obtained by sowing winter rye in the fall and spading under early in April. An application of plant food also should be made at the rate of 3 to 4 pounds per 100 square feet.

Partly rotted straw or alfalfa hay may be spaded under in the fall and it will be decayed by spring. Wherever possible, the gardener should have a compost heap which is simply decomposed refuse, such as corn stalks, cabbage stems, soft weeds, garbage, grass clippings, leaves, manure, or anything that will decay. Some lime and a complete fertilizer added will hasten decay.

After 'Highlights,' Critic Yearns for Real Ballet

Tradition and Stars Suffer, Writer Warns

By Claudia Cassidy

Things theatrical being too somnolent to disturb of a quiet Sunday, perhaps you won't mind if we branch off into the theatrical sidelines of opera and ballet. Frankly, both of them have me not exactly worried, but wary. Considering the dismal results of last season's operatic concert, which laid an artistic ostrich egg at the Civic Opera house, tho it was financially backed by subscription, we may not be disturbed by that sort of thing again. But "Ballet Russe Highlights," which recently played five performances at Orchestra hall, mopped up at the boxoffice, tho it was a tabloid version of ballet, sold at prices as high or higher than the real thing. Is this inflation, an isolated instance, or a trend?

They tell me the town is ballet hungry, which is undeniably true. Only the inertia of local managers robbed us of a successful spring season of ballet, as they were afraid to risk anything more than the fall and early winter visits of Ballet Theater and the Ballet Russe. But I can't believe that local balletomanes are suffering from such malnutrition they are satisfied with synthetic stuff. "Ballet Russe Highlights" was not so much for the ballet hungry as for those who had never attended a ballet banquet. I hope they drop in some time when a real feast is spread.

Ballet is one of the most luxurious of theater arts. At its best it is breathtakingly magnificent. At Orchestra hall it had a poor stage [the management was unable to rent the Civic Opera house, tho it is abysmally dark and deserted], no settings beyond the velvet backdrops, no corps de ballet, a makeshift orchestra that made reckless forays into music far beyond its capacities, miserably impromptu lighting, choreography that seemed to make up its mind as it went along, and dancing, for all its seven "stars," of an average caliber no ballet master in the high tradition would tolerate.

It isn't enough to excuse this sort of thing by saying it makes money. What it really does is to drag ballet tradition in the dust of careless incompetence, and in the process it cheapened almost beyond redemption the once lustrous name of Leonide Massine. Massine's one touch of brilliance in a welter of miscalled "novelties" came in the sketch of the "Leningrad" symphony. Yet he is the creator of "Choreartium," of "Symphonic Fantastique," and dozens of other distinguished ballets, including the lovely "Beau Danube," stripped to a single shabby shred as a disillusioning "highlight."

The major disappointment in dancing was Irina Baronova, once one of the baby ballerinas [Toumanova and Riabouchinska were the others], an exquisite youngster with rare delicacy and instinctive reserve and the budding brilliance of a prima ballerina. She is still beautiful, but it is beauty with a suntan makeup, a musical comedy smile, a coquettish flourish to hide the deficiencies of her rusty style. André Eglevsky was undisciplined and spotty, but he has brilliance when he goes seriously to work. Yurek Lazowski, of "Russian Soldier" fame, is a first rate dancer who doesn't know how to loaf, and Kathryn Lee has tremendous promise if she doesn't lose her head to applause and sacrifice a gleaming future to a flashy present. I would like to see her in a crack ballet troupe where nothing but her best would be tolerated. But then, after the starvation rations of "Ballet Russe Highlights," I would like to see almost any one in a crack ballet troupe.

Speaking of operatic concerts, and we were at the start of the column, I wonder how many people in that audience last winter, confronted with the dismal sight of four singers mauling makeshift scenes from opera, sighed for the gala nights the late Louis Eckstein used to stage at Ravinia? I remember one night he began with the second act of "Manon," with Bori and Schipa, then turned to the first act of "Butterfly," with Raisa and Martinelli, and wound up with the last scene of "Manon Lescaut," with Bori and Martinelli. With full settings, of course, crack artists in lesser roles, full chorus, and the Chicago Symphony orchestra in the pit. Don't disturb me while I dream.

Meanwhile, sight of Gaetano Merola's prospectus for the 23d annual season of San Francisco Opera puts our own Chicago Opera plans considerably in the shade. Instead of our six weeks, San Francisco will have 10 regular subscription performances, five in the popular series, and five listed as extras, as well as a tour that visits Seattle, Los Angeles, Sacramento, Portland, Pasadena, San José, and San Diego.

Included in the 10 subscription performances are "Der Rosenkavalier," with Lehmann, Stevens, Steber, Glaz, Landi, and Alvary, while Traubel and Melchior appear in "Tristan and Isolde" and "Die Walküre." Pinza will sing "Boris Godunoff," with Baccaloni, Jagel, Della Chiesa, and others, while Lily Pons appears in "Lucia" and "Rigoletto," the latter with Peerce and Valentino. Risë Stevens will sing "Carmen" with Eleanor Steber as Micaela and Raoul Jobin as Don José, while Licia Albanese sings "La Boheme" with Kullman, Valentino, Pinza, and Baccaloni, and the "Don Giovanni" cast holds Pinza, Baccaloni, Landi, Alvary, Della Chiesa, and Albanese. There also is a double bill of "Salomé," with Djanel, and Ravel's "L'Heure Espagnole," with Albanese, Harrell, and Baccaloni. Half a dozen other operas are included in the other series.

The conductors are Merola himself, William Steinberg, George Sebastian, and Pietro Cimara. We have an edge with Bruno Walter and George Szell, but the caliber of the season otherwise outdistances us. Think of lucky San Francisco, with Lehmann, Melchior, and Pierre Monteux, too!

"Life with Father," Erlanger, 8th week. Return engagement of play by Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse, after book by Clarence Day, with Carl Benton Reid and Betty Linley. Nightly except Sunday; Wednesday and Saturday matinees: $3, $2.40, $1.80, $1.20.

COMING

"Good Night Ladies," Blackstone theater, Aug. 6. Return engagement of farce by Cyrus Wood.

"Carmen Jones," to the Erlanger Aug. 25. Billy Rose's Negro version of Bizet's "Carmen" with book and lyrics by Oscar Hammerstein II., and music arrangements by Robert Russell Bennett.

"Laffing Room Only," to open Shubert theater, Sept. 3, with Olsen and Johnson.

"Anna Lucasta," Civic theater, Sept. 24. All Negro drama by Philip Yordan.

Notes of the Theater

Brock Pemberton reports himself hard at work on the job of casting a second "Harvey," "to break down the legend that only Frank Fay can play it." Mr. Pemberton considers Mr. Fay's part one of the fattest ever written, and he is determined to achieve another troupe of first class caliber. When it is ready he may bring it to Chicago, then take it to the coast. On the other hand, he may reverse that touring procedure.

The west coast revival of "The Desert Song," by the sponsors of "Song of Norway," may come to Chicago before tackling New York. Considering that "Carmen Jones" has the Erlanger and "Laffing Room Only" the new Shubert [Majestic], it looks like the Civic Opera house. "Laffing Room Only," meanwhile, closed in New York after 28 weeks, Olsen and Johnson's shortest run. Their Chicago engagement puts them close to the site of their first job here, at the old North American cafe.

The New York newspaper strike has made a big difference in night club and theatrical business, according to the managers. One of them said, "The strike has most certainly taught us the indispensability of newspapers to our business."

Having once broken the ice on duplicating "The Voice of the Turtle," Alfred de Liagre Jr. is now at work on the Boston company, destined to open there next January. Harvey Stephens, who leaped from Chicago's "Over Twenty-One" to replace Elliott Nugent briefly in the New York cast, will play Sgt. Bill Page. Meanwhile Mr. de Liagre has his eye on a London troupe about that same time. He thinks the original company, Margaret Sullavan, Audrey Christie, and Mr. Nugent, might make the trip. If so, a substitute for the indefatigable Mr. Nugent would move in the New York cast, which apparently never intends to close.

Max Gordon is back at work on that promised revival of "The Great Waltz," with no word yet as to who will sing the leading roles created by Marion Claire and Guy Robertson. George Rigaud, a French star from Argentina, will play the younger Strauss in "Mr. Strauss Goes to Boston," which Boston actually will see in about a month. And add to the impending pieces on composers and their music a fiesta about Dvorak in Iowa.

Now and then a project announced far in advance actually materializes. Thomas Job's "Therese" is due in New York early in October, with Eva Le Gallienne, Dame May Whitty, and Victor Jory, exactly as specified. Margaret Webster directs.

"Life with Father" ends its Erlanger engagement Aug. 4, and moves on to Washington. And there seems no reprieve at the moment from Aug. 6 as the date "Good Night Ladies" moves back to the Blackstone.

Remember Margo Jones, listed as co-director of "The Glass Menagerie," tho she left early in the run for her Dallas Civic Repertory theater? Both Tennessee Williams, who wrote the play, and Jo Mielziner, who designed it, have gone on her Dallas board.

Truth Extracted at Last—The Prince Had a Toothache!

"AT the risk of still further cluttering up your desk," writes Alma de V. Schaub of Evanston, "I feel compelled to add one more anecdote. I am, perhaps, the only person who can clear up the mystery of the walkout of Prince Henry of Prussia on the gala opera performance given in his honor in New York in 1902. Whether or not he liked opera or what his manners were habitually, I do not know, but that night he had a reason. Unfortunately the singers did not know anything about it and were, quite justifiably, offended.

"My father, the late Dr. Henry de Vries, for many years practiced dentistry in New York, and he counted among his patients many stars of the opera and the stage. On the night of the gala performance, about 1 o'clock in the morning, the newly installed telephone rang in our suburban home. I remember how annoyed my father was because he had feared being called at night, and had held out as long as he could against the installation of a phone. It was a call from the hotel suite of Prince Henry, and some one in attendance on the prince asked my father to come as quickly as possible. The prince was suffering from a terrible toothache.

"My father arrived at the New York hotel about 2:30 in the morning and found the prince pacing the floor. He had been in severe pain since early in the evening and had at first refused to go to the opera, but had finally consented. He arrived late, but he could not attend to the music, so severe was the throbbing in his molar, and he left before the performance was over. He was in such pain that he neither cared who was singing nor what any one thought of his actions. The tooth, under an old fashioned crown, was badly ulcerated, but the pain was quickly relieved. Later the prince made several visits to my father's office and had considerable dental work done, asserting that never again would he go to any but an American trained dentist.

"My father said later that he could well understand Mme. Sembrich's annoyance and the feelings of all those who had planned and participated in the performance, but that the prince was in such pain he couldn't sit still. He added that the prince had the worst dental work he had ever seen.

"Evidently Prince Henry did not want it known that a prince of the blood, especially that of Prussia, could be downed by a mere toothache. He begged my father not to tell any one and seemed to prefer being accused of bad manners rather than of what he considered cowardice. How like a Prussian! But he didn't bind the dentist's daughter to secrecy, so there it is. What does it matter now?"

I think it matters a lot, Mrs. Schaub, and thank you. Not only does Prince Henry change before our eyes from a royal boor to a pathetic fellow creature tangled in red tape and a toothache, but the whole episode makes you wonder what the history of the world would be like if a good dentist always had been at hand to ease the royal pangs before they turned into poison fangs.

More Anent That Sembrich Walkout

As to that Auditorium performance of "The Magic Flute" where Sembrich and Fritzi Scheff struck sparks, here are reports from two Chicagoans who were in the audience.

"'The Magic Flute,'" writes John Hervey, "was at that time the Metropolitan's best seller, for the galaxy of stars assembled in it was dazzling indeed. Sembrich was then at the peak of her popularity and prestige. She had replaced Melba as the coloratura assoluta of the company and while her natural vocal equipment was not quite so wonderful as her rival's she made up for it by her extraordinary musicianship and cleverness as an actress. Her Queen of the Night was a magnificent tour de force—Melba herself always shied away from that role. The ovations that Sembrich received for her singing in it were always tremendous, for her makeup, costume, and appearance in the character added to her effectiveness.

"It is no wonder, therefore, when, carried away by the brilliant singing and artistic harlequinade of Fritzi Scheff and Campanari as Papagena and Papageno, the audience refused to listen to her when she came on for her great closing aria, after she had begun it, she refused to continue, walked offstage, returned to her hotel, and issued the fiat that never again would she sing in opera here—which resolution she strictly adhered to. She sang here afterward in recital, but never in opera.

"Incidentally, nobody ever heard or saw such pandemonium at a performance of grand opera in Chicago as on this occasion. As the opera was a very long one, the giving of any encores whatever had been prohibited. But Scheff and Campanari sang and acted their last act duet with such brilliance that the audience simply refused to allow the performance to proceed until they had repeated it. Every expedient that the management could think of was tried to quiet the house, but in vain. It was a sold-out one and determined to have what it wanted, irrespective of the management, Sembrich, or aught else. So when she appeared and began her grand aria, instead of the death like silence with which she usually was greeted, there was a storm of yells, howls, stamping of feet, hissing, and hooting. Not a note that she sang was audible, while the orchestra was completely drowned out. She made a brave attempt to dominate the situation, but it was futile—and then she made her exit, never to be seen or heard again in Chicago in an operatic performance."

"I know of how little worth testimony in regard to past events may be," adds Dr. George Martin McBean, "but I also was present at the performance when Mme. Sembrich walked out on Fritzi Scheff, and I remember when calls came for 'Sembrich' and she did not appear that Fritzi came out before the curtain and announced to the audience, 'She won't come out. She got mad and went home,' at which everybody laughed and gave Fritzi another round of applause. This may not be letter perfect, but 40 years after is a long time to remember accurately."

Three Belated Cheers

Well, we didn't get far in the laudable project of clearing up my desk, but since when is a desk as important—or as entertaining—as eyewitness accounts that bring long dusty and distorted incidents back to life? Three belated cheers for gallant Prince Henry and the embattled Sembrich. But Fritzi still wins. She got hers when they could do her some good—40 years ago.

'Rodelinda' and Mozart Cycle Are Scheduled

By Albert Goldberg

Twelve university concerts which promise to vary the stereotyped pattern of current musical activity are announced by the University of Chicago department of music, Cecil Smith, chairman, to take place next season from October thru May. The new series will combine the former chamber and composers' concerts into a single course, with eight programs of chamber music, one opera performance, and three concerts of music by living composers, under the direction of Remi Gassmann. All events will be held in Mandel hall.

The chamber concerts will feature a Mozart cycle, consisting of one entire program of miscellaneous compositions for various instrumental combinations, with numerous other Mozart works scattered thru the season's programs in combination with the music of other composers. The all-Mozart program, on Jan. 11, will consist of the String quartet in C major [Köchel No. 465]; Quintet for piano and wind instruments, E flat major [Köchel No. 452]; Sonata for bassoon and cello [Köchel No. 292], and Quartet for piano and strings [Köchel No. 478]. Performers will be the Philharmonic String quartet and Perry O'Neil, pianist; Robert Lindemann, clarinet; Florian Mueller, oboe; Clarke Kessler, bassoon, and Helen Kotas, horn.

Also of a high order of interest will be the first Chicago production of Handel's opera "Rodelinda," under Hans Lange's direction, as the final offering of the season on May 3. "Rodelinda" is the 18th opera of Handel, and was first produced in London in 1725 during the period of Handel's greatest success as a composer of Italian opera.

The season will open on Oct. 19 with a concert by a chamber orchestra of Chicago Symphony members, directed by Hans Lange, with Maria Kurenko as soprano soloist. The program will include Mozart's Symphony in A major [Köchel No. 201] and the motet, "Exultate, Jubilate"; Bach's solo cantata, "Jauchzet Gott in Allen Landen," and Ibert's Divertissement.

Isaac Stern, violinist, and Alexander Zakin, pianist, will present a program of Mozart, Brahms, Ravel, and Copland on Nov. 5. A program of 18th century music will be given on Nov. 30 by Yella Pessl, harpsichord; Harvey Noack, flute, and Dudley Powers, cello.

Alexander Schneider, violinist, and Ralph Kirkpatrick, harpsichordist, will be heard twice, in a Bach program on Feb. 6 and as soloists with the University of Chicago chamber orchestra, Hans Lange conducting, in a program of Mozart, Couperin and Haydn on Feb. 8.

The Gordon String quartet will join forces with Robert Lindemann, clarinet, to play Mozart, Ravel, and Brahms on March 8, and the Albeneri Trio will give the April 15 concert, consisting of Mozart's Trio in E major, Fauré's Trio, and Schubert's Trio in E flat. Programs and dates of the modern composers concerts will be announced later.

SOLOIST AT PARK

Donald Dickson, baritone, who appears as soloist with the Grant Park Symphony orchestra at Friday evening's free concert.

Subscription tickets for the entire series of 12 concerts will be sold for $11, tax included, or tickets for the autumn quarter of four concerts for $4, including tax. Tickets may be purchased at the university information office, 5750 Ellis av., or mail orders may be sent to the concert office, department of music, University of Chicago.

Grant park's major item of interest for the week will be the first Chicago appearance of Tossy Spivakovsky as violin soloist on Nicolai Malko's all-Tschaikowsky program with the Grant Park Symphony orchestra on Wednesday night. Spivakovsky is the young Russian violinist who served for three years as concert master of the Cleveland orchestra, a position he recently resigned to devote himself entirely to the growing demands of a concert career.

Donald Dickson, young American baritone who has sung with both the Metropolitan and Chicago operas and on several popular radio programs, will be Mr. Malko's soloist on Friday, singing "Eri tu" from Verdi's "A Masked Ball" and a group of songs to piano accompaniment. The same program lists Felix Borowski's "Ecce Homo," which in the several years since it was exhumed, after a long silence, by the Illinois Symphony orchestra has become one of the Chicago composer's most widely performed works. Charles Sears, Chicago tenor, will appear with Cavallo's Symphonic band in its regular Saturday night concert, singing the Flower Song from "Carmen" and a group of songs. Thursday night's navy "Happy Hour" will be the last of the season, the army musical forces taking over for the four remaining weeks of the season.

Tonight's concert will present two audition selected soloists, Lydia Smutny, pianist, who will be heard in two movements of MacDowell's D minor Concerto, and La Julia Rhea, Negro dramatic soprano, singing "Casta diva" from "Norma."

Because George Szell's physician declined to give permission for his patient to travel on air conditioned trains and then to conduct a week of outdoor concerts after a recent severe illness, Alfred Wallenstein, conductor of the Los Angeles Philharmonic orchestra, will take over the third week of Ravinia concerts by the Chicago Symphony orchestra. Mr. Wallenstein, a former resident here during the seven years, 1922 to 1929, that he was first cellist of and a frequent soloist with the Chicago Symphony has been heard locally only once previously as a conductor, when he directed a concert of the Women's Symphony orchestra some years ago. On leaving his Chicago post Mr. Wallenstein went to New York to become first cellist with the New York Philharmonic under Arturo Toscanini, resigning that position in 1936 to assume the duties of musical director of radio station WOR. He has been conductor of the Los Angeles Philharmonic since 1943.

As originally scheduled, Jakob Gimpel will be the piano soloist on the Tuesday and Saturday programs, playing Rachmaninoff's Concerto in C minor and Beethoven's "Emperor" concerto.

Erich Leinsdorf ends his week of concerts this afternoon with a program that includes Beethoven's "Pastoral" symphony and the first Chicago performance of "Memorial to Lidice" by the contemporary Czech composer, Bohuslav Martinu.

Building Plan of $6,000,000 for Brown U.

By The Rev. John Evans

Chief Justice Fred T. Field of the Massachusetts Supreme court announced at the recent annual meeting of Brown university alumni a $6,000,000 building plan to expand and improve the university's student housing. The construction has been approved by the university corporation and includes a new dormitory for Pembroke college, the women's campus of Brown university, Providence, R. I.

"The direct purpose of the plan," said President Henry M. Wriston, "is to serve the cause of liberal arts education thru a student environment affording privacy, study, and social warmth. It might be described as 'educational housing.' It will comprise two dormitory quadrangles and a refectory for the university. Existing dormitories in both institutions also will be renovated." The administration expects a post-war increase of the student body from a normal 1,400 to 2,000 within two years of the war's end, Dr. Wriston added.

Illinois State Normal university has 63 Illinois school teachers studying health education at the health center, which will continue thru Aug. 24. These teachers, aided by $100 stipends awarded by the United States department of public health service, were chosen by the state department of public health, assisted by university officials and school administrators. Dr. Ruth Sumner, consultant to the federal public health service, is the principal specialist coöperating with I. S. N. U. faculty in the curriculum.

Northwestern university library has added to its present 736,430 volumes approximately six thousand more books and pamphlets thru the purchase of the Kress collection of material relating to economics. The purchase was affected by a gift from Dean Homer B. Vanderblue of the school of commerce and contributions of alumni thru the Century fund.

The volumes acquired by Northwestern are duplicates of those in the libraries of Harvard university [bought 15 years ago with funds donated by Claude Washington Kress], and rare publications belonging to the late Prof. Herbert S. Foxwell of St. John's college, Cambridge.

Charlie Spivak Returns to College Inn Friday

Aragon Brings in Ran Wilde Band July 24

By Will Davidson

Charlie Spivak
[Kriegsmann Photo]

With Harry Cool's new band well under way on its new career in the Blackhawk restaurant, the loop looks forward to the return on Friday of an old favorite, Charlie Spivak. Charlie comes back to familiar surroundings in the Hotel Sherman when he plays the College Inn again, and his "sweetest trumpet in the world" undoubtedly will play reveille for many revellers. He'll be on hand for three weeks.

The Aragon ballroom, which was to have brought Henry King in Tuesday, has switched plans and will present Ran Wilde instead on the 24th. Meanwhile, next Sunday night will be the occasion of a farewell party for Jimmy McDonald and the Blue Barron band he has been leading. Benny Strong stays on at the Trianon until Aug. 24 when Henry King opens.

Next Sunday night also is the time listed for the opening of a new show at the 51 Hundred club. Maurice Rocco, exciting and eccentric pianist, Eddie White, comedian, songstress Jackie Van, and the charming young dance team, Edward and Diane, will headline the revue.

Eddie Beck, the guiding genius of Bismarck hotel entertainment, has added another potential star to his long list of discoveries. She is the exceedingly beautiful Virginia Marsh, a young stenographer who until 10 nights ago had never sung professionally. On that occasion she stepped to the microphone of the Tavern room in the Bismarck and displayed a charm and an assurance, and a magnificent voice that combine to make her a cinch for big things.

AT BLACKHAWK

Harry Cool, long popular as a singer, now is well launched on his new career as a band leader at The Blackhawk restaurant.
[Kriegsmann Photo]

She's blonde and lovely, and that smile will be the subject of many a future photograph. Her voice is sure and sweet, with strength and control that make it easy for her to do away with the mike when she wishes.

Miss Marsh isn't the only feminine attraction in the Tavern room. The Mel-O-Dears, a girl instrumental and singing trio, have taken over the intermission spot, alternating with Earl Roth's orchestra, and providing little floor shows, with Miss Marsh's help, several times during the evening. Mary Katz is the vocal soloist of the group, and with Anne Robocha plays violin. Geraldine Brown is accordionist. This group should prove a good attraction in the Tavern room.

Even tho the winds have been chilly and the rain frequent, Wayne King still draws them to the Edgewater Beach hotel. The effervescent ex-major is playing the best music of his very successful life, and the show that Dorothy Hild has arranged for the Beachwalk is a very smart one.

It features the work of her line of girls, of course. The girls have the vocal assistance of the Song Stylists for some colorful minstrel numbers and a Latin turn that is especially effective under the outdoor lights. Starring in the show are Nancy Evans, King's charming and unusually talented singer, and Ladd Lyon, the amusing acrobat with the very nervous "stooge."

King's musicians demonstrate their wares to good effect, too. In building this band Wayne has given full reign to his love of sweet music, and he injects it with his own friendly personality.

Frankie Masters is rightly proud of his vocalist, Phyllis Myles, for she has an unusual quality that sets her apart from the mine run of band vocalists. But did you know that her real name is Dillys Myfanwy Myles? She's Welsh, of course, altho born in St. Louis in 1922. And she went to school in Red Bank, N. J. In case you never heard of it, it is the town Count Basie wrote "Red Bank Boogie" about.

An automobile accident terminated a budding dancing career for Phyllis Dillys, so she continued her singing lessons, which had been started under the supervision of her father Gwilyn Myles, a noted baritone. She toured in "Naughty Marietta," went into radio, then took up band singing. She has appeared with Nat Brandwyne, Will Bradley, and Teddy Powell.

At the Stevens hotel, where Masters and his band are featured in Dorothy Dorben's superb Boulevard room show, Phyllis is proving herself one of the all time favorite band vocalists in the room's history.

Boswelling the Bistros:

Merriel Abbott will launch a new venture next month when she starts supplying package shows for the Statler hotel chain. The first "package" includes a line of six Abbott trained girls, the dance team, Lathrop and Lee who were such favorites in the recent George Olsen show at the Palmer House, Sheila Vogelle, the singing find of that show, and Nip Nelson, comedian and mimic. . . . Miss Abbott, incidentally, has signed John Sebastian, harmonica star, for the Aug. 30 show which will have the unhappy task of following the fabulous foursome into the Empire room. Jack Durante, the falldown monologist, is another on the bill.

BUTTERY SINGER

Young and lovely Joanell is again causing a stir in the Buttery of the Ambassador West, where she sings with Dave Morrison's little band, and in mid-evening floor shows.
[Seymour Photo]

Lawrence Welk opens a long engagement in San Francisco's famous St. Francis hotel on Aug. 7, his first west coast engagement. Del Courtney will be out there about that time, in the also-famous Palace. . . . Ozzie Osburn's little musical group, recently heard in the Tavern room of the Bismarck, now is playing at the Rag Doll.

Betty Hutton got the headlines but Maggie Ettinger, her wonderful representative, stole the show during a brief and busy visit here a week ago. Magnificent Maggie is Hollywood's favorite girl friend.

Speaking of Betty Hutton, little Joanell, the delightful darling of the Buttery, sings Betty's wonderful song, "Stuff Like That There" in a way to make even Bounding Betty applaud. "These Foolish Things" and "Candy" are two other new numbers on Joanell's list—both very well done. . . . Andy Russell, the new singing heartthrob who so far has not made a Chicago cafe appearance, will open at the Oriental theater Friday.

Corp. Marshall Markey, former New York newspaper man, now on furlough after a year of bomb disposal work in the European theater, can chill your blood with some stories of his unit's work on high explosives. Just a chip off the old blockbuster.

"Wonder Man." Portraying the roles of twin brothers, one a studious little man and the other a night club singer, is funster Danny Kaye. Along with him is a large cast, including Virginia Mayo and dancer Vera-Ellyn. Woods.

"Those Endearing Young Charms." Laraine Day, a clerk in a department store, is introduced to Robert Young, known to all his friends as a Casanova who leaves a trail of broken hearts behind him. How Laraine captures his heart is the plot of the story. Grand.

"A Medal for Benny." The story written by John Steinbeck tells of Benny, who is a military hero, and his home folk who inhabit a little town in southern California. Dorothy Lamour, Arturo de Cordova, and J. Carroll Naish have leading roles. Chicago.

Random Notes on New York Theater Scene

By John Chapman

NEW YORK [Special] — Random notes for a drama letter:

How can a critic, or just a plain, money paying playgoer, be sure he is right about a show when even the men who wrote it have different opinions?

My particular enthusiasm in "Carousel" is the song, "June Is Bustin' Out All Over." But Richard Rodgers, who wrote the score, tells me he thinks "If I Loved You" will outlast all the other numbers in this fine musical play.

On the other hand, Oscar Hammerstein II., who wrote the book and lyrics, believes that the hymn, "When You Walk Alone," will be the top hit over a long period of time. Both writers argue that songs of deep sentiment are better for the long haul than topical, seasonal, or novelty numbers.

Billy Rose, however, points out that many a novelty song has become well-nigh imperishable — the old "Meet Me in St. Louis," "Banjo on My Knee," Rose's own "Barney Google."

It may be that pranksome fate will make some other number from "Carousel" the long-time favorite—"You're a Queer One, Judie Jordan," for instance. Tin Pan alley has many examples of songs which never made a ripple during the run of the shows they were in, or for some years afterward and then suddenly became minor classics.

'CORN IS GREEN'

Bette Davis as the courageous school teacher in "The Corn Is Green." State-Lake.

When the late Tamara sang "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes" in Jerome Kern's "Roberta" nobody paid it any mind. Another sleeper was Cole Porter's "Begin the Beguine." This was so unimpressive on first hearing that I cannot now remember what musical it was in and would have to dig thru the Mantle yearbooks to figure it out.

Billy Rose told me the other day something I had not known of the career of Katharine Cornell. He learned it several years ago when he went backstage to see Miss Cornell after the premiere of a play. There were many visitors in the dressing room, all telling her how wonderful she was. When it came Billy's turn he said, "You walk like one of the great show girls—like Dolores, perhaps."

This so pleased Miss Cornell that she asked Billy to stay after the others had left and talk some more. It was refreshing, she said, to get a compliment about something besides her voice or her acting. As to walking like a show girl, perhaps she had learned the art of graceful movement at her start in show business—when she was a wire walker! Set up a tight rope, girls, and practice.

Despite Lee Shubert's pronouncement that there never is a theater shortage—he seems to think managers should space their productions instead of all trying to get to Broadway by November—next season's housing problem promises to be acute, especially for musicals. One big theater has been ordered vacated by the newspaper which owns it. Two other large auditoriums are uninhabitable in summer because of lack of cooling. In 1946 there will be some relief when Howard S. Cullman, most noted theatrical angel, takes possession of the Hammerstein theater, which now is used as a broadcasting studio.

Another how-a-career-began paragraph: Marc Connelly recalls that Charles MacArthur, co-author of the best-constructed comedy melodrama ever made, "The Front Page," arrived in New York two minutes ahead of a posse of New Jersey police. Connelly, Robert Benchley, and others took him to a speakeasy and began introducing him around. Among the theatrical folk the young fugitive met was Helen Hayes.

It seems MacArthur had become press agent for a new mausoleum in New Jersey. He thought it would be fine for the place if it made a collection of the best bones in the country. He wrote asking the mayor of Cambridge, Mass., to send the remains of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow to this fine new shrine.

The mayor replied that Longfellow's grave in Mount Auburn cemetery was already quite a shrine and Henry would stay where he was. MacArthur, however, was insistent. He wrote more letters, sent telegrams. He even hinted that if the mayor wanted to keep his job he'd better send the bones. The official wearied of this and turned over the MacArthur correspondence to the New Jersey police.

Connelly, by the way, thinks he has found the right man to play De Lawd in next fall's production of "The Green Pastures." But he won't say who. He has been looking for the simple dignity and untheatrical quality possessed by the late Richard B. Harrison, whose death cut the first run of "The Green Pastures" far short of what it could have been.

A group of theater people were discussing Arthur Hopkins, who made many of the finest productions Broadway has ever seen. "Why doesn't he do something?" demanded one. "He is the same wise, intelligent man, still engrossed in the theater and possessed of all his faculties."

"Perhaps," said another, "he cannot operate the way producers do now. He was an individualist. Today, producers are merely financiers, and they spend more effort casting backers than they do casting their plays. And each backer, of course, has to tell the producer how to put on his show."

Note for sophisticates: Russel Crouse, playwright, producer, and tireless man-about-Broadway, went to Niagara Falls on his honeymoon with John Erskine's daughter.

Old Riverview Rides Perennial Favorites

The new, fast, exciting rides at Riverview park are spectacular attractions each year, but despite their novelty they have little edge one such perennial favorites as the boat chutes, the merry-go-round, the miniature railway, and the scenic boat ride, "The-Mill-on-the-Floss," with its traditional "tunnel of love."

BOOK NEWS AND REVIEWS

Bob Becker Looks Over Sport Books

Reviewed by Bob Becker

"BASS TACKLE AND TACTICS," by Harold C. Hollis. [A. S. Barnes, $3.]

This well written book presents the case for lighter lures and tackle so that the bass fisherman will enjoy more successful and exciting fishing. The author handles his assignment very effectively. He offers scores of practical suggestions on how to fool black bass of both species and his recommendations on fishing technique and the handling of light lures are highlighted with some intriguing episodes from his own experiences. This is a very worthwhile, meaty book for the fresh water angler who is on the lookout for something new that will improve his bass fishing.

"HUNTING, FISHING AND CAMPING," By L. A. Anderson. [Macmillan, $1.95.]

Well illustrated, informative and readable, this "how" book will interest both the novice and experienced fisherman and hunter. As indicated by the title, the author divides his book into three parts each of which is packed with helpful hints on such pertinent subjects to the outdoor fan as the merits of live bait and artificial lures, how to shoot moving game, firemaking in camp, canoe cruising, duck hunting and other similar topics.

"TENNIS MADE EASY," by Lloyd Budge. [A. S. Barnes, $1.25.]

The author is Don Budge's "big" brother and teacher, who, by painstaking effort and coaching, molded Don into one of the great tennis champions of all times. In this book Lloyd reveals his instruction and coaching secrets backed by a series of remarkable action shots which illustrate all the fine points of footwork, batting the ball, serves, and other important points of the game. The text is informal and smooth and the way the author analyzes each point of tennis and explains how one can improve his game make this a well-nigh perfect "how" book for the tennis fan.

"THE SKETCH BOOK OF DOGS," by Felice Worden. [Ackerman, $2.]

Mrs. Worden has assembled sketches of 116 types of pure bred canines [every breed and variety recognized by the American Kennel club], in this very attractive and educational book. Accompanying each sketch is a short informative description of the breed. This is an ideal gift book for the family trying to decide on a dog as well as a helpful reference book for any dog owner.

"RETRIEVER GUN DOGS," by William F. Brown. [A. S. Barnes, $3.]

This book puts the spotlight on the Chesapeake Bay, golden, Labrador and other retriever breeds including the Irish and American water spaniels, the useful, bird-saving dogs which find and retrieve game birds in water or on land. The author gives the sportsman much information about the origin, general background and characteristics of the unusual breeds in the retriever group, and also adds some sound advice on the selection of one of these gun dogs.

"SHORT LEASH," by Bertrand Shurtleff. [Bobbs-Merrill, $2.50.]

Two great army dogs, Spareribs and Huskie, are the heroes of this suspenseful, fast moving story which points up the magnificent work being done by the army's K-9 Corps. Spareribs, a messenger dog, and Huskie, trained to accompany reconnaissance parties, are given ample opportunity to demonstrate their sagacity and training when they are involved in the rescue of some army officers who crashed in the New Guinea wilds. How the trained dogs enable the rescue party to escape many precarious situations makes a dramatic, action-packed story which is handled with skill by the author.

BOOKS ALIVE

by Vincent Starrett

ONE of the most amusing and devoted booklovers of whom we have any record is Gabriel Betteredge, the bibulous old butler in "The Moonstone," for whom one volume sufficed. In all the vicissitudes of life he drew strength and comfort from "Robinson Crusoe."

"I am not superstitious," said Mr. Betteredge. "I have read a heap of books in my time; I am a scholar in my own way. Tho turned seventy, I possess an active memory, and legs to correspond. You are not to take it, if you please, as the saying of an ignorant man, when I express my opinion that such a book as 'Robinson Crusoe' never was written, and never will be written again. I have tried that book for years—generally in combination with a pipe of tobacco—and I have found it my friend in need in all the necessities of this mortal life. When my spirits are bad—'Robinson Crusoe.' When I want advice—'ROBINSON CRUSOE.' In past times, when my wife plagued me; in present times, when I have had a drop too much—'Robinson Crusoe.' I have worn out six stout 'Robinson Crusoes' with hard work in my service. On my lady's last birthday she gave me a seventh. I took a drop too much on the strength of it; and 'Robinson Crusoe' put me right again. Price four shillings and sixpence, bound in blue, with a picture into the bargain."

There is something to be said for such single-minded devotion. At least, a library made up of only one volume presents no insoluble problem of shelf space or of transportation, while the objection that ultimately one will come to know it by heart is probably irrelevant. But, practical considerations aside, there is something delightfully innocent—almost sublime—in owning just one book that is at once a talisman, a sanctuary, and an obsession. Gabriel Betteredge is one of this department's favorite readers. I think he must have been the original of that hypothetical citizen who had a book, and consequently didn't need another.

There are such persons in life. An incongruous but admirable companion for Gabriel Betteredge—who also had a wife, however—would have been the woman who introduced Somerset Maugham to the works of Emerson. I have just found the reference in his essay on "The Classics of America."

A Solace in Emerson

"I was first led to him [Emerson] many years ago by a fair-haired lady I met on the lake of Como," Maugham writes. "On the excursions we took she always carried a volume of the Essays with her, and she had heavily underlined in blue pencil [perhaps to bring out the color of her eyes] the passages that particularly struck her. There were at least two or three on every page. She told me she found Emerson a great solace. She said that in all the tribulations and difficulties of her life she went to him and found something to her purpose. I met her again many years later, in Hawaii, and she very kindly asked me to lunch with her at a house she had rented for the season. She had always been wealthy, but since our last meeting had come up in the world, for her husband had been raised to the peerage and she was now a woman of title.

"She received me in a Callot dress [the sisters Callot being then the most fashionable dressmakers in Paris], wearing a string of pearls which must have cost a quarter of a million dollars, but with no shoes or stockings. 'You see,' she said, pointing to her bare feet, 'here we lead the simple life.' . . . At this moment a Chinese butler, dressed very like one of the Ming emperors, brought in a tray of cocktails. I asked her if she still read Emerson. She seized a volume from the table and clasped it to her by this time withering bosom, and told me, indeed yes, she never went anywhere without a volume of the Essays; she waved a jeweled hand at the Pacific ocean, which you saw thru the open windows, and said that except for Emerson she would never really have grasped its spiritual significance. She died a little while ago at a ripe old age, but a disciple of Emerson to the last."

Artists are notoriously a strange race. Dante Gabriel Rossetti, who was both painter and poet, and thus doubly strange, used to keep all kinds of animals in the garden of his house in Chelsea; he "collected peculiar creatures as he collected peculiar people," says William Gaunt, in "The Pre-Raphaelite Tragedy" [Harcourt, Brace]. His menagerie was for him an alternative world.

Pursuit by A Gnu

Once he brought home from a store that, incredibly, sold such things, a gnu of exceedingly fierce disposition. The animal had to be brought into the house backwards and thus pushed into the garden, where it was chained to a tree. The next morning Gabriel—this is another Gabriel, not Wilkie Collins' butler—went out to look at his new pet, and the creature broke loose and chased him furiously around the garden. He escaped into the house with difficulty, and the gnu had to be recaptured, pushed back thru the narrow passage, and dispatched to the zoölogical gardens.

Among other birds and beasts, he owned—at one time and another—kangaroos, peacocks, wombats, a wallaby, a chameleon, some salamanders, an armadillo, a marmot, a woodchuck, a deer, a jackass, a raccoon, and a Brahmin bull whose eyes reminded him of his friend Janey Morris. Once he almost bought a lion, and he was with difficulty prevented from buying a young elephant for a large sum of money. In connection with this last whim, a conversation occurred between Rossetti and Robert Browning.

"What on earth will you do with him, Gabriel?" asked Browning.

"I mean to teach him to clean the windows," said Rossetti. "Then when some one passes by the house, he will see the elephant cleaning the windows, and will say, 'Who lives in that house?' And people will tell him, 'O, that's a painter called Rossetti,' and he will say, 'I would like to buy one of that man's pictures.' So he will ring and come in, and I shall sell him a picture."

"The Pre-Raphaelite Tragedy" precedes Mr. Gaunt's "The Aesthetic Adventure," recently discussed in this space; but readers of one will be sure to want the other. Together they form the most interesting available history of English art and letters in the last half of the 19h century. For some of the details above, however, I am indebted to Lady Horner's "Time Remembered," an English volume now out of print.

Amateur detectives are of many occupations, since their detecting is only a sideline. For the first time, as far as I am aware, an editorial writer for a newspaper is made the detective in Philip Wylie's "Death Whispers," an excellent novelette in the current issue of the Saint's Choice, a new mystery quarterly and a good one. To make things harder for his fathomer, and more interesting for the reader, Mr. Wylie contrives to have his hero stone blind thruout the whole investigation, because of an operation that keeps his eyes under bandages.

SUMMER FARE IN SHORT STORY COLLECTIONS

2 Good Bills of Literary Vaudeville

"COBB'S CAVALCADE," a selection from the writings of Irvin S. Cobb, edited by B. D. Zevin. [World, $1.95.]

"MODERN AMERICAN SHORT STORIES," edited by Bennett Cerf. [World, $1.]

Reviewed by Kelsey Guilfoil

These two books provide more pleasurable reading for little money than many more costly volumes. Like all story collections, they can be compared, as a form of entertainment, to the old time vaudeville bill. You will recall, if you are old enough, that if you didn't like the acrobats and trained seals, maybe you found the song and dance team clever or the magician was tops. Hardly ever did you leave the theater feeling the evening was a total failure.

"Cobb's Cavalcade" was planned with Cobb before his death by Mr. Zevin, publisher and friend of the writer. It is divided into three parts, "Gay," stories and essays of humorous slant; "Grim," stories of a macabre or horrifying intent, and "Old Judge Priest," a selection of tales about the elderly Kentucky judge whom Cobb made so real to his readers that many believed in his actual existence.

The "funny" pieces that won Cobb his reputation as a great humorist now reveal the truth: that Cobb's humor was distinctly second rate when he was deliberately trying to be funny, and merited distinction only when woven into fiction of more serious intent, as in some of the old Judge Priest stories. "Speaking of Operations," which had the United States in stitches a generation ago, seems a bit heavy handed today.

But as whole, Cobb's writing wears well. No one could tell a story better, and when he had a story to tell, he told it to the hilt. Reading his stories again, one can only wish that he had one truly great story to place him among the masters of fiction. But as pure entertainment, his work is untouchable.

In his introduction to "Modern American Short Stories," Bennett Cerf confesses that one of the reasons for compiling an anthology is to make a little money. At the modest price of one dollar, there can't be a fortune in this one, but it is money well earned. Every one of the writers represented is a headliner, and nearly every one of the stories is representative of its writer's best work.

The list of authors is impressive: Sarah Orne Jewett, O. Henry, Willa Cather, Jack London, Damon Runyon, Ring Lardner, Wilbur Daniel Steele, Bessie Breuer, Dorothy Parker, Helen R. Hull, James Thurber, Katherine Anne Porter, William Faulkner, Ernest Hemingway, Stephen Vincent Benet, John Steinbeck, Erskine Caldwell, Albert Maltz, Richard Wright, William Saroyan, Eudora Welty, Walter Van Tilburg Clark.

Most of the selections from these writers are fairly well known, having appeared in other anthologies [some of them too often] or in collections of individual writers' works. But there are two stories, "The Man in the Brooks Brothers Shirt," by Mary McCarthy, and "The Girls in Their Summer Dresses," by Irwin Shaw, which are unfamiliar even to short story devotees like myself. They are the last two in the book, and what a finale! Worth the price of admission alone.

Pvt. Artie Opens His Yap; Spills Prose on Army Life

"ARTIE GREENGROIN PFC.," by Harry Brown. [Knopf, $2.50].

Reviewed By Paul Engle

Artie Greengroin had tangled with the American language all his short life in "Berklyn," but when he went overseas as a Pfc. and met the English language, it was really a brawl. His opinion was very simple: "Jess because Englishmen speak English don't mean they own the gawdam language. I was brought up to speak in a beautiful prose style . . . I can always spot a cultured man the minnit he opens his yap."

Artie opens his yap all thru this book, and it's enough to make any sober man open the book from beginning to end.

Artie in love: "She don't speak English too good. But her face and form are unconstitutional."

Artie on peeling potatoes: "After the war I'm going to take me a little trip to Maine or Idaho, maybe, and knock off a few pertater farmers."

Artie on the danger of feeding an army potatoes: "Does a tiger eat pertaters? Naw, he don't. He spits on pertaters. 'Pertaters is for rabbits,' he says, and then he goes off somewheres and eats a rabbit. And why doesn't he eat pertaters? Because they got starch in them. Now, you take a shoit collar. You put starch in a shoit collar and what happens? What happens is that the shoit collar gets stiff. Well, a tiger knows that if he eats starch his jernts is going to get all stiff and then he won't be able to run any more and some heathen or other will come along with a blowgun or something and knock him off." You feed an army potatoes and it gets stiff joints and loses the war. So Greengroin oughtn't to peel potatoes.

For Artie, it's wrong to speak of a "theatre of operations," because it sounds as if the war was being fought in the "moom pitchas." And if you drop an orange too many times it gets soft. If Greengroin is dropped on his gut too many times during extended order drill he gets soft. Moral: The only way Greengroin can keep tough is to lie carefully on his cot. You can't whip Greengroin. But it's a reckless life he leads, always threatening to throw his rank around, as long as he's still a Pfc.

Harry Brown wrote the best book about the war by an American soldier, "A Walk in the Sun," the description of a day in the invasion of Italy. It was clean prose and rapid action and superb dialog. In "Artie Greengroin Pfc.," he gives you the gripes and the miseries of the common soldier in camp. For Artie, life in the guardhouse. It's as funny a book as you're going to get this summer.

Tales of 18 Winners of Congress Medal

"MEDALS FOR MARINES," by Rolfe Boswell. [Crowell, $2.]

Hidden beneath Mr. Boswell's rather flowery phrases are the stories of 18 marines who won the congressional medal of honor in the early stages of this war. Their deeds will make interesting reading. The tales range from that of "Sunny Jim" Vandegrift, commandant of the marines, who led the 1st marine division at Guadalcanal, to "Manila John" Basilone, gunnery sergeant, who won his medal at Guadalcanal and later died on Iwo Jima.

Devilish Tales Are Cleverly Introduced by Two Editors

"SPEAK OF THE DEVIL," edited by Sterling North and C. B. Boutell; jacket by Salvador Dali. (Doubleday, Doran, $3).

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht

Twenty-five years ago Maximilian J. Rudwin projected a series of anthologies of diabolical literature thru Alfred A. Knopf. "Devil Stories" was published—I bought a copy, which I still treasure, at Fanny Butcher's shop in East Adams st.—but the promised Essays, Plays, Poems, etc., did not appear. Evidently the public was less interested in the Devil than—from its general conduct—one might have been led to expect.

The new North-Boutell anthology will have, one hopes, a better fate. Its range is somewhat wider than that of the Rudwin book. There are brief selections from "The Divine Comedy," "Paradise Lost," and Tennyson's interesting piece of juvenilia, "The Devil and the Lady," plus a much longer selection from the Priest translation of Goethe's "Faust" and the whole of Marlowe's "Dr. Faustus." But the short story predominates, and rightly so.

There are pieces as standard as Scott's incomparable "Wandering Willie's Tale" and as foreign as Gogol's "Saint John's Eve"; as traditional as Irving's "The Devil and Tom Walker," as impudent as Anatole France's "Revolt of the Angels" [the last chapter], and as recent as "The Screwtape Letters" of C. S. Lewis and "The Devil and Daniel Webster," by Stephen Vincent Benet.

It is good to have Carleton's "The Three Wishes" made accessible again, and to have such unhackneyed tales as those of F. O. Mann, John Collier [three selections], Chapman J. Milling, and Robert Arthur brought to our attention. And it is good to meet Max Beerbohm's incomparable "Enoch Soames" once more, on any terms or at any time! [Hawthorne's "The Devil in Manuscript" is not, of course, properly speaking, a devil story.]

The editors have presented their 34 selections under seven headings, one of which is further subdivided by nationalities; and each section of the book is "introduced." At their best, these introductions are very good indeed. Sometimes clarity and precision are sacrificed to "cleverness." Some rather curious critical notions are expressed about famous writers—Scott, Dante, Tennyson. And when the editors get their present day political convictions and prejudices mixed up with their historical scholarship, the results are as wonderful as they were in Sterling North's review of an innocent book known as "Grimm's Fairy Tales," which he, for some reason, seemed to have confused with "Mein Kampf."

2 Vital Books on Problems Facing China

"CHINA'S CRISIS," by Lawrence K. Rosinger. [Knopf, $3.]

"ASIA FOR THE ASIATICS," the Techniques of Japanese Occupation, by Robert S. Ward. [University of Chicago Press, $3.]

Reviewed by Philo M. Buck Jr.

The Chinese successes in recent weeks, tho none major, have heartened us not a little and strengthened our faith in our ally. It was a faith that had suffered some shocks. It was not her will to resistance that we questioned, but her apparent inability to go all out, in a democratic manner, in a war for democracy.

To borrow a phrase from Mr. Rosinger's book: "In fact it is the tradegy of China's resistance that internal political coöperation has been loose, unsatisfactory, and at the mercy of shifting events." Does China desire or understand democracy? Who are right in the tragic contest for power, Chungking with its one party government, or the Communists?

Mr. Rosinger's carefully documented 250 pages offer many insights and helps toward an understanding. One must remember that the Chinese national government was in process of formation when Japan struck. One must understand that Chinese democracy has had, and will have a different flavor from ours. It will look back to Confucius, Mencius and the other sages who never dreamed of equalitarianism, and who thought of the state as an extended family and not as a political compromise. Mr. Rosinger misses a point here. One must remember, too, that China in all her history never before waged a national war like this one. Above all one must not forget that all Chinese intellectuals know that only a democratic China can expect aid from the foreign powers in a post-war world. But the question that interests us most is will the new Chinese democracy lean, as does Chungking, toward America and Great Britain, or will it fall into the orbit of Russia?

There is yet another question, touched by Mr. Rosinger, but raised most significantly by Mr. Ward in his careful study of what Japan has done at Hongkong—has Japan with her loud propaganda of Asia for the Asiatics, even in the regions that have been under her heel, made future coöperation between Europe or America and Asia a thing of suspicion and veiled hatred? Have Malaya, the Indies, Singapore, and the other places been prepared by Japan for the seeds of future distrust? An interesting question and an interesting book.

Rich U. S. Folklore from 'Down Jersey'

"JERSEY GENESIS," by Henry Charlton Beck. [Rutgers University Press, $3.50.]

Not far from the center of a triangle formed by Atlantic City, New York, and Philadelphia lies Down Jersey—an ancient segment of America in which legend, history, and outspoken reality blend into a rich pattern of folklore. Along the Mullica river you'll find the Schneiders and the Leeks [or Leaks] and the Roses to tell you about the fabulous past of this isolated country. Much of America's earliest history was spawned here, and the hulks of British warships still lie under 150 years of mud along its banks.

In "Jersey Genesis" Henry Beck spreads out for us a rich and satisfying collection of nuggets. He doesn't overlook the wilder legends, such as that of the Jersey devil or the Aserdaten murder, but better yet he has rediscovered the homely stories of the men and women who first settled this river bottom.

A Magic Love Born Beside A Sylvan Pool

"THE POOL," by Dana Burnet. [Knopf, $1.]

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher

This is one of a series of famous contemporary short stories published in book form, which includes Ben Hecht's "Miracle in the Rain," Paul Gallico's "The Snow Goose," and Mildred Cram's "Forever," all of which are intaglios of emotion cut deep in the design of war.

Dana Burnet's story is of a love found in the stresses of war, lost for awhile in what are called "accidents," and found again beside the still waters of a pool neither in the pine woods of Maine nor in an English oak forest but more real than either to the young American lieutenant who lies on a hospital bed after a bomb had blown up his tank and blasted his future.

"Nothing like this has ever happened to any two people before," he said to the English girl Nancy when, after he had described his favorite spot on earth to her, a pool in a Maine woods, she took him to her own most beloved spot, another pool in another wood, an ocean apart but essentially the same. What he meant, of course, was that the magic of love makes both lover and loved feel unique in all time.

Nancy said, when the magic of finding the pool had released his pent shynesses and he had told her that he loved her, "If it isn't asking too much, Richard, I'd like it to be forever." And the reader knows that she had her wish.

"The Pool" is one of the simplest love stories ever written. It seems almost too simple, almost self-consciously stripped of written or spoken emotion. But the impact of its conclusion releases the pent emotions of the rest of the tale. "You often see that look of happiness on their faces as they go out, the medical major said to the army nurse standing by the screened bed in the hospital ward . . ." and then, in defense of his scientific integrity, "Not that it means anything." "No, not to us," she observed, "But maybe it does to them."

To many readers "The Pool" will be a symbol of the still waters of the 23d psalm as it was to Nancy as she stood beside Richard and looked into its calm depths. And many readers will feel again in this quiet little tale of one of the minor tragedies of a vast and horrible war the strengthening assurance of those lovely, uplifting words "He restoreth my soul."

Scotland: A Test Case for the Nationalists

"Scotland," by Ian Finlay. [Oxford University Press, 25 cents.]

Scotland, declares Mr. Finlay, is today a test case on whether the nation is a unit to be discarded as of merely sentimental interest or a germinal organism without which human society cannot maintain itself in a sound condition. Its plight is representative of that which has befallen many small countries that have been, in effect, exploited—as often as not by great countries. The author, himself a Scot, sketches his country's history and discusses lucidly its economies, institutions, culture, and thought.

Truth About a Grimy War Told Without Grimy Words

By Harry Hansen

WHEN authors turn from tales of heroism and sacrifice to tell the home folks about the grime, and sweat, and mistakes of the war, there will be no such shock to patriotic feelings as attended the publication of John Dos Passos' "Three Soldiers" 25 years ago. In those 25 years authors have learned to report experience as it is, putting aside the circumlocutions that make harsh reality easier for the squeamish. No one book of the future will suddenly make us aware that war is hell. Like Bill Mauldin's "Up Front" such books will arrive in the regular routine of publishing, each contributing a true picture. The only difficulty will be the language. The author who can make words sound true without spreading the cheap talk of profane men all over his pages will be an artist.

A Story of Actualities

I think we have reason to expect a bosun's mate of the coast guard to help open our eyes to actualities when Carl Jonas' story, "Beachhead in the Wind" is published in the fall. Carl Jonas is now somewhere in the Pacific, probably in Okinawa or one of the small islands where transport follows the marines. He was in the beach party that followed the first wave of marines on Tarawa, and has had experience on the Aleutians and Saipan. He is an Omaha man, 26, a graduate of Williams college, and this spring had two months' furlough and finished this book.

It will deal principally with episodes on the Aleutians and with the personal fortunes of the men of a beach party, who were ill prepared to do the hard job in the sub-zero weather and made no big, heroic gestures. Jonas himself says he wants merely to describe natural people at war and I think he has succeeded. This is what I mean by the plain speaking that will tell us exactly how the boys took this war. It is very different from shockers like "Shore Leave" in which all the coarseness is concentrated on a few characters, giving the impression that all in the service behave like that. Jonas has been writing whenever his duties gave him a chance. He finished one novel but it was not suitable for publication. He has had some articles in the American Mercury. Little, Brown will issue "Beachhead in the Wind."

The Decorous Dime Novel

It must be difficult for an author to know where to stop when using coarse talk. Within 20 years all bars have come down and a great deal of profanity gets into print. It is a revelation to see how the old dime novels managed it. In Brooklyn Charles Bragin runs the dime novel club which has among its members such worthies as Ellery Queen, Lenox F. Lohr, August Derleth, Carl B. Roden, and Vincent Starrett. Mr. Bragin is reprinting a number of famous dime novels in complete facsimile. The latest, "The Haunted Churchyard, or Old King Brady and the Mystery of the Iron Vault" has just been issued. Its language is practically decorous. King Brady pays the most careful attention to his grammar. As for the profanity, any family newspaper can print it. Here is the worst, coming from the skipper of a schooner: "Lay ashore there, you long-legged blue nose! Lay ashore and make that bow line fast!" And they used to warn boys against reading dime novels.

New Novel by Hilton

James Hilton's new novel, "So Well Remembered," which will be the Literary Guild book for August, is one of his few works that has not had serial publication.

If you enjoy railroad stories don't miss "Priority Special" by Harry Bedwell, the tale of how a hospital train was moved thru a busy railroad division. The author is a telegraph operator on the Southern Pacific who was on duty when the train was routed over the division. Aside from that he is also a writer of many popular short stories for the national magazines and a book or two. The Southern Pacific is reprinting this account in a pamphlet and will send a copy to any one addressing its general advertising manager, F. Q. Tredway, 65 Market st., San Francisco.

Whitewashing Bluenoses

George F. Willison was living in Provincetown, the place made famous by the Provincetown Players—if you take the Pilgrim Fathers for granted—when he got the idea that the aforesaid Pilgrim Fathers have been libeled by historians. So he proposed to refurbish their characters. They were not sour blue noses, says he, but robust Elizabethans who enjoyed as well as endured life. This revelation came to him in 1936, but he was unable to finish his book for nine years. For nine years Curtice Hitchcock has been waiting for the manuscript. He will publish it July 26. I don't know how well "Saints and Strangers" supports its thesis, because I haven't read it, but this circumstance reminds me that somebody is always trying to change the accepted legends. Mr. Willison has been associated with the civil aeronautics administration in Washington. Before that he was editor in chief and assistant national director of the federal writers' project.

A Romance Flows with Great River

"HERITAGE OF THE RIVER," by Muriel Elwood. [Scribner, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Kenneth Horan

Muriel Elwood

A historical romance, with Frontenac and other brave men marching in and out of its pages, this story is characterized by a sense of vivid reality. Reality, in fact, is its claim to good reading, for otherwise it bears the weight of some pretty smug people who showed but little originality until circumstance and Indians jolted them from their complacency.

The scenes are keyed to the sound of the St. Lawrence river, in the year 1600, and Canada is still New France. Outside Montreal live Marguerite Boissart and her twin brother, Paul, on the Boissart farm.

Their habitant family took a prominent part in the provincial court of Montreal, which was a homespun imitation of the real thing at Versailles. Here the twins fell in love with people of high degree.

Paul left home as a coureur du bois and his sister became a captive of marauding Indians.

Emphasis is, of course laid, on the historical backgrounds in this romantic story, and these are so well done that the whole book is in a way a record of change. The very fact that a French court of extreme elegance existed but a few miles from the wildest kind of Indian encampment offers dramatic contrast, and these extremes are handled with skill and an appreciation of their strangeness.

Thruout the story, thick with the realities of the times, there flows the St. Lawrence river, so that events take place either to the sound of ice floes cracking or of gentle waves lapping. A really important historical novel, this presents Canada in brilliant colors, but suffers somewhat from an indefinable remoteness of the characters. They speak, not like real people, but like historical fiction.

Cross Section of the Procedures in Chemical Industry

"THE CHEMICAL PROCESS INDUSTRIES," by R. Norris Shreve. [McGraw-Hill, $7.50.]

Reviewed by Arthur Bergholz

This is primarily a text on industrial chemistry from the chemical engineering viewpoint. It presents a cross section of the manufacturing procedures employed by modern chemical industries, largely separated into their unit processes and unit operations thru the help of flow sheets. To conserve space, only a few pictures and line drawings are used. However, the flow sheets are considerable in number and sufficiently comprehensive to compensate for this limitation.

Each chapter deals with a given process industry—glass, paper, rubber, sulfuric acid, etc.—and covers historical background, uses and economics, production trend, energy change, unit operations, unit processes and a flow sheet. The well written book can be used as a reference or descriptive handbook. The subject matter is rather broad in scope, but there are sufficient references for any one who may desire more detailed information. The format is good, typography excellent; footnotes are in large enough print to be readable. The bibliography is extensive and up-to-date.

This book is a valuable adjunct to any chemical library, and one that every chemist should have as a ready reference to progress and processes in the chemical field in branches removed from his own endeavors.

THE LITERARY SPOTLIGHT

by Fanny Butcher

LEE BARKER, editor of Doubleday, Doran, has been out again to see this thriving center of literary production. . . . The New York publishers are more and more coming to realize that "New York Is Not America," as Ford Madox Ford once titled a book. . . . And the most knowledgable among them come to the grass roots as often as possible. . . . How anybody ever gets anything actually written in New York is beyond me. . . . It's a wonderful place to bask in the glory of publication, but a hard one in which to get a MS. finished. Most of New York's most successful authors live in the country, anyway.

Mr. Barker told me many things about the publishing business. . . . One which was startling in its post-war potentialities. . . . In one 10 cent store chain in Boston Doubleday, Doran tried out selling four types of books—a novel, Edna Ferber's "Great Son," at the regular publication price of $2,50; a $1.49 reprint, and two cheaper reprints. . . . "Great Son" topped the sales of any of the lower priced titles by 30 per cent. . . . Doesn't that prove that the book buying public is growing like a ball of sagebrush on a windy desert? . . . Editions which have been going to men in service all over the world have been forming reading habits. . . . Sometimes among men with whom books were previously looked upon as something to weight a door open or to set a cocktail glass on so that it wouldn't make a ring on the table. . . . The insidious thing about books is that once you're exposed to them you catch them, often in the most malignant form. . . . And you become a "carrier," too. . . . I look for the biggest post-war boom in the book publishing and bookselling business in history.

By the Hundreds of Thousands

There's the matter of one title that Lee Barker's firm is publishing: "The Black Rose," a new historical adventure story by Thomas B. Costain. . . . It's a novel of the 13th century, beginning in England and moving out to the fabulous empire of Kubla Khan. . . . Would you expect it to have some 600,000 and more buyers eagerly awaiting its publication? . . . Well, it has, for it will be the September selection of the Literary Guild.

Then there's the People's Book club, a subsidiary of Sears Roebuck & Co., which has to date been publishing reprints of former successes for its members. . . . Rumor has it that the People's will enter the first run book club lists in the fall and publish as well as republish successes. . . . Its books are now chosen by the Gallup poll system and it has a membership of almost three-quarters of a million, I hear. . . . The Book of the Month Club's choice always assures the title an enormous sale in the shops as well as thru the club membership. . . . And its author such a pretty nest egg that no wolf need ever howl again at the author's door if he or she is frugal.

Gold in the Literary Hills

Here is a tale that shows how much gold there can be in them thar literary hills. . . . Sinclair Lewis' new novel, "Cass Timberlane" [whose background is said to be Duluth, where Mr. Lewis is living, altho the town's name is disguised]—was first published as a serial. . . . Then M. G. M. bought the film rights to it for $150,000. . . . But Mr. Lewis' agent had the foresight to insist on a bonus clause calling for an additional $50,000 just in case it might become a Book of the Month Club choice. . . . The foresight was uncanny because the club had never before chosen one of Sinclair Lewis' novels.

Random House, publisher of the book, tells us that as soon as the judges announced that "Cass Timberlane" would be the October choice of the club, a lightning calculator locked himself in a vault and emerged with statistics proving that Mr. Lewis' income from the book, counting the first serial rights, the M. G. M., and the Book of the Month Club tributes and the royalties from a first printing of more than 100,000 copies, is already in the neighborhood of $400,000.

Thomas Jefferson's Letters

Earle Balch, another perspicacious New York publisher, was in town recently, but unfortunately only between trains. . . . He is personally one of the most popular of that almost invariably delightful group, the book publishers. . . . They have to be intelligent to make a go of publishing at all, and most of them are also conversational glamor boys. . . . A few could make bigger fortunes in the movies, but publishing is really fun. . . . Mr. Balch told me about one of the fall's most exciting volumes of nonfiction which his firm, G. P. Putnam's Sons, will do. . . . It will be called "My Head and My Heart" and contains the letters which Thomas Jefferson wrote to a famous English miniaturist's wife, whom he met and fell in love with in London. . . . She was Mrs. Maria Conway. . . . The letters were only recently unearthed and identified. . . . The story of their identification is a tale in itself. . . . They are all romantically unsigned. . . . They will influence all future studies of Jefferson's emotional life.

Future biographers will consult a highly important contribution to Lincolniana: Jay Monaghan's "Lincoln Bibliography." . . . It is listed as Volume XXXI. of the Collection of the Illinois State Historical Library. . . . It is in two volumes. . . . The items are listed chronologically, and described in detail, and the annotations are a running commentary on the great Illinoisan's career. . . . The index is lengthy and complete. . . . And 3,958 books and articles make up the list.

A Forceful Personality

Jay Monaghan may possibly become state historian of Illinois. . . . Paul Angle, who has held that position for some years, and whom Mr. Monaghan assisted, has left to become director of the Chicago Historical society. . . . L. Hubbard Shattuck's death this spring left that post vacant. . . . Directors of the society, with Joseph M. Cudahy, president, as their spokesman, says of Mr. Angle: "A quiet but forceful personality, his enthusiastic approach will undoubtedly bring about interesting innovations and a continuation of the modern methods of education which have been the policy of this institution."

J. Frank Dobie, in his "Texan in England," says Britishers as well as Americans make cracks about their climate. . . . One Britisher told him about the stranger who went to England to enjoy the summer, but overslept and missed it. . . . Another told him about a country squire who, when he was introduced to the Persian ambassador in London, said: "They tell me that in your country you worship the sun." The Persian replied: "So would you if you ever saw it."

"The conscious utterance of thought, by speech or action . . . is art."

Critic Differs with Author on Selections

"THE WISDOM OF ISRAEL," edited by Lewis Browne. [Random House, $3.95.]

Reviewed by Dr. Felix A. Levy

[Rabbi, Emanuel Congregation.]

Lewis Browne

The author astutely attempts to disarm criticism by an explanation in the preface wherein he defends his anthology on the score that he has culled it from the wisdom literature of Israel which, according to him, is characterized by practicality, universality and knowledge. All other types of writing he would exclude.

This reviewer doubts the validity of Mr. Brown's distinction and hence disagrees often with the choice of examples. The writings of Israel can hardly be stripped of their esoteric, mystical and national elements. These features, which Mr. Browne would, in theory, but does not, in fact, disregard, are so thoroly mingled with those preferred by him, that it is impossible to unscramble the composition. Our collector therefore is forced against his will to choose often excerpts that do not fit his definition.

While one ought not quarrel about tastes, one wonders why the Biblical selections omit Genesis completely and the most magnificent writings of the prophets. One misses the peculiar flavor of Deuteronomy, captured only when one realizes that it is a series of great orations. Why so much space to "Between the Testaments" and "The New Testament" when these books are the purposely neglected literature of Israel, a side stream and never part of the main current? Why are some of the greatest medieval writers omitted and other lesser lights admitted? Why, for example, is Rashi, a household word in Jewish literature, passed over in silence? Ibn Gabirol's poetry is rightly represented and Yehuda Ha-Levi's is regretfully absent.

The modern period cites Heine, Klatzkin, Lewisohn, Asch, and others, some of whom, by Mr. Browne's rule of choice and their own unimportance, might have been left out. Greater lights—Geiger, Zunz, Rosenzweig, Tchernikowsky, A. D. Gordon, the Breuers, father and son—are completely ignored. Why give an excerpt from the Union Prayer Book, which at best is a stodgy dissertation on social justice and which has been almost completely deleted from the last edition? I pass over minor faults.

It was a happy thought to include Jewish humor. The introductions and notes are sprightly and informative. The Hassidic tales are excellent in their selection as well as their telling, tho it is calamitous that Buber's version that has made these stories great literature is not utilized. One gets only a faint whiff of the liberal spirit of the great Jewish decisors.

The modern section is woefully weak and inadequate. Apparently Mr. Browne has picked only from those books already translated into English and has neglected a vast library of works in Hebrew, Yiddish, German, and other languagees. Lin Yutang, who presented China [and India], knew his people's literature at first hand. The present "florilegium" does not reveal a similar acquaintance.

This does not mean that this book is without merit. It is good despite gaps and flaws. All such collections serve to arouse interest and to introduce their subject to strangers. The latter, however, could have been more greatly impressed if the go-between had not in some measure failed in his presentation. The reader will get enjoyment and profit out of perusal. In fairness, too, it must be added that some portions of the work are full and adequate.

AMONG THE AUTHORS

By Frederic Babcock

Genevieve Forbes Herrick

ONE of the middle west's [and this department's] favorite writers of a few years ago will come back to her old stamping ground next week. . . . Genevieve Forbes Herrick is to be one of the main speakers at the Midwestern Writers' conference at Northwestern university July 25 to 28. . . . She will talk Friday evening, July 27, and her subject will be "Information at War."

At one time Genevieve Forbes was a star reporter for THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. . . . In 1921 she went to Ireland to investigate conditions in the United States immigration service. . . . Posing as an immigrant, she returned in steerage, and wrote for this paper a series of stories on her experiences at Ellis Island. . . . This resulted in a call to testify before a congressional committee. . . . Later Miss Forbes married John Herrick, likewise then of THE TRIBUNE'S editorial staff, and still later the two moved to Washington. . . . For some time now Mrs. Herrick has been assistant chief of the book and magazine bureau of the OWI.

Stanley Vestal

Another leading attraction at the conference will be Prof. Walter S. Campbell, otherwise known as Stanley Vestal. . . . Novelist, historian, and author of books on writing, Prof. Campbell will come here from the University of Oklahoma to speak on "So You Want to Write?" . . . His address will be featured on the opening evening, Wednesday, July 25. . . . His latest work was "The Missouri," the 26th in the Rivers of America series.

Still others scheduled to appear at Evanston next week are Homer Croy, Marguerite Young, Gurney Williams, Sewell Peaslee Wright, Jeremy Ingalls, Hugh Marlowe, Walter Dill Scott, Frederic Nelson Litten, Paul Engle, Edith Roberts, R. E. Wolseley, Phyllis Whitney, Elmo Scott Watson, A. C. Spectorsky, David Appel, and the conductor of this column. . . . Interested authors and hope-to-be authors should get in touch with the executive secretary, Midwestern Writers' conference, 210 Scott hall, Northwestern university, Evanston 11, Ill.

Bookmen from all over America were on hand Friday for their field day, the largest outdoor gathering of its kind in this country. . . . The affair, the 38th annual, was held at the Elmhurst Country club and was arranged by Ralph Henry, Wendell W. Goodpasture, Guy Kendall, Duke Hill, W. R. Thomas, L. B. Vaughan, Jack Mullen, Jack Fraser, W. J. Barse, and Louis M. Levy. . . . The event of the day was a baseball game between teams headed by James V. Malloy and E. Richmond Gray, and at last accounts the game, or its post-mortem, was still in progress.

Tuesday evening Vincent T. Smith and Henry K. Young of the Garden City Publishing company entertained the visiting bookmen, along with Chicago dealers and literary editors, at a cocktail party at the Hotel Continental. . . . The idea was to introduce the company's new assistant sales manager, Harry Seltenrich. . . . And Thursday noon, at the same hotel, the officials of Chicago's veteran wholesale house, A. C. McClurg & Co., held their annual luncheon for midwestern librarians and other book buyers. . . . Denton Sparks, president of McClurg's, was toastmaster, and the speaker was Joseph Brandt, head of the University of Chicago Press.

Anyway, This Tedious Tale's Very Earnest

"HUNKY JOHNNY," by E. J. Nichols. [Houghton Mifflin, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan

The title character of this tedious novel is Johnny Opalko, a youth of Slovak descent, a resident of Gary, Ind., a famous high school and college athlete. The time is the summer which follows his graduation from the University of Chicago, presumably about 1930; the locale is the Gary to Chicago region. The complication is Johnny's yen for a girl whose background is different from his own.

Tho perhaps the most noticeable feature of the book is its adolescent preoccupation with sex, a lot of hard work is wasted on the attempt to give Johnny's experience some sort of social significance.

Wrapped in adorous clouds of self-pity, our hero sees himself doomed to a "Hunky" life while he itches for contact with those exalted beings whom he calls, with a repetitiousness both blatant and phoney, the "white" people.

The conflict unfortunately seems cooked up; the inner turmoil seems absurd. The character so laboriously offered as a pathetic, sensitive, underprivileged little man stands out too clearly as a thick-headed and maudlin former football star. The family background is hardly representative of general Slovak-American life in the midwest, tho there is a strong attempt to make it seem typical. The university scenes are almost fascinatingly unconvincing.

There is an abundance of coarse, cluttered, monotonous writing. What may politely be called the resolution of the plot occurs when, in the last line, the "white" girl invites Johnny to stay the night.

Happily, I am able to end with praise: the book seems very earnest.

Tropical Nights and Sunny Isles in This Romance

"AMARU," by Robert Dean Frisbie. [Doubleday, Doran, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Will Davidson

If you have been waiting too many years for a new "Treasure Island," here is your book. If you have wanted a "Green Mansions" written in the gusty vernacular, a Robinson Crusoe with a wonderful romance thrown in, here again is your book. If you want a wonderful yarn to read of nights—a yarn that will send your blood coursing warm and fast, and lift you out of your little crabbed world onto the sun-swept deck of a pearling schooner or into the cool shadows of a palm tufted Pacific isle, don't miss "Amaru."

Robert Dean Frisbie has written a masterpiece. He has captured the lilting language of the adventure tale; he has brought to life a lusty and delightful crew of characters, from Uncle Romany and his swash-buckling ways, to little Tina, lovely daughter of the south seas. The story of Allen Sustenance and his search for the legendary pearls of Thanksgiving island is a story to turn a rainy night into a sunny day on a surf rimmed atoll. It is a story that veers not an inch from the tried rules of adventure romances, yet so deftly and beautifully is it written that you cherish every sentence. You even want to cheer the technical tricks that carry you on and on over stormy seas and deep into tropical nights.

Perhaps "Amaru" will not become one of our literature's great romances. If it doesn't and if it is lost, future generations will be the poorer; for it isn't often that Robert Dean Frisbies come along—and even less frequently do they produce such perfectly delightful yarns. Don't look for significance or solutions to world problems in "Amaru." Just look for a glorious good time.

A lusty biography of the peasant girl who shared the throne of Peter the Great HUMBLE, illiterate, peasant-born Marta became Empress Catherine the First because she solaced a Marshall, a Prince, and a Tsar of Russia. But it was Marta's talent to enslave the men who sought to enslave her, and Peter the Great was no exception.

MARTA OF MUSCOVY is the story of a remarkable woman who could speak six languages, but couldn't read or write her own name . . . who was a match for her husband in strength and alcoholic capacity, but whose common sense tempered his soaring ambition and ability . . . who has remained obscure while history labelled another Catherine "The Great."

Seductive and shrewd, she soothed the Tsar's maniacal rages, influenced his policies, followed him to war, and ruled Russia ably after his death. Phil Stong's lusty biography restores Marta to her rightful place in history, as he tells her incredible story against the barbaric splendor of the 17th Century Russian court.

An Ancient Rogue Gets A New Life

"THE SCANDALOUS ADVENTURES OF REYNARD THE FOX." A modern American version, by Harry J. Owens. Illustrations by Keith Ward. [Knopf, $3.]

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht

From time immemorial animals have been used to satirize human conduct and institutions. Needless to say, creatures thus employed behave not like animals but like human beings. In the popular barber shop picture of a group of dissipated looking dogs drinking, smoking, and playing poker, the joke is on us. Dogs have better sense than to do such things. [But some dogs do drink beer. Ed.]

That animals still serve in this capacity one need only look back to Kipling and Uncle Remus—or out towards Herriman and Walt Disney—to be sure. More than 20 years ago, Gilbert Seldes called "Krazy Kat" the most satisfactory piece of art being produced in America, and called for a collected edition. The Disney menagerie may have somewhat tarnished Krazy's glory since then, but Mr. Seldes' cry has at last been heeded, and Holt expects to put Krazy between boards next year.

The ancients and the medieval men had no comic strips and no films; they put their folklore animals into beast fables [Aesop is the most famous example] and beast epics. Here is where Reynard the fox comes in. The origin and development of the beast epic is one of the moot questions of literary scholarship, but there can be no question as to Reynard's vogue. William Caxton, the first English printer, translated the Flemish version into English in 1481; a modernized form of this was published some years ago by Dutton in the "Broadway Translations."

Both Chaucer and Spenser wrote briefly of Reynard; Goethe retold the whole story in "Reineke Fuchs," which was based on the Low German version. One of my less gifted Chaucer students once wrote a term paper in which he argued that the "Reineke Fuchs," published in 1794, was Chaucer's source for the Nun's Priest's Tale!

Now Harry Owens of the Lakeside Press in Chicago has made a new version of the immortal story of roguery, in the American language. He writes vigorously in fine, idiomatic English, which steers a skilful middle course between timidity and vulgarity; and Warren Chappell has designed a handsome book to make a home for his version. In this fine new dress, Reynard may well start out on a new and profitable career in America, where he already has numerous descendants.

Adventures of a Lonely Hoodlum in World's Night

"JOURNEY THRU CHAOS," by Victor Alexandrov. [Crown, $3.]

Reviewed by John Randolph

This is the darnedest book of our era. It is wild and vulgar, horrible, and fascinating. It is not smutty, but it does not drape the facts of life. It will be discussed and cussed.

Victor Alexandrov is a lonely hoodlum in the world's night. His is the tragedy of the man who does not belong. The autobiography covers all of continental Europe from before World War I. to the outbreak of World War II. It is a picaresque adventure in disillusionment.

Victor just didn't get along anywhere. He was unhappy in his childhood among the "privileged" classes in Russia. Unhappiness stalked him thru the dark corridors of his father's mansion, with his German tutor as chief bogeyman. Then came the revolution.

Little Victor joined the bands of starved and wandering children who terrorized the peasants. As he grew up he became the associate of obscure Finnish martyrs, a tool of desperadoes in Berlin, and a victim of police brutality in Poland, Italy, and Greece. He became a bootblack, an industrial worker, a student, a conscripted soldier, a taxi driver, and valet to a gigolo. He didn't like any of it. Even his luck with women was bad.

Victor was always in politics up to his neck. Fright and torture were every day occurrences.

In short, the book is a picture of Europe going to the dogs in bad style.

Bobby Shafto in a Strange Story of Sea

"SILVER BUCKLES ON HIS KNEE" by Tommy Wadelton. [Coward-McCann, $2.]

Reviewed by Maureen Daly

Young Peter McCarthy liked to think of himself as "Bobby Shafto—a long ago boy who had gone to sea with silver buckles on his knee." He thought his Bobby Shafto thoughts often because some day he, too, hoped to go to sea. He thought of it when he heard the colored maid, Kelty Lou Belle singing as she hung out the wash, he thought of it all the time he played with his young friends, Burnie, Carlos, and Jack-Joe, and he thought of it all thru his growing-up, high school days spent in Indianapolis, Ind.

The account of his boyhood is pleasantly uneventful, interspersed with rather disjointed character sketches and one long, fervent protest for racial tolerance. The account of his high school years is a quickly panoramic glimpse of the usual coke-and-juke box high spots, a period during which Peter McCarthy gained in years if not maturity.

The last third of the book is an astounding piece of fiction in which young Peter is wounded, washed up on a Pacific island, his wounds bound by Kelty Lou [who died of a heart attack back home when he was reported missing] with pieces of her pink striped apron, and is led to safety by Carlos, previously killed in Italy, but not before he discovers a huge camouflaged Jap air field—all reported at the base hospital where Peter finally arrived.

The jacket of this book hopefully blurbs: "Peter enlists in the navy and from then on, does SILVER BUCKLES develop into one of the strangest stories yet written about the war? It would be hard to say. . . ." No, it is not difficult to say. This may be one of the strangest stories written about the war simply because it is the most illogical, most shaky, and has least reason for being called "a story about this war." Pvt. Tommy Wadelton, at 19, has already written four books. Young Tommy is certainly an ambitious and prodigious writer—too bad he doesn't take time out to try to be a good one.

BOOKMAN'S HOLIDAY

By Delos Avery

TYPEWRITERS being the wrecks they are today [the w dropped off mine the other day and I had to use a repeated v to say vvild and vvoolly vvest], it seems to be high time for authors to cultivate the curious craft of the lipogrammatist.

The lipogrammatist—yes, I, too, had to consult Webster—is a literary self-torturer. Lopez de Vega was one. He wrote a whole novel in which the letter a never appeared. Then he wrote a book without an e, another without an i, a fourth without an o, and a fifth without a u.

Nestor performed a similar trick in his Iliad, subdivided into as many books as there are letters in the alphabet, using no a in the first, no z in the last, and intermediately dropping all the other letters in rotation. And Tryphiodorus wrote his Odyssey that way.

But what would happen if not one but several letters were lost at once from your venerable Smith Premier. And suppose all the missing ones were vowels!

Well, it happens that I can show you exactly what the effect would be. For before me, in a book entitled "Poetical Ingenuities," published in 1882 in London by Chatto and Windus, I find a surprising composition, "Eve's Legend," from which all the vowels excepting e are banned. So we shall now say good-by to a and i and o and u, while I quote the opening paragraphs.

> Men were never perfect; yet the three brethren Veres were ever esteemed, respected, revered, even when the rest, whether the select few, whether the mere herd, were left neglected.
> The eldest's vessels seek the deep, stem the elements, get pence; the keen Peter when free, wedded Hester Green—the slender, stern, severe, erect Hester Green. The next, clever Ned, less dependent, wedded sweet Ellen Heber. Stephen, ere he met the gentle Eve, never felt tenderness; he kept kennels, bred steeds, rested where the deer fed, went where green trees, where fresh breezes greeted sleep. There he met the meek, the gentle Eve; she tended her sheep, she never neglected self; she never heeded pelf, yet she heeded the shepherds even less. Nevertheless, her cheek reddened when she met Stephen; yet decent reserve, meek respect, tempered her speech, even when she shewed tenderness. Stephen felt the sweet effect . . .

No use quoting it all. Suffice it that good old Stephen [One Vowel] Vere contrives to woo the lady even tho he had no oo to woo with. He talks like this:

> Sweet, sweet Eve, let me wed thee; be led where Hester Green, where Ellen Heber, where the brethren Vere dwell. Free cheer greets thee there; Ellen's glees sweeten the refreshments; there severer Hester's decent reserve checks heedless jests. Be led there, sweet Eve!

For the lack of an o he couldn't even tell her he loved her, but everything came out all right, apparently, for we find that she lets her hair down—not exactly in those words, but in these:

"Her well-kempt tresses fell."

Personally I am in favor of immediate reconversion of industry to a peace time status, with prompt production of a new and abundant crop of typewriters.

There is, of course, a good excuse for any author who resorts to the lipogram in 1945. But who will forgive the ancients, who wrote by hand and could make any letter of the alphabet as easily as any other? Yet Pindar himself wrote an ode without an s.

Of all the bitter critics who have screamed in anger against such senseless literary acrobatics, my favorite is the Persian poet Jami, to whom a disciple once displayed a sonnet written without the letter Aliff [which I assume to be in the Persian alphabet]. Said Jami:

"You can do a better thing yet; take away all the letters from every word you have written."

Odd, isn't it, the late WPA, seeking ever new fields of boondoggling to absorb its funds, never thought of financing an Academy of Lipogrammatology?

A Fascinating Story of the Flying Tigers

"OLD LEATHERFACE OF THE FLYING TIGERS—The Story of Gen. Chennault," by Keith Ayling. [Bobbs-Merrill, $2.50.]

Here, in 263 pages—at least 200 of which are fascinating reading, is a major part of the reason the Japanese were unable to cut China down to their size. The Flying Tigers with 100 planes held at bay the Japanese with 3,000. Gen. Chennault, outspoken improviser of air tactics, led that pirate crew and this is his story.

Mr. Ayling helps you to understand the man whose courage and faith kept that handful of planes and pilots in the air. And you'll gain insight into the differences that led to the Chennault-"Vinegar Joe" Stilwell crisis. It will be interesting to see what Chennault, who did so much with so little, will do to the Japanese now that planes and supplies are flowing in his direction.

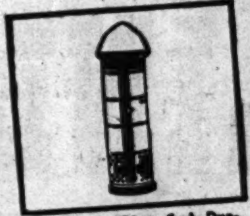
Publicity idea. Constance Hope, press agent, thought up Lily Pons' "own" post-office, garnering hundreds of newspaper write-ups. Formula explained in the book.

Ad layout. Lawrence Gumbinner, agency for Heublein's Club Cocktails, illustrated advertising headline with a facetious photograph, a typical principle.



Packaging idea. S. J. Dunaway's "Expellometer" boosted the sales of moth crystals. Gauge indicates how much of crystals evaporated. Invention follows a universally useful principle, shown in the book.

New premium. Turkey-shaped cutter for cranberry sauce sold thousands of cases of "Ocean Spray" preserves. Idea is an application of a basic formula fully described in the book.

CAN YOU USE SOME FRESH IDEAS RIGHT NOW?

● The public has been primed to expect revolutionary changes everywhere. That is why it will take new thoughts, new angles, new designs everywhere to keep in the swim. That is why you need FRESH IDEAS — now. More than ever before, ideas will make all the difference between mediocrity and success. And here, just in time, is a book that will spur on your very own brainstorms and make them click.

HOW TO DEVELOP PROFITABLE IDEAS

By OTTO F. REISS, Associate Editor Apparel Arts, Esquire

gives specific short cuts and rules which will help you originate new ideas for: design of new products, advertising, window display, sales presentations, publicity, packaging, fashion design, merchandising, stage tricks, interior decoration, cartooning, and a host of similar activities. It puts into your hands tried and simple techniques used by highly-paid idea men, techniques that will produce new ideas as often as you need them! It also discusses fully where and how to market your ideas, and how much money you may expect to receive for them.

SOME OF THE IDEA MEN WHOSE WORK IS DISCUSSED IN THE BOOK:
- Walt Disney
- Raymond Loewy
- Russell Birdwell
- Alfred McKelvy
- Ed Wynn
- Sherman Fairchild
- Ralph Hitz
- George B. Shaw
- Douglas Leigh
- Orson Welles

This brain-tingling book contains literally thousands of "case histories" — the experiences of hundreds of manufacturers and advertisers, movie exploitation firms, public relations counsels and others. HOW TO DEVELOP PROFITABLE IDEAS is a gold mine for any alert, ambitious person; yet it requires no heavy investment: just the book, pencil and paper, and a little of your spare time.

FOR EXAMPLE . . .

Do you know the ANALOGY TECHNIQUE?

Do you know how easy it is to use the ELECTRIC EYE and other new inventions for your own ideas?

Do you know the sales value of adding THREE-DIMENSIONAL EFFECTS?

Do you know how a list of your own PEEVES and BORES can help you create new products to satisfy the consumers' demands?

Do you know THE LETTER which will open the doors of companies ordinarily unwilling to buy ideas from outsiders?

CHAPTER HEADINGS:

The Russia I Believe In

The Memoirs of SAMUEL N. HARPER, 1902-1941
With an Introduction by SIR BERNARD PARES

THESE are the memoirs of America's greatest authority on Russia . . the man who dared to defend the Soviet Union against a hostile world, although he played golf with Rockefeller and his father was president of a great American university.

Samuel Harper had the unique opportunity to study with his own eyes the origins and growth of Russia's new civilization. THE RUSSIA I BELIEVE IN is the monumental chronicle of forty years of Tsarism, revolution, reconstruction, and war—the lasting record of Harper's unparalleled knowledge of Russia, and of his faith in her people's power for good in the world.

An Ex-Iowan Interprets an Ex-Empress

"MARTA OF MUSCOVY," by Phil Stong. [Doubleday, Doran, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Tremaine McDowell

Phil Stong announces as his thesis: "European royalty is managed in the way of breed cattle, with little breed and little success." And he draws on his knowledge of the prize horses, swine, and cattle of Iowa to interpret the peasant girl, Martha, who became Catherine I. of Russia; her first owner and the third greatest Russian of that day, Boris Sheremetiev; her next patron and the second greatest Russian, Alexander Menshikov; her third lover and her second husband, Peter the Great, and their contemporaries.

Phil Stong

For Marta Mr. Stong has the warmest enthusiasm, but he has been able to learn little concerning her life. Of that little he makes the most. The lack of any official record of children by her first husband, one Johann; by Sheremetiev, or by Menshikov convinces her biographer that Peter was the only man she loved. The birth of each of her 12 children by Peter, the majority of them in consecutive years, is discussed so often that the confused reader eventually gains the impression that the infants are three or four times more numerous than they actually were. Marta's skill in curing Peter's fits and her deeds as a warrior in the battle of the Pruth likewise reappear from chapter to chapter.

When fact eludes Mr. Stong, he is ready with surmises. Typical is this chain of guesses: "If the hypothesis that Marta had finally encountered obstetrical misadventure is correct, the nature of the difficulty is sufficiently obvious. Childbed fever would not have left her alive for a week. The difficulty was not surgical, for that would have made it extremely improbable that Marta would ever have any more babies. There must [therefore] have been phlebitis."

Mr. Stong is also free with his meditations of life. "Count de Vogüé says that Catherine I. [Marta] was pregnant at the time—if so, nothing came of it. This is no aspersion on the authority, for still births have always been politely ignored by historians. There have been far more pregnancies in history than there have been heirs."

Long chapters from Peter's life and from Russian history fill out the volume: women flayed alive, criminals buried to the neck in sand and left to die, boiled mice pulled out of the imperial soup tureen by Peter before the imperial guests, and much more of the same.

Mr. Stong, as you see, finds it great fun to write about the private and the public lives of the Romanovs in terms of the barn yard.

By Drexel Drake

ENTRY	PERFORMANCE	PAY-OFF
"MIDSUMMER NIGHTMARE," by Christopher Hale. [Doubleday, Doran, $2.]	Because she was a sleep walker, Olivia Warburton couldn't be sure she didn't murder the disliked, much married sister of her employers, the wealthy Jennesma brothers. Lt. French trapped culprit.	Story captures interest with fast start and holds it with continuing and puzzling excitement. Exotic family business setup for background.
"MURDER-GO-ROUND," by C. P. Donnel, Jr. [McKay, $2.]	Tony Costello, loaned by department of state to British intelligence, was sent to Stockholm to get line on secret nazi peace scheme, and barely escaped death. Back in Washington a year later, he got on trail of same clique and trapped glamorous but ruthless agent.	Smoothly written tale of intrigue, deception, and death, with heavy portion of romance blended with excitement.
"BLACK TARN," by P. W. Wilson. [Farrar & Rinehart, $2.50.]	Investigation of sudden death of earl of Sleddale in 1906, after he returned to Black Tarn from spectacular appearance in house of lords, was difficult because body was missing.	Ambitious, robust novel in which an expertly planned puzzle is skilfully and enjoyably unraveled. Background and people absorb reader interest.
"THE CASE OF THE COPY-HOOK KILLING," by Royce Howes. [Dutton, $2.]	One of the numerous cranks who had called to voice protests was believed to have plunged desk spindle into Wick, reception room buffer at Ledger-Gazette. But police, with help of city editor, found more solid motive to account for murder.	Good newspaper atmosphere, and nice job of eliminating assorted suspects, which may be enjoyed better if a rather easy guess is avoided at very outset of story.

An Unbiased Portrayal of So. America

"SOUTH AMERICA UNCENSORED," by Roland Hall Sharp. [Longmans, Green, $3.50.]

Reviewed by Mason Warner

This book is divided into four main sections: [1] "Jungles of Fassism," [2] "Genuine Good Neighborliness," [3] "Portrait of a Continent," and [4] "In Search of Frontiers." The reader will more easily assimilate the contents if he starts with the third and fourth sections and concludes with the first and second.

There is more than one catch in the lure of South America. Mr. Sharp's "portrait" is a masterpiece of detailed description. Rich and fertile regions are more than counter-balanced by vast expanses of poor soils, leached soils, excessive rains, prodigious flooded districts, realms of recurrent drought, deserts, and bleak, bare plateaus.

The fabulous Amazonian basin is factually assessed at its true value. Thousands of square miles in this deceptive domain support only one inhabitant per two square miles. This reviewer traveled more than 4,000 miles by river boat, canoe, truck, mule, and foot thru the desolate and depressing country and will cheerfully bear witness to the truth of the author's statements.

Any persons contemplating settling in or investing in South America will find "South America Uncensored" a time and money saver. Resources and opportunities, advantages, and drawbacks, possible gains and probable losses, are presented uncensored and unbiased.

The first section is an alarming and disheartening narrative of dictator governments in Brazil, Argentina, and Bolivia, with their fascist proclivities. Only Uruguay, Chile, and Colombia show a democratic trend, inclined to thwart the efforts of German propogandists.

The author commends the original "good neighbor policy" inauguarted by President Hoover, but is not enthusiastic for its administration since it was dramatized and advertised by President Roosevelt. He sees some good and some harm in its recent operation.

Thirty-two pages of original photographs and charts are included. The reader will be grateful for the end paper maps, necessary in following this story by a man who served seven years in South America as a newspaper correspondent.

Albrand Latest Not Up to Its Predecessors

"NONE SHALL KNOW," by Martha Albrand. [Little, Brown, $2.]

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Officially neutral Switzerland is the setting for the latest Albrand thriller. How unneutral some of its citizens actually were during the recent war against Germany is revealed in the underground activities of young Antonia St. Gall and Julian von der Fluh, the man she loves.

Martha Albrand

Antonia becomes involved in smuggling children out of Nazi-held France so that their parents may be free to work against the Germans, while Julian works for his government under the guise of an art connoisseur. Neither knows what the other is up to, but eventually their dangerous paths cross, they fall into the hands of the Gestapo, and they are finally saved in a highly improbable fashion.

Perhaps because of the incredible yet true stories — more fascinating than any fiction — that have come out of Europe in the last months, such a novel as this no longer carries the thrills it might once have done. At any rate, "None Shall Know" unhappily fails to measure up to its predecessors, the highly interesting "No Surrender" and "Without Orders."

Was the American Revolution fought in vain?

What were the basic ideas and principles underlying the revolt of 13 of the 17 British colonies in North America—and how does the present trend to subordinate those ideas contribute to the world crisis today?

"The American Revolution and Its Influence on World Civilization," by Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of the Chicago Tribune, traces in its 56 arrestingly original pages the inspiring story of America's impact on world history and presents a penetrating analysis of world problems and this country's potential contribution to their solution.

"An extraordinary and beautiful book. It should have it's place in everyone's library, because it is the first time, so far as I know, that America has been viewed, and contemplated, from the new dimension—the air—to which now, all of us, will have to begin to adjust ourselves; spiritually, physically, and historically."

by Bill Mauldin

Bill Mauldin

Here is the straight truth about war, as the G.I.s see it. Sergeant Bill Mauldin, the G.I.'s favorite cartoonist, "the Bruce Bairnsfather of this war," comes home after five years of it . . . to find himself famous, and a Pulitzer Prize winner. His book about life among the dogfaces—over a hundred cartoons with running text—has been greeted throughout the country with the same enthusiasm that was accorded Ernie Pyle's Brave Men.

THE WORLD, THE FLESH AND FATHER SMITH

by Bruce Marshall

Bruce Marshall

Bruce Marshall was the author of that delightful book, Father Malachy's Miracle. Now Mr. Marshall has written an equally delicious story of a Catholic priest in Scotland. "It is asperged with cleansing mirth," Christopher Morley says, "the kind the Scots call pawky, the sly mischief that has as much fun in smiling at itself as at anyone else. No one can ever say that the Scots are thrifty with their humor. They give it away in handfuls. Father Smith will touch many readers with deep pleasure."

Ernie Pyle

ERNIE PYLE, idol of the G.I.s and beloved as "Ernie" by millions of his countrymen for his profound and moving revelations of what modern war really means—Ernie Pyle is gone. His last book, BRAVE MEN, tells what your own boy would tell, what all the boys would tell of what they have seen and endured, if they could only write as Ernie did. (Price to members, $3.00.) Ever since C. S. FORESTER'S Horatio Hornblower trilogy first delighted lovers of adventure and won him the James Tait Black Memorial Prize, the author has inevitably been known as The Man Who Created Hornblower. His new book, COMMODORE HORNBLOWER, puts the salty old sea dog at the head of a Baltic fleet and throws him into the war against Russia-bound Napoleon. (Price to members, $2.50.)

Richard Wright

RICHARD WRIGHT, the son of poor Southern Negroes who lived in the slums of Memphis and the cotton fields of Mississippi, is the author of BLACK BOY. The Club's selection of Native Son in 1940 was his first success. Now, at thirty-six, he has written an autobiography that has already become one of the most widely discussed books of our generation. In combination with this book members may obtain APARTMENT IN ATHENS, by Glenway Wescott, a new book about the tangled threads of human bravery and brutality that make up this and other wars. This novel grew out of the author's association with a member of the Greek underground; it has all the impact and cadenced writing of his earlier works. INSTALMENT IV.

DETECTIVE SEVEN SMITH took over. He asked first if there was a telephone in the house which was not an extension.

"There is," Pyneglass told him. "I have a combination office-den-library upstairs with a direct outside connection. Angus will show you where it is."

He further instructed Angus to help Detective Smith in every way that he could by guiding him about the house and grounds, marshaling the servants for questioning and, more important than that even, making the staff keep quiet about what had happened until the wedding ceremony was over.

"I'll need the help of one of the members of the family, too, a little later," said Smith. "There'll be some questions the butler can't answer."

"Come to me," Diana said.

The detective regarded her with some surprise.

"My daughter," said her father. "O, I thought——"

"I know. You thought I was the second assistant chambermaid. That's perfectly all right. Brighter men than detectives have been fooled by what a woman wears."

Detective Morse came in with a heavy foot, his left one. "Lady, there ain't no brighter men than detectives."

"Excuse me," Diana apologized. "I had entertained a more hopeful opinion of the sex. You're very discouraging."

"I'll explain to him later where he was hit," Detective Smith offered pleasantly.

"Thanks." Diana dismissed the subject for a more pertinent one. "Where do you want to put Lady Baltimore's body? I'm afraid it must be moved because the guests will be coming in thru that door."

"Is there a small bedroom somewhere?" Mr. Smith inquired.

"Yes." Diana turned to Angus. "How about Ellabelle Snyder's room? She's away on vacation and unless you have put some one in there temporarily——"

"No, miss, the room is empty, altho I don't know if I could ever induce Ellabelle to go back into it if she knew for what purpose it has been used during her absence."

"We'll have to risk that," said Pyneglass. "Get one of the other men and carry Lady Baltimore to Ellabelle's bed."

"Never mind," interrupted Mr. Smith. "Morse and I will handle the body. If your man will just lead the way."

The two detectives picked up their limp burden and started toward the service quarters, which took them via the dining room.

Before they reached the double-swung door to the butler's pantry Arthur Weeks came thru it. He had on a white pastry-cook's apron and carried, level with his eyes, a huge cake—Diana's wedding cake.

"Out of my way everybody," he ordered, not seeing what the two men were carrying.

"Watch your own step," warned Detective Morse.

At that rough command Arthur Weeks looked down and for the first time saw the body and the telltale expression on the dead face.

The white frosted cake hit the floor first, but Arthur Weeks was a close second. He had fainted. No, not with his face in the frosting, altho the cake was a total loss anyhow.

The detectives stepped gingerly over the prostrate Arthur and the scattered fragments of his recent burden.

Pyneglass and his daughter, at her suggestion, adjourned to the breakfast room for the coffee which she had ordered at a time which seemed ages ago.

Sure enough, the percolator was busily chirping away on the sideboard. There was fruit on the table and sliced bread ready to go into the toaster. Diana poured the coffee with hands which she was glad to see did not shake.

They had scarcely sat down to their rather insignificant breakfast when Diana's sister, Rhoda, entered. Rhoda and her husband, George Angell, had come down from Seattle for Diana's wedding. She was wearing a blue silk quilted dressing gown, one that Diana had given her the Christmas before. Diana had to admit that Rhoda looked like the devil in it. When she had selected the robe she had been guided by recollections of her sister's youth and not by the actual facts of her current status. Rhoda had been married six years and that, or something, had taken away whatever it was that she once had which made her the most elfin, most amusing person Diana had ever known.

The lines in her face that were made by laughter had changed to the bitter engraving of unhappiness. Like so many women, Rhoda had emphasized the hilarious gayety of youth to such an extent that when it slipped from her greedy fingers she thought there was nothing more to come. Beauty of face and figure had been hers without effort, but she had nevertheless worshiped at the shrine of her mirror. When it gave her back an honest report of the changes of time she declared that it was a liar and tried to prove it with make-up and stimulated vivacity. It can't be done, of course, and to those who do not substitute other qualities for vanishing youth there really isn't much fun in the outlook. Rhoda, whom all of her family had loved too much, had changed from a spoiled but lovely child to a spoiled woman with all of her charming attributes tarnished from overwork and overexposure.

The worst of it, Diana's conscience told her, was that she herself had done more than any one else to protect Rhoda from her mother's illness. The poor kid had certainly not asked to be born into the Pyneglass family and the fact that her arrival was also the date of the end of the romantic era of Mr. and Mrs. Pyneglass' relationship was something no possible course of reasoning could associate with the child herself. Even her father probably admitted it when he thought about it. At such times he was kind to her in an unnatural and profligate degree. It was in his instinctive and abstracted reactions that he withheld from Rhoda the love that he owed her as a father. Diana had tried to make it up to her. Naturally she had not succeeded. On the contrary, Rhoda at times had seemed to hate her older sister for trying to fool her with synthetic parental affection.

And now the light in her eyes, which had once been the sparkling blue of dancing water on a rippled pond, had become the chill, washed-out gray and green of approaching winter on the restless, vengeful sea.

When Rhoda entered the room she did not immediately sit down at the breakfast table. Instead she stood at the back of a chair and pulled it off balance with a nervous gesture.

"Where's George?" she demanded brusquely.

"Sit down," her father ordered. "Why should we keep track of George? He's your husband, isn't he?"

"I'm married to him, if that's what you mean. He isn't much of a husband."

"Perhaps you haven't been much of a wife," Mr. Pyneglass suggested. "Have a cup of coffee and you'll feel better."

Rhoda let the chair slam back into place on the floor. "Breakfast be damned," she said. "When I woke up this morning George wasn't in bed and I'd like to have my darling sister, Diana, tell me where he was."

This was not the first time she had said things of that sort, but it made Diana slightly sick inside.

It was new stuff to her father, tho. He slammed his fork down on his plate and said to Rhoda: "What are you talking about? Haven't we trouble enough in this family without your working up some fanciful grievance in that empty little head of yours?"

"Thanks for all the compliments, father." Rhoda did sit down. Quite without thinking, Diana got up and poured her a cup of coffee. She accepted the service as usual without comment and went right on talking to their father. "It just happens that I am not imagining this. When I found that George was gone from our room this morning I got up myself and started to look for him. Naturally, the first place I went was to my sister's room. I have just come from there."

"Well, you didn't find your mislaid husband did you?"

"No, but I found three stubs of his kind of cigarets."

"O, you did," said Pyneglass, jamming bread into the toaster. "What kind of cigarets?"

"Benson and Hedges, if you want to know."

"Yes, I do want to know. That happens to be the same kind of cigarets that I smoke myself, and I was the one who left the stubs there in Diana's room. We were talking there for quite some time before we came to breakfast."

Rhoda clapped her little hands together. "Bravo! Father, you'd make a splendid hero. Your nobility is true but trite. I happen to remember that you smoke the cheapest kind of widely advertised cigarets."

"I'll need the help of one of the members of the family a little later on," said Detective Smith.

"Perhaps you don't remember that I also smoke anything else that comes to hand," he observed harshly. "I may have picked up a package of George's that he left in the library last night."

"You may have, yes. I'm a reasonable woman."

"Like hell you are."

"But if I were on a jury——"

"But you're not on a jury." Her parent's exasperation reached a climax. "Why should Diana be spending the morning with George when she's going to be married to Henry Bayonne today?"

Rhoda laughed, a hard, brittle, nasty laugh as women sometimes do when the stupidity of man comes right up to their expectations.

"You, father, are certainly not fooled by the fact that Diana is at last marrying some one else, are you? All that means is simply that she has given up hope finally—hope that I will die so that she can have George back."

Diana took a hand in the conversation. "How could I expect to get back something that never belonged to me?"

"Don't try to tell me that you don't know that George Angell was in love with you. I admit that I deliberately took him away from you. When I came home from school and found what you had in your net I wanted it."

"And you got it. All right. Why should you bring it up now? You certainly pay me a great compliment, darling, by being jealous. If George had seen anything in me, and things were the way you say they were, he could have married me."

"Not after he saw me, Diana, dear. I'm flashier—a gaily baited hook, if you wish. Nothing but a pain in the gizzard after I'm swallowed but a very pretty fish to chase after—I'm talking about the girl I was then. I've faded now, I know it. You're the way he remembers you. Do you think I can't read his mind? Ever since my darling husband arrived here with me last night and saw you again he's just as bright and snappy as he used to be. He's still in love with you and he's been wondering why he ever wavered in the first place. Besides that, he can see, just as every one else can, that you're not in love with this man you're going to marry. George feels that he ought to rescue you. Am I right?"

"Nuts." Pyneglass was the one who expressed the idea, but Diana subscribed to it heartily.

George Angell, the bone of recent contention, entered the room with elaborate casualness. Maybe he knew they had been talking about him. "Good morning, Diana," he said, "and good morning to you, my darling wife. How are you, father?"

"Not a bad performance, George," commented Rhoda caustically. "I like the casual way you greeted my Manx sister."

George didn't get the crack about the cat. It puzzled him as he sat down.

George was still a handsome man. His hair was a little gray, but it made him more distinguished. He hadn't lost his smile nor his expectant expression. He still had hope that something interesting would happen to him yet. Something probably would. George was tall, broad shouldered, dressed with careless elegance and had a nice deferential way with women which had just enough warmth in it to hold out the promise that he would be more amusing in private. Diana's considered opinion of George Angell as of that date was that he was as faithful as a tomcat. She saw him now much more clearly than she had at the time that he wrote those letters to her which had been burned up only that morning in the back yard.

George brought up the topic of conversation that interested him at the moment. "Who is that bird upstairs in your office who is asking so many questions?"

Pyneglass and Diana exchanged glances. Probably George meant Detective Smith.

Pyneglass asked casually, "Didn't he introduce himself?"

"No. He just began prying into my affairs. Wanted to know what I'd been doing since I got up."

"So do I," said Rhoda. "What have you been doing?"

"Well," said George, "it's a little hard to explain."

"I'll bet it is."

George went on evenly. "I didn't think you'd miss me."

"Don't bother to lie," Rhoda told him with acid kindness. "Diana has already admitted the truth."

George looked at his sister-in-law, startled. Then he grinned. "Rhoda is clever, isn't she? It would be cleverer, however, if she hadn't pulled the same trick before." He turned to his wife. "Don't you remember, darling, that was the one you sprung on the maid you fired last month?" George looked at Mr. Pyneglass. "I hope you'll excuse us. We always talk over our private affairs every morning at breakfast. It starts the day with a bang. So far we have both used popguns."

Angus entered the room to inquire if any one wished anything more or different for breakfast.

Every one seemed supplied. Diana suggested that possibly Mr. Smith would like a cup of coffee.

"I've already offered it to him but he declined. Just now he's questioning Mr. Weeks—the man who fainted, you know."

Both George and Rhoda suspended operations on their little-wanted breakfast and looked up open-mouthed.

"What goes on?" asked George. "Holding out on us, my dear sister-in-law?"

Mr. Pyneglass took over for the moment. "This has nothing whatever to do with the household. It's merely a little annoyance connected with the catering company."

"The Lady Baltimore company?" asked Rhoda brightly.

"Yes."

"I hope," said Rhoda, "that the shapely Lady Baltimore herself isn't around. In the days when I was able to afford her services I always used to find George conferring with her in a corner somewhere."

George muttered a curse and rose from the table.

"Sit down," said Pyneglass with seagoing authority. "Can't you two get your minds off yourselves? If you want to know the truth, Lady Baltimore was killed here in this house this morning, and it may turn out to be a murder. All this talk about petty jealousies seems pretty damn trivial. Shut up and let me think."

Stunned silence followed the command for 30 seconds. Even Rhoda was too surprised to do more than flash an interrogative but accusing look at her husband. Then Detective Morse came to the door and asked Diana to come upstairs.

Diana left the room gladly. She was sorry for her father, but her sympathies for George and Rhoda were distinctly dulled by listening too much to their readily expressed opinions of each other.

Mr Pyneglass' combination private library and office was in the south wing on the second floor, overlooking the back yard and almost all of San Francisco on that side. The hill sloped away so that the tops of even the nearest buildings did not come high enough to interfere with a view of the bay. It was a place where the head of the house could attain as much privacy as is possible in a home where there are other members of a family.

Detective Morse led Diana there. His superior, Detective Smith, had taken the room over as temporary headquarters. He sat at the flat-topped desk-table with a sheaf of papers spread out before him. He was making additional notes as he questioned Arthur Weeks, sitting across from him. Arthur seemed to be taking his ordeal seriously. At least he was very pale and exhausted looking.

Smith told Diana to sit down. "The reason I asked you to come here, Miss Pyneglass, is to corroborate Mr. Weeks' statements. First of all, is he, to your knowledge, a member of the firm operating the Lady Baltimore Catering company?"

Diana hesitated. "To tell the absolute truth, Detective Smith, I have never seen Mr. Weeks before today. However, the so-called Lady Baltimore introduced him to me, so I think it is safe to assume that he is at least an employe. Mr. Weeks himself told me that he was a member of the firm but I have nothing but his own word as to that."

"Actually," eagerly interjected the high-strung Mr. Weeks, "I suppose that, since my partner's death, I am now sole owner of the company."

Smith made a notation of that. "Subject to Lady Baltimore's will, I imagine," was his dry comment. To Diana he said, "Miss Pyneglass, I understand that you were in the kitchen a short time before the tragedy. What happened?"

Diana told him about the ring at the front doorbell and the fact that Lady Baltimore had gone to answer it herself because she was certain that it was her niece.

"Where was Mr. Weeks when she left the kitchen?"

"He was there unpacking china."

"That's what I told you," said Weeks triumphantly.

"But," Diana concluded, "he followed Lady Baltimore thru the door which leads to the butler's pantry. He was carrying an armful of dishes."

"Did he come back immediately?"

"I did not see him return."

"What are you trying to do," demanded young Mr. Weeks of Diana with querulous alarm, "make out that I killed Lady Baltimore?"

"No. I'm trying to state the facts."

"You might have killed her, you know, Mr. Weeks," Detective Smith observed casually. "Actually you did have a motive."

"What possible motive?"

"According to your own representations you're now sole owner of a profitable business in which you were formerly only the junior partner."

What Has Gone Before

On her wedding day Diana Pyneglass slips down the back stairs to burn old love letters. Wedding preparations under the supervision of Lady Baltimore, cateress with a mysterious past, and her assistant, Arthur Weeks, are under way. Diana finds some one has been burning papers before her. Back in her room, her father is sprawled on her bed. Diana notices his shoes are wet. After the mother's death her Spanish grandmother, Donna Diego, who rules the family, comes to live with them and plans to bring about Diana's marriage to some one socially eligible. Diana's fiance, Henri de Bayonne, a Frenchman entrusted with a secret mission to the United States, meets with the grandmother's approval. Donna favors an early marriage, but Diana's father would prefer to have her wait. Lady Baltimore is found strangled. Arriving to guard the presents, Detective Seven Smith and his assistant, Horace Morse, are called upon to solve a murder. Donna insists the wedding go on, no mention to be made of the murder until the ceremony is over. Smith agrees.

Provincetown Sights Lure Many Visitors

CAPE COD, MASS. The picturesque cape-tip village of Provincetown provides all the color and excitement that could be wished for by the most ardent of tourists. Here swarthy Portuguese fishermen mingle with white-skinned artists; college professors exchange the time of day with farmers, and dowagers from cities vie with old-time vaudeville stars and aspiring ingenues in Provincetown's markets.

Tiny shops run by well-known artists are crowded next to Chinese restaurants or colorful night clubs. The streets are only one car wide in many places, and curve and twist like the original paths over which they were built, and bicyclists, pedestrians, and motorists question each other's right of way. On the streets of Provincetown and in its shops and eating places one sees old sea captains, gypsies, housewives, musicians, college students, service men, priests and ministers, school children, painters and sculptors, all mixing in a spirit of gay camaraderie and holiday that starts early in June and continues thruout September.

Here one may relax. There are long stretches of beach where one may find privacy for the peace of mind wanted by a businessmen or the solitude desired by the writer or artist. The water is warm and soothing and the sand, white and clean.

Favorite drive of even Cape residents [before the days of gasoline rationing] was the trip down the cape to Provincetown, to see the scenes inside the village and then to continue along the shore out to Race Point, at the very eastern tip of Massachusetts. All along this drive are stretches of white sand and blue water, and the sand-dunes, tufted with coarse grass, are peopled with picnickers and sun-worshipers.

Chicagoans, for many years, have found the unique atmosphere of the cape-tip to their liking, and Mr. and Mrs. Philip Conrad of Chicago became so intrigued with Provincetown's own special brand of living that they have become permanent residents. They have entered whole-heartedly into the life there and have made friends with such well known Provincetowners as John Whorf, noted artist, and his charming wife, and Harry Kemp, the "dune poet." Richard Whorf, producer and director of the legitimate theater, now in Hollywood, is a brother of John and is at the cape-tip as much as possible.

John Whorf's daughter, Miss Carol Whorf, recently became the bride of Lt. Charles Westcott, son of a prominent Baltimore family, and among those who came to Provincetown for the wedding was Miss Joan Lynch of Evanston. Miss Lynch, a student at Goucher college, is a visitor at the cape-tip each season, staying with her grandmother, Mrs. John Matheson. Joan is back in Evanston now, but Mrs. Matheson is looking forward to a visit from her later this summer.

Provincetown is a great art center during the summer. Here many artists have had their start, exhibiting their pictures in the colorful sidewalk "galleries" that are seen thruout the village. A Provincetown Art association has been formed and is a thriving group, sponsoring exhibitions of oils, water colors, prints, and sculpture.

Public forums on the most outstanding problems of the day in art, world affairs, and national issues, are held every Tuesday night during July and August. Discussions are led by doctors, painters, writers, ministers, and lawyers, and among those participating this year are Dr. Carl Murchison, Hans Hoffman, Philip Conrad, and the Rev. Arthur O. Dewey.

Another Chicago couple who have been visitors to Provincetown for several years are Prof. and Mrs.

Poets' Club of Chicago Plans Reunion Sunday

Members of the Poets' Club of Chicago will hold a summer reunion next Sunday. Gathering at 4 o'clock in the vicinity of the band shell in Grant park, they will have a few hours of literary discussion before the park concert. Each will bring lunch for a picnic supper. Mrs. Reede [Lillian] Foster and Mrs. E. J. [Lorena] Oullette are directing arrangements for the outing. Several members of the club plan to attend the Midwestern Writers' conference at Northwestern university, which opens Wednesday. The president, Miss Isabelle Gillespie, has assigned Mrs. Ouilette to prepare a report on the conference for presentation to the club when regular meetings are resumed in the fall.

Mission School to Open Aug. 5 at Lake Geneva

By Irene Steyskal

There was once a Man who had a rare gift as a story teller. It was no uncommon thing for crowds numbering into the hundreds to follow Him to a distant beach or for many leagues into the quiet of country places, forgetting weariness and even that they were hungry, to listen to the simple tales He told—parables that held great spiritual truths as a shell holds the sound of the sea.

So inspiring was His gift that the stories were received as gospel—the glad tidings—and in all the succeeding centuries daring spirits among His followers have adventured across seas and into unknown lands that all the world might know of Him and His message.

In Wisconsin is a spot, Conference Point, overlooking Lake Geneva in the Williams Bay vicinity, which may be identified by a white, belfried chapel on an elevation not quite high enough to be termed a hill. Here for a week each summer some of our present day gospel bearers, missionaries home briefly or retired after years of foreign labors, foregather with several hundred stay at home supporters and well-wishers. It is a week of story telling in Christian adventure. The gathering of missionaries and home workers is known as the Geneva Summer School of Missions. Sunday, Aug. 5, the school will open for its 27th season.

Several missionaries who have worked in Africa will be at the conference this season, among them Mrs. James B. Allen, who worked under the Foreign Presbyterian board at Elat in the Cameroun district; Mrs. H. Stanley Hollenbeck, a missionary nurse sent by the Congregational-Christian denomination board to Angola; Dr. Catherine L. Mabie, doctor, writer, teacher, who worked in the Belgian Congo as a Baptist medical missionary; the Rev. Mina Malek, formerly a missionary to Africa for the Methodist church, who is to have charge of the professional and business women's wing at the school and is to give one of the formal addresses, a talk entitled "Dark Laughter," which is scheduled for Thursday night of the conference, and Mrs. Irene Bittenger of the Church of the Brethren.

Dr. Susan Bauernfeind, who was a missionary of the Evangelical church in Japan, is expected to be present, and three Mission Covenant veterans from China, Mrs. Isaac Jacobson, Mrs. Peter Matson, and Mrs. Obed Johnson, will be there. Another in the Chinese contingent will be Miss Gusta Robinett of the Methodist church, who worked in Yanking. Miss Selma R. Bergner, now editor of Lutheran Women's Work, who formerly was an English teacher at Union Christian College of Women in Tokyo, will teach at the conference. Miss Lois M. Marsilje, a nurse sent by the Reformed church to Scudder Memorial hospital in Ranipet, India, will attend the session.

Each afternoon of the conference there will be an hour or two of informal visiting with both the foreign and home missionaries, but Wednesday, guest day, is especially planned for them. Laying aside their more somber customary dress, the missionaries who have brought home native costumes appear on guest day in their foreign finery, and tables are spread out on the lawn with trophies, pictures, ornaments, and other memorabilia of life in foreign fields.

And the evening of guest day is memorable also for the Galilean vesper, a traditional service held on the lake that is never to be forgotten by one who has participated in it or who has observed it as a watcher on the shore. Out on the twilight waters of the lake is launched a small fleet of boats, reminiscent of the little fishing barks which so frequently served as pulpits

Fresh from the Hills . . . . By Marge of Sunrise Mountain Farm . . . . Murder at Dawn

[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune]

ACTUALLY, Rounder Smith, our retired moonshiner neighbor, meant to shoot his son-in-law, Ray Houston, in the legs. "Just to sort o' slow him down," explained Rounder later. Apparently Ray didn't believe Rounder's shotgun was loaded. He advanced steadily in spite of the command not to step foot off the highway. He made the last of many mistakes when he stepped down into the little ditch that separates Rounder's front yard from the farm to market road. Rounder's motherless young son, Lonnie, 15, saw the shotgun charge hit the pit of Ray's stomach. In the pinkish pearl light of an Ozark dawning, the wounded man lay in the road until our hired man could drive to town and get John Duncan's ambulance. Rounder went on into the woods to find his horses. He had planned to do a bit of plowing that day.

The trouble that ended in the shooting had begun in the night. Ray and Darlene, Rounder's daughter, had been to a square dance at the farm next to ours. After the dance, they returned to the Ira Brooks' home where Darlene was caring for Mrs. Brooks and little new born Eva Marie. Ira and Rounder live only a half a quarter apart, and when Ray and Darlene got into an argument in the wee hours, Rounder could hear it quite plainly. At first, he thought it was only an ordinary husband and wife argument, but after a while he heaved his long thin frame out of bed, put on pants and shirt and went up to the Brooks home. He found frail little 95 pound Darlene with both eyes blackened and her nose bleeding, and like any father, he told Ray what he thought of him. Ray turned on Rounder and threatened to beat him up. Now Ray was young and big and tough and Rounder's mother never raised any foolish children. Rounder went home.

Mrs. Brooks and little Eva Marie tried to get some sleep. Darlene put cold pads on her black eyes. But Ray stormed until daylight. Finally, he decided to go down and beat up Rounder on his own ground. Rounder met him with his shotgun and about dusk, Ray woke up in the West Plains hospital. He lived long enough to beg forgiveness for his earthly sins, say good-by to his mother and sister, and gallantly ask that nothing be done to Rounder. Around midnight he died. We have no phones but the mountain grapevine brought the news to Rounder in little more than an hour. At dawn, 24 hours after the shooting, he was pounding on our door. "I need help," he told the Jedge. The Jedge understood. Rounder has done a couple of hitches in the Big House, mainly for converting natural products into something drinkable, and the law might think the worst of a murder. The Jedge heard Rounder's story thru, then he brewed a pot of coffee and the two of them sat down to breakfast. After that, the Jedge made out a warrant charging Rounder with murder in the first degree, and put it in his pocket as a possible protection against arrest by other authorities. They headed for West Plains where ex-Judge Will H. D. Green and his brother, Dick, have law offices. Along back roads they raced in the Jedge's car, hoping to present a disheveled client to the famous Greens before less sympathetic law enforcers caught up with them. They found the Greens were at Van Buren, 100 miles away, where they were expecting to try a case that day. Over the phone the Jedge said they were needed here, and how!

"Go back to Sunrise Mountain farm and wait for us," said Judge Green.

By that time, the highways were full of scouting officers, real and voluntary, but the Jedge knows a lot of back roads. Rounder lay down in the back seat and covered up with my coat, just in case. At the farm, Rounder slipped into hiding and the Jedge went into the kitchen to finish that coffee. Along about noon, the Greens came charging up the lane and asked for their client.

"Wait a minute," said the Jedge. "You're in the hills now!"

He went out to his car and sounded the horn three times. The tall jack oak bushes beyond the front lawn parted cautiously. The towseled head and long thin frame of Rounder hove into sight. The four men held a short council. Then by devious back ways they drove to Houston, the county seat of Texas county, in which the shooting had occurred. Rounder had no money, he still owed $30 on his 40 acre woods farm and he had two counts against him in those prison terms, but somehow the Greens got him out on bail when he was booked for murder. Preliminary hearing was set for the following Saturday and the Jedge and the Greens signed his bond for $10,000. Rounder came home and finished his plowing.

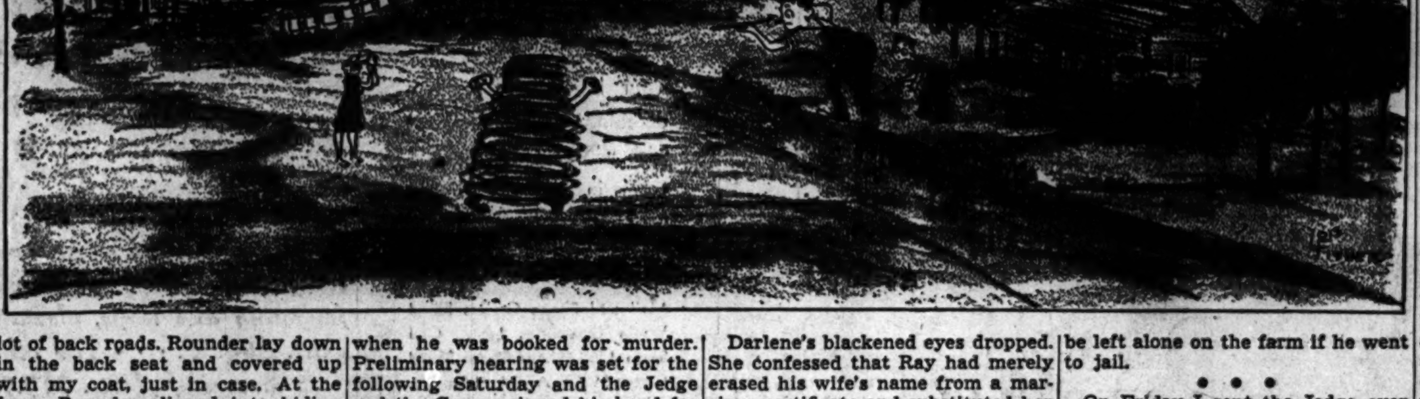
All week, brother was against brother and sister against sister in arguments over the murder. Some said Rounder should be hanged. Others said the murdered man had asked for it! Since each of the two men had two prison records, hot arguments waged over whether cattle stealing or moonshine making is the greater crime. That scored gains for Rounder's side, because few considered moonshine making a crime at all. As arrangements for Ray's funeral progressed, a large handsome woman in widow's weeds suddenly appeared and took charge.

"I am the widow," she said calmly.



Darlene's blackened eyes dropped. She confessed that Ray had merely erased his wife's name from a marriage certificate and substituted her own "to show Rounder." With that off her mind, Darlene ceased being a bereaved widow and became a fiercely defensive daughter, anxious to help daddy.

Each evening, Rounder came over to our house and we sat around tossing off such phrases as "beating this rap" and "staying in the buggy." The Jedge is a stickler for what he thinks is right in any matter, and I had more than a neighborly interest in the case. My forthcoming book will have a chapter about Rounder and his moonshine, and how would it look, I moaned, for my hero to get his fan mail at the Missouri bastile. As for Rounder himself, he was concerned only with the welfare of Lonnie, who would be left alone on the farm if he went to jail.

On Friday I sent the Jedge over to see if Rounder had another shirt to wear to the trial. He didn't. Next morning when we went over to take Rounder, Lonnie, and Darlene to Houston, the Jedge took along a clean shirt and a corduroy jacket for Rounder. He told him the shirt sleeves might be a little short, but Rounder said he always rolled them up anyway, so they would be all right. We waited out in front until Rounder put on the shirt, then we drove to Houston along the daisy-lined highway, with the beautiful blue haze of the Ozarks covering the ridges all the way to King's mountain.

The forenoon at the courthouse was sort of an Old Settlers' reunion for all of us from Jack's Fork. Practically every one down to Eva Marie had been summoned as a state witness. Prosecuting Atty. Impey and impressive young William Duncan, assistant state's attorney general, who had come down from Jefferson City, interviewed Jack Forkers ad infinitum in a private room. In another room, the Greens interviewed the same people, with the Jedge sitting in. I sat in the Impey office and chatted with the murdered man's sweet faced sister, a minister of the gospel, who told of the family's efforts to make a good man of their black sheep. Then Mrs. Impey came in and talked, with chin held bravely high, of her fine young son who had died a hero's death in Germany. A few moments later, the aged mother of the black sheep came from her interview with the Lawyers Impey and Duncan. Her eyes had the same stricken look that I had seen in the eyes of Mrs. Impey, but there was no lift to that quivering chin. For the first time I realized murder is not a personal affair, the wrong person can be hurt most of all.

Suddenly a flurry of movement swept thru the halls and everybody moved into the courtroom. Darlene and I went along with the crowd. Just like the movies, I thought, looking at the hard straight benches and the fenced off area that held the legal talent and the prisoner. The presiding judge, a Houston justice of the peace, took his seat on the bench and I was so busy noting his coatless blue shirt and galluses that I failed to catch Prosecutor Impey's opening words.

"What is he saying?" I murmured to Darlene as I fished notebook and pencil out of my purse. "Just a lot of legal hocus pocus, I suppose!"

When I raised my eyes again, Prosecutor Impey was resuming his seat. The justice brought his gavel down hard and said, "Case dismissed." Rounder and the Greens arose and began shaking hands with Prosecutors Impey and Duncan.

"Something went past me," I said to Darlene.

"Maybe they're putting the trial off till after dinner," she said.

The Jedge had to come over and tell us what had happened. It was simple and to the point. In one sentence, Mr. Impey had said they had interviewed all the witnesses in the case and having found there wasn't sufficient evidence to warrant a trial, they asked that the case be dismissed. We went out to the car to come home.

"So they didn't tack even a jail sentence on you," I said to Rounder as he bent his long back and climbed into the seat beside Lonnie.

"No, ma'am, they didn't tack nothin' onto me," he said. "That 'minds me, Lonnie. I want to stop in town and git some shoe tacks. Got to fix them heavy shoes of your'n. We'll start cultivatin' that bottom field tomorrow!"

Provincetown Sights Lure Many Visitors

Leforce Bailey. Prof. Bailey is another art enthusiast, and with Mrs. Bailey, is prominent in all art groups and activities at the capetip.

Among other activities for visitors to Provincetown was a recent production of "opera miniatures," presented yearly since 1939 by a group of talented singers. Selections from "Rigoletto" and "Aida" were the favorites this year, sung by such well known artists as Wesley Copplestone, tenor soloist with the Handel and Haydn Oratorio of Boston; Katherine Dean, opera concert and oratorio singer of New York; William Weigle, student of Sergei Klibansky, Russian baritone, and Elizabeth Golden, soloist with "Opera Miniatures" since it started. Accompanist was Robert Ewing, pupil of Egon Petrie, and known for his work as conductor, arranger, and teacher.

Another diversion for the visitor is the excellent productions being given by actors and actresses of the Provincetown playhouse. The season, opening July 3 with a brilliant performance of Noel Coward's comedy favorite, "Blythe Spirit," will include such plays as Saroyan's "The Beautiful People"; "Claudia," by Rose Franken; "The Male Animal," by James Thurber, and Elliott Nugent, and "They Knew What They Wanted," by Sidney Howard. The casts included many well known names.

Other Chicagoans now visiting at the cape-tip are Mrs. Fred T. Commee and her son, Towne, who are guests of Mrs. Arthur M. Commee, who lives on Commercial st. in the very heart of all Provincetown's activity.

Summering in the near-by town of Truro is the James Mahoney family of Highland Park. Mr. and Mrs. Mahoney, their 10 year old son, James Jr., and young daughter, Patricia, 6, spend long hours on the beach, and all four are accomplished swimmers.

Visitors at the South Wellfleet summer colony include Patricia and Mellicent Seyfert of Chicago, daughters of Mrs. Warren Seyfert. The girls are vacationing at the cape with their grandmother, Mrs. Guy Cook of Winchester, Mass., who has leased a cottage on Drummer's Pond for the summer. Chicagoans who favor the town of Chatham as a summer resort include Mr. and Mrs. Howard Meincke and daughter, Barbara. The Meinckes have been at their summer place for several weeks now.

In the central cape area, the Wianno club and its surrounding colony continues to be an active section. The ideal summer weather of the past fortnight has kept the golf course, tennis courts, and beach busy. The enthusiasm of the golfers was shown by the 60 entries in a recent flag tournament won by Ralph Kelly of Philadelphia.

Participants in a round robin tennis tournament included two residents from Chicago, Mrs. James H. Tatman and her popular daughter, Ariel. Mrs. Tatman is a busy person these days arranging details for the annual all-day sale of the New England Farm and Garden association, scheduled to be held on July 26 at the clubhouse. The event is under the direction of the Wianno club's senior house committee, Mrs. J. Mott Hallowell, chairman.

for Christ in an evening hour on Galilee.

The picturesque ceremony centers about the lighting of a cross of tapers, a symbol of Christ, the Light of the World, and setting it afloat on the water when the darkness has settled down.

It is an annual custom during the conference to visit neighboring Yerkes observatory and that program will be carried out on Saturday. For the preceding evening a large entertainment—a home talent night—is planned.

On the closing Sunday, Aug. 12, the Rev. Harry K. Zeller Jr. will preach a sermon, "Returning from the Mountain Top," at a morning service in the auditorium.

Because the office of defense transportation has ruled that camps operating this season must be on a vacation pattern, the conference will confine classes to the morning and give the afternoon to recreation. Nature study, water contests, baseball, dramatics, boating, photography, swimming, hiking, tennis, and tours are some of the activities planned.

Already last week more than 350 reservations—almost the capacity of the camp—had been received by Mrs. Carl H. Hoy, president of the women's department of the conference. Fifteen Protestant denominations participate in the summer school, which is attended by children as well as adults. The general theme of the meeting this year is "A Righteous Peace for All the World." Africa will have the center of attention in the study of foreign missions. The home mission program will be directed to "The Church Among Uprooted Americans."

The Red Cross Motor Corps Needs Drivers

"If you join the motor corps, you don't get to see the world, but you do see a world of interesting people and you do have a world of fun!"

The enthusiastic description of service with the Red Cross motor corps was Mrs. John Eddy's. Mrs. Eddy, who in private life is a Hinsdale housewife, is chairman of Chicago chapter's motor corps unit which now is in the midst of a recruitment campaign for experienced women drivers able to volunteer two days' time each week as drivers of Red Cross vehicles.

For proof of the endorsement, there were the countless little comments scribbled spontaneously on the daily assignment book at Red Cross headquarters by volunteers in the corps, comments such as "Plenty of troop trains—a perfect day!"

And there were the countless little stories of emergency assignments that continuously flood the office nowadays, assignments indicating the comprehensive type of service these women give, such as the time 16 ambulatory patients were taken on a two hour sight seeing tour of Chicago while waiting between trains. Also the time the cheerful young soldier with both legs in casts, who had stopped for a day in Chicago while on furlough, was taken to Red Cross headquarters for breakfast, on a sight seeing tour, and to a ball game.

It was the motor corps, too, which saw to it recently that 60 GI Joes were provided with much needed baths. An SOS call came from a captain in charge of the boys who had been traveling night and day aboard a troop train sans benefit of bathing facilities and who temporarily were stranded in Chicago. So the motor corps members packed their buses with the vociferously grateful boys and taxied them to the Chicago Service Men's centers and available showers.

Then there are the daily assignments at the navy garage, assignments actually relieving navy men for more vital posts. Mrs. Leroy Souders of Chicago, whose husband is an army air corps major now on duty in the Pacific, serves as dispatcher at the garage, relaying the assignments that come directly from navy headquarters. Among the workers there are Mrs. Donald Brock, a Winnetka housewife, and Mrs. John Hayes, a Chicago school teacher, who devotes her Saturdays to motor corps work.

A roll call of volunteers indicates they come from all walks of life. Among others there is Mrs. William Schmidt of Lombard, who works with a taxicab company five days a week and takes a busman's holiday by giving her two days of leisure time to the motor corps. Mrs. Ruth Tenute of 725 Melrose av., who works on night shift at the Douglas Aircraft plant, arranges her day time hours two days out of each week to accommodate the Red Cross. Mrs. Albert Gemeinhardt, a Chicago housewife, devotes four full days each week to the motor corps, with one of those days assigned exclusively for duty with one of the military general hospitals.

The usual derogatory epithets concerning women drivers simply do not apply to motor corps volunteers, Mrs. Eddy asserts. She cited the instance of the slender young woman who handled a coke laden two ton utility truck with such dexterity among rails of the yards where a troop train was waiting that amazed whistles of admiration were evoked both from the army and the railroad men. The driver, Miss Lois Kunze of Kenilworth, volunteers three days' time each week to the corps.

More than 100 additional drivers are needed if the Red Cross is to fill all requests that now come from military centers, Mrs. Eddy says. Applicants should be United States citizens 20 to 50 years of age, and should be able to give two days' time each week to the corps. However, school instructors able to give only one day each week are welcomed. A motor mechanics course, a safety driving test, and a course in first aid are arranged for the volunteers after applications are accepted. Interviews for the work are granted at Red Cross headquarters, 529 S. Wabash av., between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m. Mondays thru Fridays.

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, July 19.

Dear Julia: Will has just come in from sending a telegram to "Mother Bickerdyke" who tomorrow celebrates her 80th birthday in Salina, Kas. Do you remember her name? It was famous in Civil war days but since then she has not been much in the public eye.

There is not an old soldier in the United States who will not be interested in hearing about this anniversary, which the Grand Army of Kansas is celebrating, for she was foremost in that noble band of women who ministered to the sick and wounded in the military hospitals during the war. Many of these women were as self-sacrificing as Mother Bickerdyke, no doubt, but few were as fearless and resolute in overcoming obstacles, and certainly none was so picturesque.

Mother Bickerdyke

The story of her life is thrilling. She was born Mary Ann Ball at Mount Vernon, O., one of her ancestors being a progenitor of the beautiful Mary Ball who became the second wife of Augustine Washington, and thus the mother of our first President. So she has good blood in her veins. At the age of 16, Mother Bickerdyke became a student at Oberlin college, where the teaching of the famous Charles G. Finney greatly influenced her life. During the cholera plague of 1837 she entered a Cincinnati hospital for systematic training in nursing, thus unconsciously preparing herself for the great work of her life. She married Robert Bickerdyke, a mechanic, and they moved to Galesburg, Ill., where, after a few years, her husband died, leaving her with two small sons to support.

When the Civil war broke out, she was one of the first to offer her services to the sanitary commission in Chicago and at once was accepted. Sent to Cairo, Ill., she soon showed her contempt for red tape. Says Will, who is one of her devoted admirers: "Mother Bickerdyke usually did what she wanted to do and asked permission afterward." At Memphis the hospitals were meagerly supplied with eggs and milk, of a poor quality. Mother Bickerdyke asked for permission to go north and get these supplies. "What!" exclaimed her astonished superior. "You couldn't bring them down here. Don't you know that eggs spoil? Milk sours, too."

"But I'll bring down the producers of eggs and milk," countered the dauntless nurse. "I can get 50 cows in Illinois alone, just for the asking." The doctor was unconvinced, but as usual she had her way. Illinois farmers gave her 100 cows and 1,000 hens, which Governor Yates shipped south for her, and says Will: "When she entered Memphis in the midst of this live stock, she looked like a goddess in a triumphal procession. To the famished soldiers, the mooing of the cows and the cackling of the hens was sweet music." President's Island, in the Mississippi, was given up to these novel immigrants and thereafter the wounded in the hospitals had an abundance of fresh food. A more prosaic figure than Florence Nightingale was Mother Bickerdyke, but not more beloved.

Her duty to her boys did not end with the war, as she felt. On her return to Chicago she worked to get money for cheap homes in Kansas for those who wished to settle there. As a pension agent she saw that justice was done to many a veteran who, thru some technicality, had been unable to make good his claim to a pension. She was housekeeper for a year in the Chicago Home for the Friendless. Her last work for humanity was with the Jerry McAuley Mission in New York, where, in spite of her age, she took up her work with the same zeal she showed in nursing. It is a comfort to know that she is spending the sunset of her life in the home of a son in Salina. There she will receive a flood of telegrams and gifts from old soldiers, many of them now men of influence. Jenkin Lloyd Jones, minister of All Souls Unitarian church, Chicago, was one of her "boys," and he recently paid a glowing tribute to her in an address: "The praying Stonewall Jackson represented a sublime spiritual force, as did Mother Bickerdyke, who, with flaming bandana around her head, striped gingham dress tucked well under her apron strings, and arms akimbo, wheeled into coherent efficiency a motley crowd of contrabands, and commanded recognition among the belaced young surgeons, who began by sneering at her; then came to fear and at length to revere her."

My husband, one of her admirers, often sends her a check, begging her to use it for herself. "Of course," he laughs, "it will go to some veteran, who, as she thinks, needs it more than she does, but if this pleases her, let it be so." With much love, Your old friend,

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

Mother Bickerdyke died at Bunker Hill, Kas., in 1901 and was buried in Galesburg, Ill., where a monument was erected to her memory by the state of Illinois in 1903.

The Batesville Woman's Club held
A meetin' Tuesday,
An' they certainly was a grand debate. ! !
The subject was Woman Sufferage.
You'd think every woman
Would want to vote,
But they don't.

A lot of 'em stood up an' talked about
How their lovin' husbands thought
Woman was too frail to go to the polls.
I noticed the men that talked so big
About shieldin' Women from votin'
Was the very ones that don't object
To havin' female help at milkin' time.

Some said if women got the vote
They wouldn't get married,
But I stood up an' says:
"Women of Batesville,
Ballot or no ballot,
You can't keep a girl from wantin'
A husband an' young ones
Any more'n you can keep
A Plymouth Rock hen
From settin' on a nest full of eggs."

Annual Races Focus Interest on Mackinac

MACKINAC ISLAND, MICH. Bridge games, comfortably near snapping log fires, have kept the Chicago colony on the island occupied and warm this week, the weather having shown a pixielike tendency to be wonderful for summer tanning one day and cold enough for woolens the next. Among the bridge enthusiasts are the Edward A. Cudahys, who were among the first Chicagoans to open their homes for the season.

Miss Nancy Cochran, who is here for the summer with her mother; Mrs. Cudahy and her guest, Miss Diana Hill, attended most of the sessions of the recent governors' conference and managed to get in plenty of golf and bridge as well as a few energetic sets of tennis. Miss Hill has just returned to the city. This is the week-end of the Detroit to Mackinac race, and Chicagoans are especially interested since Ken Sanford's 52 foot yawl Hostess II., flying the burgee of the Chicago Yacht club, is entered and is making the trip around the lakes in time to be back in Chicago for the starting gun of the Chicago to Mackinac race next week-end.

Among the guests arriving over that exciting week-end will be Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Walker, Mrs. John Andrews King, Mrs. Donald M. Ryerson, and Gerald Cudahy, all of whom will be house guests of the Edward Cudahys. Several informal cocktail parties and small dinners are being planned for the guests.

Dr. and Mrs. Selim W. McArthur have opened their cottage and are delighted to have their daughters, Betty, Mrs. William Dunshee and Joan, Mrs. Jack Whitney, with them for the season while their husbands are still in service. The James Thompsons, their daughter, Mrs. Robert Smythe, and their attractive grandchild are here for the summer. Mr. Thompson is one of the most indefatigable walkers on the island.

Comdr. Eugene F. McDonald Jr. and Mrs. McDonald were on the dock meeting friends the other day just before the commander took off for a fishing trip in Georgian bay waters. He is expected to return in time for the finish of the Chicago race. One of the small cocktail parties of the week was given by Prof. and Mrs. E. Wilfred Putkammer at their cottage on Wednesday in honor of Gov. and Mrs. Dwight H. Green. Among the guests were Dr. and Mrs. McArthur, Mrs. Helen B. Leigh, who is Mrs. Green's guest; Mr. and Mrs. Cudahy and the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Murray Brush of California, and the Jay Beidler Camps.

Gov. and Mrs. Green and their daughter, Nancy, who is entering Smith college, Northampton, Mass., in the fall, are returning to their Edgewater Beach apartment tomorrow.

Mr. and Mrs. Mark Lowell of Glencoe are spending a month at Bennet Hall, and they stroll along the board walk daily with their children, Joyce and Mark Jr.

The Ralph C. Burrowses, who arrived last week, often walk into the village from their cottage on the west bluff and watch the boats come in, one of the ever interesting sights of the day.

Mrs. Tracy L. Turner finds marketing a chore but at least on the island the sources of supply are restricted to a small area and one is not kept long in doubt wondering what the dinner entree will be. Mr. and Mrs. William L. Hodgkinson, who opened their cottage 10 days ago, were among the chief conspirators in planning a surprise birthday party Tuesday for their neighbor, Mrs. Armin Rickel of Detroit. Mr. and Mrs. Burrows were among the other Chicagoans who enjoyed the cocktail party and then went to the Grand for dinner.

Gov. and Mrs. Charles Harwood of Westchester and the Virgin Islands stayed on after the governors' conference and took the North American to Chicago, where they have reserved a suite at the Drake. They also were the guests of the Chester Warringtons of Winnetka and spent some time aboard the Warrington boat. Mrs. Harwood is the well known society flier and is a frequent visitor in Chicago.

Among the recent arrivals on the island are John L. Cochran, who has opened his cottage for the season, and Mrs. Charles Holden, Mrs. Arista B. Williams, and Mr. and Mrs. Leon Walton.

The George Packard cottage is being readied for its owners, who are expected next week. Mr. and Mrs. Peter Mero of Evanston are occupying the attractive Jacques cottage for the season and are regular strollers along the quaint streets that have made Mackinac Island famous for so many years.

British Groups to Sponsor 13th Annual Fair

Gay marquees, brilliant umbrellas, and booths with colored awnings will dot the lawns and grounds of the British Old People's home in Hollywood, Ill., next Saturday and Sunday, and at 10 o'clock each of those mornings the scene will be humming with activity as gates open for the 13th annual "Ye Olde English Faire." Several thousand visitors are expected to be there during the two days to sample the refreshments, to hear the music, to participate in the sports and games program, to dance, and to purchase the wares that are offered for sale. Festivities will continue until midnight both on Saturday and Sunday.

Proceeds from the fair will go toward maintenance of the home, where 82 residents of British descent now are cared for. Sponsoring groups include the Daughters of the British Empire, the British Empire association, the Sons and Daughters of St. George, the Welsh Women's club, the Women's Auxiliary of the Canadian legion, the United British societies, and the Ulster society.

There will be a special booth of articles made by the home residents, and among the countless items for sale at other booths will be needlework, home baked foods, and ice cream. Luncheon will be served on the grounds, and visitors will have an opportunity to save ration points by dining in the home.

William H. Soutter has been entrusted with arrangements this year, and Joseph Corbet is his vice chairman. Mrs. Maude Smith is secretary of the committee and on the executive board are Mrs. George Cooke Adams, Mrs. George F. Loree, Mrs. Kate Thomas, Mrs. Minnie Lees, Mrs. J. W. Astley, Mrs. E. E. Grumbine, J. C. Humphries, Percy Robinson, Robert Teasdale, Mrs. Florence Griffin, L. M. Faulkner, and Edward M. Rowe.

Bartelme Club Opens Camp in Michigan

A rustic cottage on the shores of Lake Manistee in western Michigan will resound thru this month and next to the voices of teen-aged girls experiencing for the first time the joys of a real summer's outing together.

Mrs. Roy L. Davis [Carlos Photo]

For many years past, Mrs. Roy L. Davis, president of the Mary Bartelme Clubs for Girls, and members of her board had envisioned just such a vacation retreat for the young girls entrusted to the care of their organization. But the specialized program of providing a normal home life in pleasant surroundings for the young charges entailed heavy obligations that would not permit a vacation budget.

For instance, there was the request last year from the Council of Social Agencies and the Juvenile court of Cook county for expansion of the Mary Bartelme program to include maintenance of a new residence patterned after the two established in Austin and in Evanston for girls who otherwise would be denied a wholesome home environment. The request, of course, was a glowing tribute to the part the philanthropic society is playing in assisting maladjusted girls to assume happy and useful places in society. But the problem of financing another house was no easy one.

However, a drive for funds was launched, Lakewood home on Chicago's north side was purchased and 12 girls were given residence there under supervision of an experienced housemother. This group of youngsters now is summering at the Lake Manistee cottage in Michigan.

The summer residence, which is located on the outskirts of the city of Manistee near Lake Michigan, belongs to Mrs. Lucy Scuphone, assistant housemother at Lakewood. She wanted to continue housemother duties thru the summer months and also wanted to open the summer home. So enthusiastic Mary Bartelme board members decided they would be able to expand their budget sufficiently to pay a nominal rental on the property and allow Mrs. Scuphone to take the girls along with her to Michigan. At the end of a month's stay, girls from another residence will replace the Lakewood group.

"It is the beginning of the realization of a long cherished dream," Mrs. Davis explained, "and it is a summer program we want to continue annually."

The program of outdoor sports—swimming, fishing, picnicking, and rural excursions—will be interspersed with a constructive schedule of homemaking and cooking. Manistee is in a fruit bearing country, and the girls expect to work in some of the neighboring orchards and assist with canning of the fruits. The Lakewood housemother, Mrs. Zella Maus, is in direct charge of the youthful group.

As a benefit for the summer project, a group of Winnetka supporters of the Mary Bartelme program have arranged to present Mrs. Donn Rawlins Court in a book review at 2:30 o'clock the afternoon of July 25 in the Michigan Shores club. Mrs. Don Hayden Rose is being assisted in arrangements by Mrs. Robert Cutting, a niece of Judge Mary Bartelme who founded the service club 31 years ago, Mrs. Roy O. Siemon, and Mrs. Axel Hofgren. Preliminary to the benefit, Mrs. Hugo Delmar has planned to entertain board members at luncheon next Friday in her home at Edgemere court, Evanston.

Originally organized to care for girls who, thru no fault of their own, had become wards of the Juvenile court, the club since has accepted girls from the Chicago Orphan asylum, the family service bureau of the United Charities, the Illinois Children's Home and Aid society, the St. Mary's Home for Children, and other agencies.

Only those girls with recognized potentialities for development are accepted in the Mary Bartelme homes, where rights and privileges and freedoms of a normal home life are supplied. Financial support is from voluntary contributions, dues from members, interest from investment, and partial reimbursement of girls' board by the Cook county commissioners, thru Juvenile court commitments, guardians, and relatives.

One day each year, designated as "Mary Bartelme club day," is set aside for a gathering of all friends and supporters of the club. The party this year has been set for July 27 in the gardens at the Evanston home of Mrs. Davis, with Mrs. Benjamin F. Ellis and Mrs. Sanford D. Williams in charge of arrangements.

One of the supporting groups, the Rogers Park auxiliary, is busily engaged during the absence of the girls from Lakewood home in completely cleaning and renovating the residence.

Eastern Shore Summer Life More Normal

BEVERLY, MASS. It seems much like old times these July days on the north shore with every one of the largest hotels from Nahant to Rockport welcoming guests, and many finding it difficult to serve those who seek to summer in the picturesque colonies, many for the first time since the war. Some of the hotels have been closed since the 1941 season.

Another indication of the return of summer life to normalcy is seen in the opening of the summer playhouses, a revival of the straw hat circuit which covers Cape Cod, the Berkshires, and even crosses the border into New Hampshire. Many stage and screen stars are coming to the north shore for summer stays, and as usual they will not miss an opportunity for a try out before a north shore audience, national as it is in make-up.

With the coming of July the church fairs again are in favor. This is the season when churches—with all the summer folks here—plan and succeed in raising large sums of money for church activities the year around. The summer visitors enter wholeheartedly into these programs and many serve on various committees and take part in the colorful programs.

Christ Episcopal church in Hamilton opened the fair season on Thursday. Among those serving on fair committees is Mrs. Barrett Wendell of Chicago.

Latin America will provide the themes for the annual fair of St. John's Episcopal church at Beverly Farms which will be held July 26 with Mrs. Nathaniel S. Simpkins Jr., chairman of the committee. Mrs. William H. Moore of Chicago and Rockmarge, Pride's Crossing, is active on the committee. Flags of all the Latin American countries will decorate the booths. Attendants at the various booths will be attired in South American costumes, and a Latin American band will furnish the music for the afternoon and evening.

Mothers' Drama Club Plans Picnic for Child Players

The Mothers' Drama club will hold its annual picnic for youngsters enrolled with the Children's Civic theater on Thursday, beginning at 10 o'clock at the Rustic Shelter in Lincoln park. Festivities, which are under the direction of Mrs. Edward H. Mueseler, will continue until 8:30 that evening. Assisting with arrangements are Mrs. Edward F. Noelle and Mrs. Charles Stone.

This season's theater enrollment has totaled 237 youngsters, an increase of 50 over last summer. Sponsored by the Chicago Drama league and the city of Chicago, the Children's theater is a free summer training project conducted at Garfield park in drama, music, and dancing for boys and girls between the ages of 8 and 18. Mrs. Katherine Atz, costumer, supervises the mothers' group in the making of costumes for plays which will be presented by the children each Monday evening in August at Thorne hall. Free admission tickets for these productions may be obtained thru the Chicago Drama league, 410 S. Michigan av., or at Garfield park.

Thru the Looking Glass

By Eleanor Nangle

We hope you ARE vacationing at home, like a good patriotic girl who feels privileged rather than griped at having to make way for the men and materiel heading from the east to the west coast. And we can tell you how to make it one of the best vacations you ever had, one from which you'll go back to work a better looking, better rested woman than you've been in years.

You've got two weeks, with no clock to punch. You've got the nest egg you were going to shoot on a ranch, or a farm, or at some resort. Do something constructive with both, something that will boost your morale and improve your appearance. This is your chance to get at a lot of self-improvement you've been hankering for.

Sunbathe, by all means [but don't sunburn!]. Sleep a lot. Eat a lot. Swim, walk, ride a bike. Do something for exercise, preferably out of doors. Have fun. Maybe you can give a party for all those people you've been obligated to for so long; maybe you're all caught up on your social obligations and can, during your vacation, go to some delightful ones you'd have to turn down if you were toiling six days a week.

But above all, give your good looks an overhauling. Maybe your hair is a mess and has been for the last couple of years. This is your chance to brush it, wash it, dry it in the sun. This is your chance to have it restyled by a GOOD hairdresser, or to have half a dozen wonderful reconditioning treatments that will burnish it back to beauty.

This is your chance, too, to do something about your figure. To start, sign up for that reducing course you've been wanting to take, and to start off by having a reducing session every three days for the first two weeks, so that you get the hard part over with and lose 10 or 15 pounds immediately. After this vacation start you can go less often, or carry on at home—you'll know how, and you'll be so inspired by your success during your vacation that you'll find it easy to muster the necessary will power for constancy.

Have some face treatments, luxurious ones, that tone up your complexion and give it the renewal of its youth. Have your nails conditioned, and get a good permanent. Try a new make-up.

Make every day of your vacation at home a beautifying day. Cream your face, brush your hair, do your nails, improve your posture. Play with your hair until you find the style variations you like—and that are new and different. Study the fashion magazines and plan your fall and winter wardrobe. Take naps, and gorgeous baths all frilled up with colognes and dusting powder.

This may be, when you figure it out, the kind of vacation you've been wanting, one in which you have the time, the money, and the facilities right here in town to wallow in the luxury of physical improvement, from head to toe.

Death Leaves Gap in Chicago Artists' Ranks

By Eleanor Jewett

The recent death of Albert H. Krehbiel, who had been a member of the faculty of the Art institute school for the last 39 years, brings another gap in the lines of our well known Chicago painters. Mr. Krehbiel was also a professor in the architectural department of the Illinois Institute of Technology. His paintings were famous for their rich color and decorative qualities.

Mr. Krehbiel loved to paint winter landscapes. Those who know the Desplaines river could often recognize the country he was painting. In summer Mr. Krehbiel adopted the dunes around Saugatuck for his favorite theme and many is the picture in which his varied interpretations of their shifting beauty appeared. If some one could splash a rainbow and catch the shower of colors on canvas, that man was Krehbiel. His pictures will long be remembered for their happy note, their impression of joy in nature and the sheer beauty of their impetuous, irresponsible color.

Professor Krehbiel had an interesting career. In 1903, a student at the Chicago Art institute, he won a traveling scholarship and went abroad to study under the famous Jean Paul Laurens in the Julien academy in Paris. He won four gold medals while a student there, the largest number ever awarded to an American art student. On his return from Paris in 1906, he became a member of the Art institute faculty. He painted and exhibited thru the years and many honors came his way.

His most notable contribution to permanent art in this country are his murals for home and public buildings. Perhaps the most important of the latter are the large canvases installed on the walls and ceilings of the Supreme and Appellate court rooms in the Illinois Supreme court building at the state capitol in Springfield.

Mr. Krehbiel was among the earliest members of the Cliff Dwellers of Chicago and he often exhibited in their club rooms. His sudden death is a great loss to his fellow members in the club, to his many students, and to the many who followed his delightful work and found pleasure in it.

There is an amusing and attractive exhibit current thru July 21 in the Little gallery, Esquire theater, 58 E. Oak st., "Behind the Scenes with a Cartoonist" by Lois Fisher. The exhibit in part was shown earlier this season at the Tudor gallery, Chicago Woman's club, but it is well worth seeing again. The "Elegant Eighties" note cards, created in collaboration with Herma Clarke of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE will easily win a second appreciative smile from the visitor, and the illustrations from the Marge "Fresh From the Hills" stories will give the repeat visitor another laugh or two. Miss Fisher has a new slant on portraiture which should be a delight to the spectator. She has been using it with great success at the Officers club in Chicago.

Instead of drawing the usual portrait of her subject, Miss Fisher sketches her impression of his real self and calls it "Caricature of the Subconscious." Probably, realizing the significance of the word "caricature," the artist gives her cockeyed impression of his real self, drawing with a conscious humor. At all events, however, she squares her results with her subjects, the service men like their impressions tremendously.

In the Esquire theater exhibit Miss Fisher offers a Caricature of the Subconscious of Clifton Utley, of Professor Thurstone, and of a Quiz Kid. They must be seen to be believed, but they are very ingenius. As a parody on the stuffed shirt portrait they win first place.

John F. Nachorney is opening an extremely attractive exhibit of landscapes in the Esquire theater Little gallery on July 22 to continue thru Aug. 4. Mr. Nachorney is a member of the All-Illinois Society of Artists, the Palette and Chisel, and the North Shore Art Guild.

• • •

Roman Harlan has an interesting little group of portraits at the Lake Shore club. Several of them are of men in service. Among those are Rear Adm. H. G. Taylor, Rear Adm. Albert Cushing Read, and Capt. Benyaurd B. Wygant. The portrait of Professor Sonosen of Purdue has a likable composition; the introduction of books strikes a happy note. The portraits of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Mallott make an engaging pair. Mr. Mallott was president of the Lake Shore club until last February. A young girl, "Elizabeth" and a little girl, "Nell Smith," make pleasant interruptions in the line of service men's portraits.

The exhibit will continue to Aug. 1.

The Chicago Woman's club, Fine Arts building, is offering thru July a colorful exhibit of paintings by Florence Hope Bissell in the Tudor gallery. Mrs. Bissell is a graduate of the Teacher's College of Southern Illinois and has studied at the University of Chicago and at the Art institute. Art has always been her chief hobby and she has been successful in producing gay and decorative paintings, many of them of flowers. Her portraits are amusing rather than truthful; she delights in catching a memorable occasion in paint, rather than going heavily into the subject and putting down every detail of the event with heavy underscoring of the persons involved.

Mrs. Bissell uses water color and oil. If she has a choice, it is water color for medium and flowers or landscapes for subject. Her work is diversified and gay. Her exhibit will give a great deal of pleasure to those who see it.

A group show of water colors has just been hung in the Associated American Artists galleries, 846 N. Michigan av. Among the artists represented are George Grosz, Aaron Bohrod, William S. Schwartz, Paul Sample, and Adolf Dehn. A number of excellent drawings by Frederic Taubes, Ernest Fiene, Raphael Soyer, and Thomas Hart Benton may also be seen in the exhibit. The exhibitions in these galleries are limited to members of the association, which makes for a more or less limited appeal. There are so many artists painting in this country it seems rather absurd to confine the activities of a contemporary gallery to a small group. Those who frequent galleries like a wide range and choice of both work and painter.

The Cordon club, Fine Arts building, has a delightful water color exhibit by members in its galleries. Among the notable efforts are "Barn" by Miriam S. Hurford, "Landscape" by Marie Blanke, "Daffodils" by Nelly Deachman, "Dicky Tyler" by Carolyn Tyler, and a miniature, and "Old Gateway" by Katherine Wolcott.

Chicago Heads of Y.W.C.A. to Meet Official

Mrs. Katherine M. Beppler

Mrs. Katherine M. Beppler of the leadership division of the national board of the Young Women's Christian association, will come from New York on Friday to confer for a few days with Chicago Y. W. C. A. officials, program chairmen, and department heads concerning recruitment of women for professional work with the national organization.

Acceleration of the Y. W. C. A. program to meet war time needs and inroads on the association's staffs made by the military and emergency war services have combined to create a shortage in staff personnel. More than 2,800 professional and approximately 90,000 volunteer aids now provide the program in 420 community Y. W. C. A.' of the country, Mrs. Beppler said, but many more are needed.

Leaders capable of instructing those in the younger age brackets particularly are needed for Y. W. C. A. work, Mrs. Beppler reports, and the association is looking toward young married women as a possible source for the much needed staff members. The age range of those enrolled in Y. W. C. A. classes, clubs, discussion, and social groups has dropped steadily during the past five years until 75 per cent of the affiliated young women now are under 25 years of age. The younger age range is attributed largely to the development of canteens for teen-age boys and girls, and the increasing number of boys who take girl friends to Y. W. C. A. centers for leisure time recreation.

Training courses for potential Y. W. C. A. leaders are conducted at points thruout the country as registration for professional work warrants. One of these opened last week for a month's session at Ferry hall in Lake Forest.

The Chicago chapter of the association reports openings for professional staff members in all departments.

Fashions and Fancy

Mrs. Gordon Sullivan
[TRIBUNE Photo]

In contrast to the informally clad figures lounging about the pool at the Saddle and Cycle club one hot Sunday morning recently was Mrs. Charles Y. Freeman, who relaxed in a comfortable chair under a shady tree while two of her young grandchildren, Charles III., and Deborah Freeman splashed in the pool under the watchful eye of their grandfather. Mrs. Freeman, one of the many grandmothers who are called into service temporarily to care for the youngest generation, was wearing a stunning dress of red and green print. Over her shoulders was a cape of gold colored thin wool, lined in the print, and on her head was a matching yellow medium brimmed sailor of straw. Mrs. A. Bradley Eben and her sister, Mrs. Chester Dougherty Jr., watched from deck chairs, clad in similar one piece full skirted bathing suits, the former in white and Mrs. Dougherty in yellow. Mrs. Eben's little daughter, Susie, was making her first swimming strokes in a brief print suit of shirred rayon silk with ruffled straps over the shoulders. Her dark hair was done up in pigtails. Enjoying a late luncheon another day at the pool were Mrs. Gordon Sullivan and Mrs. Ross J. Beatty Jr., both in attractive, colorful playsuits. Sitting next to them was Mrs. Roy Flannery, whose tan is easily the deepest in tone of any one at the Saddle. Mrs. Flannery has the type of super-slender figure on which the minimum of bathing suit looks well. Her two piece suit of navy blue consisted of a strapless bra and brief trunks. Mrs. Theodore S. Gary complimented her even, pale cocoa colored tan with a backless sports dress in a slightly darker shade. The dress was made with a square neckline front and back, and buttoned all the way down the center of the back. Mrs. Herbert Stratford, looking like a college sophomore with her pretty, short blonde curls and slender figure, strolled alongside the pool in a two piece ensemble of bright blue and gold plaid. The shorts gave the illusion of fullness thru box plaits, and the bra top was square cut, and tailored.

Spring Fairbank

Keeping little children in sister or brother-and-sister costumes is none too easy these days, but Mrs. Justin A. Stanley usually manages to have her two little tow headed girls dressed alike. Playing in the sandbox back of their north side apartment the other day little Janet and Melinda were wearing twin sun dresses of pale blue thin material, made on tailored lines with nary a ruffle, and smart as could be. Their mother, who expects a reunion with Lt. [j. g.] Stanley this week-end in Lakeside, Mich., was wearing a cool frock of brown and green leaves printed on white. She was sharing with Mrs. Graham Fairbank the pleasurable expectation of seeing their navy husbands, for Lt. Fairbank is due at home next month. Mrs. Fairbank's pretty print sports frock had a detachable skirt and matching shorts. Her elder daughter, Spring, was in the sandbox group, wearing a bright yellow backless sun dress with squared off bib and leaf green drawstring laced thru the waist ending in a bow at the center back. Mrs. Fairbank designed and made the dress. Tiny Dale Ware appeared in a fetching red checked gingham sun dress trimmed in white which her mother, Mrs. Paul Ware, discovered while searching for sister dresses and bought because it was so pretty even tho there wasn't one available for baby Linda. Dale looked crisp and fresh for 10 minutes. Then she became involved in a puddle of water in her own sandbox which visiting friends created by carrying water from the fountain [strictly forbidden], and that was the end of the new sun dress' first appearance. Keeping an eye on her daughter in the courtyard that day was Mrs. Robert Lenington in a fresh summer cotton frock of pale and bright blue checks. A wide ribbon of the paler blue held in order her prematurely white curls.

Costume of the Week: Mrs. Charles E. Davis' all white linenlike dress with its high, round collar, tight waist, rounded hip and shoulder line, and three quarters length sleeves. Her longish hair was held back from the forehead by a black ribbon, and the effect was as cool and refreshing in appearance as a mint julep.

Lorraine Hollander to Wed Saul Leo Simons

The engagement and approaching marriage July 22 of Miss Lorraine Hollander and Saul Leo Simons, son of Mrs. Paul Simons of Los Angeles, Cal., is announced by her mother, Mrs. Paul Weisz of W. Armitage av. The wedding will take place in the Humboldt Blvd. temple. Following a short wedding trip, Mr. Simons and his bride will be at home in Los Angeles.

Resort Colony Mourns Death of Pioneer, 80

EPHRAIM, WIS. On the morning of July 4 there passed a certain glory from the Ephraim sky, for Miss Charlotte Amundson had died.

For 80 years her gentle spirit had spread good cheer thruout this community. With indomitable courage she faced the winds, as she donned snowshoes, to make her lonely way down to the village, a frail little woman with brown eyes and white hair. Her father, Jorgen Amundson, had secured the land on which the original house still stands, two miles north of Ephraim, in the year 1854, one year after the pioneers settled here from the tank colony in Green Bay. We shall all recall last summer when Miss Charlotte broke her arm. Unruffled by the accident, she took her basket to the village as she walked, so that after the doctor had set her arm she might carry her provisions home again.

The Ephraim Yacht club is going strong with a larger membership than ever before. In spite of our rainy season, each Wednesday and Saturday morning one can look out over Eagle bay and watch a dozen or so white sails skimming between the island and the bluff in a deadly race, and on the days between whenever two boats sight each other a race develops.

Tuesday, July 24, is the date of the annual regatta when the arrival of boats and visitors from up and down Lake Michigan is expected. Besides the boating events there will be swimming, diving, and various other water sports.

Last night, at the Village hall, the Peninsula Arts association put on a delightful evening, an entertainment called "Door County on Tour." Knowing that gas for the usual sightseeing is out, six amateur photographers took the large audience about the county, in the four seasons of the year, by means of color stills and movies which they themselves had taken. Ralph Horween of Winnetka showed movies of past Ephraim regattas. The colored stills were exhibited by A. H. Fensholt of Evanston, W. C. West, Mrs. George Martin of Evanston, and Miles Martin and Miss Frieda Brenner of Milwaukee.

As a youngster he spent many summers with his mother at Ephraim.

Black Summer Modes Flatter Mature Figure

By Rea Seeger

New midsummer black dresses, sheer and light as a breeze, are just as flattering as ever to mature figures. This summer they are simple in silhouette, starkly simple, or, when trimmed, are distinctive because of the comparative simplicity of the extra accents.

Sleeves are a trifle longer in these midseason models as if to foreshadow the fall, as many of them will be worn all thru next winter under jackets or coats. But the sable dull texture of the blacks continues, with crepe especially popular, because it slices inches away from incipient bulges or too opulent curves.

Soft shirred details in the bodice tops make for soft figure flattery. The elbow length or three-quarters length sleeves are smoothly fitted, altho shoulders still are flattering in width. Deep vee neck lines add interest and, at the same time, achieve slenderness in line. Many new dresses use the softening details of sheer net or organza insets, as in gracefully cut yokes, insets, or bands in yokes and sleeves that alternate with bands of the opaque crepe.

One of the smartest shops in the country features these sophisticated, dull black dresses for the mature or even heavy figure. The models reflect a superlative designing genius.

In this timely showing there are dresses of dull black crepe for every hour of the day or evening. You'll find long sleeved day time or street dresses beautifully cut and finished. These are the dresses to wear day in and day out, changing them with pastel or white summer costume accessories. Later they can be worn with the first fall hats and accessories, still later under jackets and winter coats.

Afternoon dresses are numerous and outstanding because of the dressmaker details and the flattery of silhouette and contrast. These models stress the beauty of the material, plus the details, such as circular cut ruffles down the side closing, appliqued bow knots of shimmering satin against the dull crepe, soft black satin bows, and the fringe contrast, all in black. All make a superb collection of smart, dull black fashions ready for gala wear thru the next six weeks and later.

Note the long slender lines, the ample width in the skirts achieved with flat pressed plaits in the simple tailored day time dresses, the double plaits and flat controled shirrings in the dresses for afternoon and evening wear.

Such are the newest all-black dresses designed and fashioned for the large and mature figure. Altho the collection includes sizes beginning at 14, the same distinctive dresses are available in sizes 40 and 42. The fine workmanship, fine fabrics, the unusual detail work, and the decorative motifs make this one of the sensational collections to be found in Chicago.

Sketched are four new models indicative of what you'll find in the entire collection. All are on display in a famous Chicago shop. Further information, call Superior 0200.

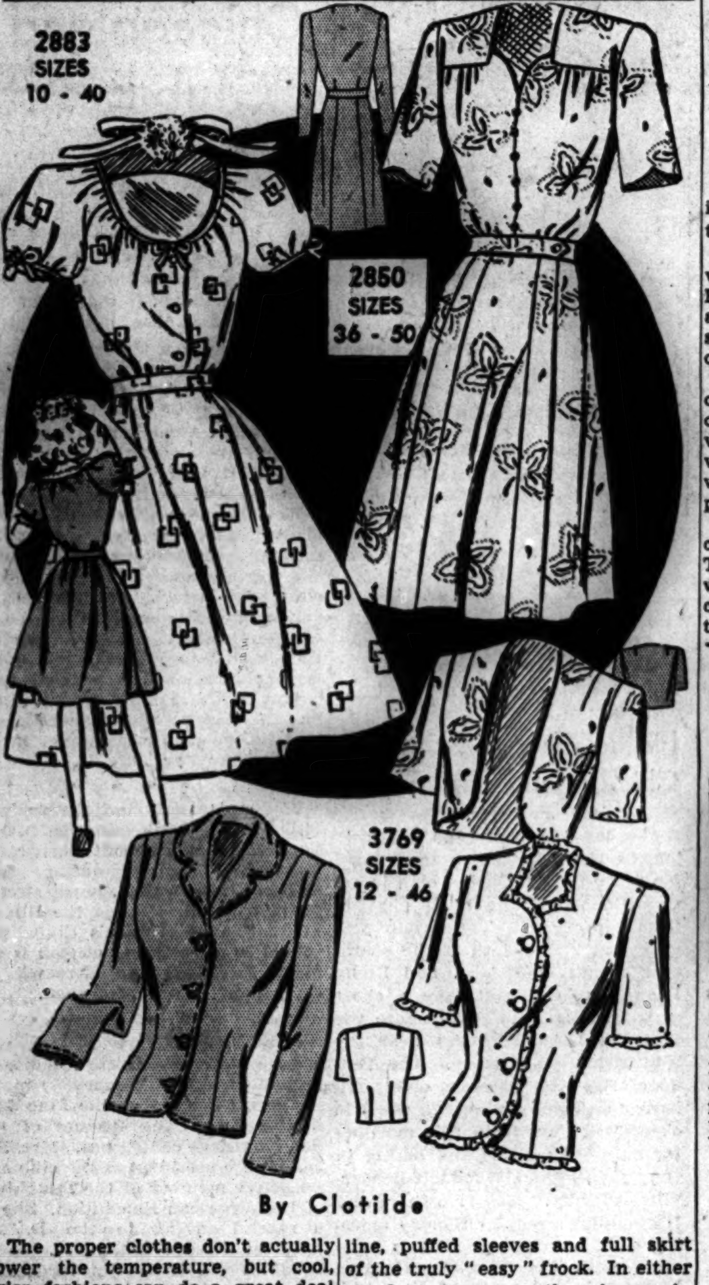
Patterns by Clotilde



By Clotilde

The proper clothes don't actually lower the temperature, but cool, crisp fashions can do a great deal to make you look and feel cooler. Today's three patterns creates three distinctively different summer frocks.

No. 2883 adopts the round neckline, puffed sleeves and full skirt of the truly "easy" frock. In either sturdy cottons or the sheers, in plain colors or prints, it's a handsome frock for "dog days."

No. 2850, with the air of an afternoon frock, keeps to cool, trim lines. The neckline is heart-shaped, the scalloped sleeves short, and the skirt paneled like that of dresses in fine autumn crepes.

No. 3769 may team with a separate skirt. The one pattern makes a bolero and two styles of cardigan jacket. The bolero may be made to accompany the dress fashioned with design No. 2850.

Style No. 2883 is designed for sizes 10 to 40. Size 16 rquires 3⅜ yards of 35 inch fabric.

Style No. 2850 is designed for sizes 10 to 40. Size 36 requires 3 yards of 39 inch fabric.

Style No. 3769 is designed for sizes 12 to 46. Size 36 requires ⅞ yard of 39 inch material for bolero; 1⅝ yards of 54 inch fabric for long sleeved jacket; 1¾ yards of 35 or 39 inch material for short sleeved version, with 2¼ yards of edging.

Each pattern is 10 cents plus 2 cents for mailing.

The summer edition of The Chicago Tribune Book of Clotilda Fashions is now on sale at the Public Service offices, 1 S. Dearborn st. and Tribune Tower lobby, for 15 cents. The cost is only 12 cents if the book is ordered with a pattern from the address in coupon.

On the House
By Louise Bargelt

It is said that carpet beetles have a wider range of appetite than moths, tho they are not so prevalent, but all women are interested in keeping their household treasures safe from fabric insects whether these are carpet beetles, cigaret or "tow bug" bettles or clothes moths, and control measures are, in general, the same for all three tho special precautions can be taken to prevent damage by each. There is a free booklet available, "Fabric Insects and How to Combat Them," which gives simple, inexpensive methods of protection against these three types of insects. Incidentally it may be said that about 99 per cent of the insect damage to fabrics and animal products used for clothing and house furnishings is caused by the above type of insect while even leather goods can be attacked by the carpet beetle.

Have you some golden oak furniture or woodwork which you would like to change into bleached wood? Paint or enamel can brighten wood wonderfully, but there are those who prefer the beauty of modern bleached finishes. . . we've prepared a list of steps in the bleaching of golden oak wood, of furniture or woodwork which has perhaps darkened thru the years and under many repeated coats of varnish.

[For "Seven Steps in Bleaching of Golden Oak" and also for source to contact for "Fabric Insects and How to Combat Them," please send addressed, stamped envelope to Louise Bargelt, Home Owners' Editor, The Chicago Tribune.]

Seven Items Help Lighten Your Chores

By Edith Weigle

Here are some helpful household items, some of them new, all of them useful and inexpensive:

1. A perforated metal cylinder with a handle, called a soap saver. Remove the bottom and insert odds and ends of left-over soap. A quick suds results by simply swishing the container thru the water.

2. Two excellent kitchen knives, one of the small paring size, the other larger, both made of fine vanadium flint and protected by a wooden block in the grooves of which they are contained. The price, boxed, is three dollars.

3. Sanitary, disposable dish cloths or work cloths made of paper fiber. They are sturdy and tough when wet, can be used for any number of cleaning jobs, and because of their texture grease will not sink into them. A package of five dozen of these costs only 85 cents.

4. Your own personal colored labels for the fruits and vegetables you are canning this summer. In six different designs they are priced at 25 cents for 48 gummed labels. One, for example, has a design of a gay red wheel barrow and the words: "From the garden of . . ." Another is decorated with strawberries and says, "Put up by . . ." You fill in the rest.

5. A very handy, practical canvas bag for cracking ice cubes. It's bound in red tape and has some clever little blue figures on it. The top is narrowed and you simply fold it over after the ice has been inserted, then pound with a hammer or mallet. The price is 75 cents.

6. Wax paper printed with circus animals in color. A package of 40 sheets, 11 x 13 inches, costs only a quarter. Nice for wrapping up sandwiches for the children.

7. A large flannel cloth impregnated with a chemical which keeps silver from tarnishing. Wrap up a silver bowl or tray or any other silver item in it and avoid frequent polishing. Called silver wrap, its price is a dollar.

[For information on where in Chicago these seven items mentioned by Miss Weigle may be purchased telephone the Tribune Public Service office, Sup. 0200, or write inclosing a stamped, self addressed envelope.]

It's healthy to be palsy-walsy with Mr. Sol . . . but you better invite suntan lotion, sun glasses and CHAP STICK along against too "hot" a friendship! Painful sunburn is the inevitable result if you don't! This is particularly true about lips . . . for the delicate membranes are so easily burned, cracked and parched by hot sun and drying winds. That's why Fleet's CHAP STICK is such a summer-necessity . . . a medicated balm that promotes healing of sun-cracked or parched lips . . . comforting, soothing and smoothing them quickly. It imparts no color . . . just rub over lips for protection. Cost is only 25c at your Druggist's . . . every member of the family who engages in outdoor activity needs one! ★ Mary, Mary, quite contrary,
How does your smoking go?
With roll-your owns and mystery brands
And maybe a pipe to blow? ★

Well . . . never mind . . . they tell me it won't be very long before your own favorite smoke is plentiful again! So continue to ask your Tobacconist for VICEROY—the cigarette that gives a mild, clean smoke from the finest blends of domestic and Turkish tobaccos! The special tip filters OUT tars, resins and other throat irritants, keeps tobacco crumbs and particles IN the cigarette. Ask your Tobacconist for VICEROYS first . . . they're the smart cigarette for the smart woman!

Take my advice and BEGIN each summer day with a clean, fresh feeling . . . let the first taste in your mouth be a real "refresher"! I'm talking, of course, about the pleasant tongue-invigorating flavor of LISTERINE TOOTH POWDER! It's pleasant to the taste as it goes briskly and efficiently to work . . . attacking ugly surface deposits and polishing the enamel of your teeth until they are naturally clean and bright! Ask your Druggist for LISTERINE TOOTH POWDER . . . refreshing and efficient in the new double-size and "exact-pouring" red top container! Try it!

Magic Make-up Remover

Hope you'll follow my advice on the new and easier way to remove caked make-up this summer . . . for the liquid cleanser, Bonne Bell's TEN-O-SIX, gets your skin scrupulously clean without mauling or pulling it. After removing every bit of stubborn, caked makeup and surface grime, Bonne Bell's TEN-O-SIX leaves your skin tingly fresh and radiant looking. Apply this marvelous liquid cleanser nightly and always before putting on your make-up. It's perfect for either an oily or a dry skin. Cost is from $1 to $12 in varying sizes at Marshall Field & Co., Mandel Bros. or Carson, Pirie, Scott.

A word to the wise is sufficient, 'tis said . . . and yet here I go again and again with my repeated story of AMOLIN Deodorant Cream. Truly, you'll find it worth while to ACT on my tip on this dainty cream that smooths on underarms and vanishes quickly . . . neutralizing the odors that chemicals in our bodies create and protecting us against the offensive smell of perspiration on hot summer days. Try this snow-white cream once,—and you'll never be without it . . . the safest, sweetest and easiest way to deodorize efficiently and daintily! Cost of AMOLIN is just 29c and 49c a jar . . . good to the last dab . . . always fragrant and fresh as a rose petal!

72-Page Bird Book — Yours Free!

The FREE book, "Your Canary," is both worthwhile and beautiful . . . 72 pages illustrated with color plates of canaries and remarkable photographs of young fledglings in the nest. Text gives implicit directions for maintaining the health and singing happiness of your "golden pet." Don't miss this chance to get your FREE copy. Address requests to Nancy Sasser, 271 Madison Ave., New York 16, N. Y. and the makers of FRENCH'S Bird Seed and Biscuit (the BALANCED diet) will send your book without delay.

Here is how you can give your feet a "holiday" every day, as the days grow hotter . . . use creamy, minty-fragrant DR. SCHOLL'S Foot Balm. Takes but a minute or so daily. You'll be truly amazed how speedily your burning, sensitive, tender, tired feet are relieved . . . how soothed, comforted, rested and refreshed they will be after a hard day of fatiguing exertion. Better yet — a quick massage every morning with DR. SCHOLL'S Foot Balm is wonderfully effective in helping ward off foot discomforts, minor skin irritations and the fiery burning of summer's hot pavements. Ask for DR. SCHOLL'S Foot Balm at Drug, Shoe or Notions Counters! It really works foot-comforting magic!

Goodness Guaranteed . . . the American Way!

Americans like many things that are English-made . . . but to many, the long-cooked, darker and more bitter-edged English marmalades are a trial. But don't let this prevent you from trying the delicious orange-delicacy made by the WELCH Grape Juice Company especially for American tastes. WELCH'S Orange Marmalade is an ideal blending of jelly-ish smoothness and tender orange peel . . . made from specially selected FRESH oranges . . . contains NO flavor substitutes! Ask your Grocer for WELCH'S Orange Marmalade . . . a super-spread for all kinds of breads!

Moisture Plus Oil for Summer Skins!

The House of GOURIELLI has an uncanny genius for combining ingredients that go right to the cause of beauty problems and give results, but QUICKLY! Take its Active Ozone Cream for instance . . . it gives summer-dry skins moisture PLUS oil in a cream that is blessed with nascent oxygen. Nascent oxygen is released the minute it comes in contact with the skin . . . and the moisture and oil lubricate and soften dry skin to a fresh dewiness, so much younger and prettier looking. And what a wonderful suntan this "Moisture-Oil" cream promotes . . . minus fiery sunburn pain but with that rich shade every woman wants. Ask for GOURIELLI'S Active Ozone Cream ($2 and $1.25) at smart shops; or at Gourielli, Inc., 16 East 55th St., New York 22, N. Y.

A nurse wrote me recently, "The RESINOL Soap you recommend in your column cleanses my body and keeps it fresh longer than any soap I have ever used." That hits the nail squarely on the head . . . for keeping us fresh is what we all ask of a midsummer suds-bath! You'll find RESINOL agreeable to even the most delicate skin,—because it has very little free alkali in it, which is the property that is harsh and drying in so many other soaps. RESINOL has "glamour", too,—a fresh, out-of-doors or "woodsy" fragrance and rich color . . . both resulting NATURALLY from the pure RESINOL ingredients. RESINOL lathers abundantly . . . light, fluffy and easy to rinse! Find it at your Druggist,—ideal bath soap for hot days!

Mild Cottage Cheese Wins New Friends

By Mary Meade

[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune]

Cottage cheese is such a satisfying and healthful addition to a family dinner that it is growing in popularity among housewives. A good source of protein, it can be served in a variety of ways and still supply those essential nutrients sometimes lacking in today's meatless meals.

This creamy cottage cheese soup is just the right beginning for a cold supper or lunch. What's more, it can be prepared in a jiffy.

Cottage Cheese Soup
[Serves six]

4 tablespoons margarine
1 tablespoon grated onion
4 tablespoons flour
1½ tablespoons salt
4 cups milk
2 cups cottage cheese, sieved

Heat the margarine and cook the onion in it until the onion is transparent. Make a white sauce of the margarine and onion mixture, flour, salt, and milk. Add the cheese to the hot sauce and stir it until well blended. Serve immediately.

The next time you are confronted with the problem of stretching a few slices of luncheon meat among several persons, roll two tablespoons of seasoned cottage cheese into each slice and pour a rich raisin sauce over the rolls. This makes an excellent dinner plate with potato salad and grilled tomatoes.

Raisin Sauce

¼ cup firmly packed brown sugar
1 tablespoon flour
½ tablespoon dry mustard
¼ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
1¾ cups boiling water
¼ cup vinegar
¼ cup raisins
1 tablespoon margarine

Mix dry ingredients; add water, vinegar gradually, stirring well. Cook for 10 minutes, stirring constantly. Add raisins and cook 2 minutes longer. Add margarine. Serve hot.

This isn't an unusual recipe but a small amount of cottage cheese and egg gives the ordinary baking powder biscuit a slightly different flavor twist.

Cottage Cheese Biscuits
[Makes 18]

1 egg
2 tablespoons milk
1 cup cottage cheese
2 tablespoons margarine, melted
4 teaspoons baking powder
2 cups sifted flour
1 teaspoon salt

Beat egg slightly and add milk, cottage cheese, and melted margarine. Mix well. Sift baking powder, flour, and salt together, and add to first mixture. Add more milk, few drops at a time, if the dough is too dry to hold together [the consistency should be like that of any biscuit dough]. Turn out on floured board and pat or roll out to half inch thickness. Cut with floured cutter and bake on greased sheet in hot oven, 425 degrees, for about 12 minutes, or until lightly browned.

Cottage cheese also may be served in attractive and delicious desserts. Coconut cheese pie and cheese peaches prove this.

Coconut Cheese Pie
[Unbaked 8-inch crust]

3 eggs
½ cup sugar
1 cup cottage cheese, sieved
2 cups milk
1 cup shredded coconut [fresh or frozen]
1 teaspoon nutmeg

Beat eggs slightly, mix with sugar, cottage cheese, milk, coconut, and nutmeg. Pour into pastry shell and bake in a very hot oven, 450 degrees, for 10 minutes. Reduce heat to 325 degrees and bake about 25 minutes longer, or until center is firm.

Cheese Peaches
[Serves six]

1 tablespoon gelatin
¼ cup cold water
1 cup cottage cheese
½ cup quince jelly
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 cup evaporated milk, whipped
6 peach halves
Chopped nuts

Dissolve gelatin in cold water, then place cup in hot water to melt gelatin thoroly. Rub cheese thru sieve; stir in jelly, gelatin, and lemon juice. Fold in evaporated milk, beaten stiff. Place in freezing tray until solid. Arrange peach halves on individual plates, drop a large tablespoon of frozen mixture on each peach. Sprinkle with nuts and serve as dessert.

Time Clarifies Many Aspects of Childhood

By Gladys Huntington Bevans

[Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

Are you old enough, rather, have you been a mother or father long enough to be able to climb to the crest of a hill of experience, and look back and out over the spreading panorama of childhood, and do some thinking?

Being close, day by day, to children has been illuminating to me. It is all this first hand experience which, in addition to much thinking and study, has helped me to write for parents. But there's more to it than that.

For instance, I remember that, when each of my days was spent with 3 year olds, my own and other parents', I used to think, "This is the best way to get to know all about them." It is and it isn't.

Then when the 5s and 6s were my constant companions I used to think, "This is how you get to understand thoroly little boys and girls of this age." It is and it isn't.

When we got along into the middle teens and then the late teens, I thought the same thing about those ages. But also my convictions concerning how much I had known about child nature and management at 3 and 5 and 11 began to waver a little. Why? Because I was looking backward over the years to a number of things that had happened, the causes of which I hadn't quite understood at the time; and I was finding now the truer and deeper explanation of them as a result of time and experience. I was seeing more clearly and in perspective, in the light of the changes and the development that come with growth, why a child at 5, 9, or 12 does some of the things he does.

But I was also seeing, as I looked on at the lives of my friends and acquaintances and their children, how large a part circumstances and marital affairs played in the children's behavior; how many influences operated. In other words, I was getting a perspective.

As the years go on I find that my perspective grows in scope. I learn more and more. And this applies especially where I have had the opportunity to see the same boys and girls from the time they were really little until they were, as we say, "of age."

Perspective is an illuminating thing. If you're keenly and constantly interested in the subject that this column is concerned with, you find, as I have, that perspective sheds a light. It clarifies. It fills in and enriches your knowledge. It gives you the key to many phases of childhood that used to puzzle you, and to many individual problems for which you had never found the cause but which cleared up of themselves—in the course of time; and for which clearing up you knew that simply "time" was the answer.

Yes, the perspective of time makes parents grow in wisdom, and clarifies many childhood problems. I'm sure that many mothers and fathers who read that statement will agree with me; and I hope that many younger parents will be as eager mentally about understanding childhood as many of them are about books, politics, homemaking, and their careers.

About Mushrooms

The cap of a true mushroom very seldom exceeds five inches in diameter.

Mostly Water

Edible mushrooms contain some nitrogenous foods and about 90 per cent water.

A Friend in Need

[If you are in need, perhaps I can help you. If you have household articles or clothing you no longer need, please let me place them with needy families. Address correspondence to Sally Joy Brown, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago. Activities of this department are sponsored by Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.]

By Sally Joy Brown

There is a great need for all kinds of furniture and household equipment, and nothing that is whole, clean, or usable, regardless of vintage, should be discarded before inquiry is made as to its possible placement in a needy home. Families who went into furnished rooms or doubled with friends because of war conditions are, in some cases, anxious to reëstablish themselves in more suitable quarters pending the return of a soldier son or husband, and we hope surplus pieces will be available for their use.

Mrs. M. writes: "I wonder if you could help me obtain for our new home a few articles of furniture, which, because of the following reasons we have been unable to provide ourselves. My husband has been a bedridden invalid for several years because of a disability incurred in military service during the First World war, and at present he is totally incapacitated. Our elder son supported the home until his death, at which time our only other boy left high school for employment and provided for us until his induction in the army more than two years ago, when we found it necessary to move into furnished rooms to cut expenses. All this time we have lived on the family allowance, our only income, carefully budgeting it to cover our essential needs. Recently I was fortunate enough to locate a stove-heated apartment, and we are anxious to again establish a home for our returning soldier son. We lack a few household items, specifically, an ice box, a kitchen table, and a library table, which we are unable to purchase from our limited resources, and we will appreciate whatever you can do in our behalf."

Transportation can be provided conveniently and least expensively from the south side.

Another furniture request comes from Mrs. C., who also lives on the south side. She is a war wife with one child. During her husband's service overseas she has been living and sharing housing expenses with a friend, whose husband is expected home from service shortly. Mrs. C. therefore has to make other living arrangements and is eager to establish a home of her own. Her only income is the family allowance which provides the needs of herself and child, but cannot be stretched to purchase furniture.

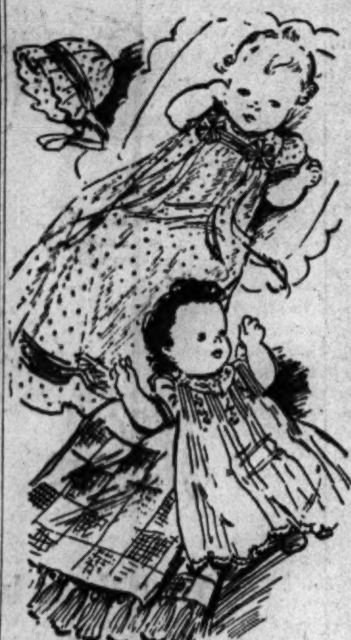
The first, most exciting and festive event in the life of the newest born is the christening. Despite the fact that these cherubs are oblivious to it all, it is a duty and responsibility not lightly passed over, and the infant must be properly attired for the auspicious occasion. New long or short dresses are made of net, lace, or sheerest lawn and batiste, as well as elegant silks.

One lovely set includes a long dress of dotted rayon mesh, trimmed across the yoke, sleeves, and around the hem line with two rows of narrow, white satin ribbon. Dainty lace edges the high, round neck line.



A beautiful hand made dress of the short variety is embroidered around the collarless neck line, the sleeves, and scalloped hem line. Fine pin tucks trim the front of the dress.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 diamond	1 heart	1 spade	Pass
3 spades	Pass	4 spades	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Two of hearts.

There are very few rules of bidding to which there are no exceptions. A well established principle of bidding tactics is the one requiring the possession of four or more trumps when giving partner a jump raise in a suit he has not rebid. The basis of this rule is that the one mentioning the suit may have a holding of only four cards and that therefore, the partnership will hold only seven trumps. This is a majority of only one and does not represent a safe working margin. Games in major suits should rarely be attempted without a holding of at least eight trumps.

However, even to this principle exceptions can sometimes be applied. This was done by the North of today's hand. When South made a free bid of one spade, he felt reasonably sure his bid could go game and desired to make a vigorous bid. Obviously a raise to only two spades would be grossly inadequate. He considered bidding two clubs reasonably confident that partner would find another bid, after which spades would be supported, but finally concluded that such action might complicate matters, and since the singleton heart made him disinterested in any possible no trump contract, he decided to jump to three spades and South went to four.

The deuce of hearts was led and East played the queen. This was won by declarer who immediately returned a heart for dummy to ruff. Then hoping that the spades would be 3-3 he overtook dummy's second trump and continued with the jack. When they failed to break declarer was sunk. Ruffing the small heart in dummy was a thoughtless play. It was not part of any campaign to make ten tricks.

A better bet would have been for declarer to establish diamonds before ruffing or pulling trumps. Even tho West obtained a diamond ruff the hand could be managed.

But by far the better line of play is simple tho colorful. The first trick should not be taken by declarer despite the singleton in dummy. East holds the trick. What can be return? If he continues with a heart, a low one is trumped in dummy. Declarer, retaining control of the heart suit, is now able to draw all four trumps conceding only to the ace of diamonds.

Lady of the House

"Probably never in history have hair and clothes stylists given so much attention to white haired women, but they can't keep us from growing old. And looking it."

We had turned up a little lane and sat down in dappled shade on the bank above the river. Aunt Ella was regarding, with somewhat jaundiced eye, two old turtles that had clambered up a rock in midstream to sun themselves. "Look at 'em! Just sitting and staring. Torpid, tired, old. Don't care a continental!"

"Don't look at 'em, Aunt Ella, if it hurts. Regard this luscious clover, and that patch of green, full-eared oats. Right in their prime!"

"Tomorrow they'll be old, too. I see some yellow already. Besides, it's going to rain again. Look at those oak leaves all turning wrong side up. Sure sign."

There was the river, centuries older than either of us, yet rolling right along—calmly sliding over or around the rocks instead of fussing or protesting. But Aunt Ella is seldom cheerful when she's really hungry, so I decided to break out the sandwiches and coffee instead of moralizing about the river. After a while I would tell her about "Growing Old" as Sophia Zufa—an old lady not yet 25—sees it:

"There was a time when I thought upon growing old with a qualm; but now that I am almost in the process, I find myself becoming accustomed to it, thinking how it will be.

"I know now that as the years go by the memories will be sweeter, the dreams richer, and that I will lean back in my chair with a certain contented sadness, watching life go by and looking on 'with quiet eyes.'

"The sunset of life—it should be beautiful as any sunset, all the sun's rays gathered in one final, glorious, roseate exit.

"It shall be like a quiet rain in a still grove of trees—one of nature's most wonderful splendors, and yet infinitely peaceful."

When I Am Old

When I am old I shall have so much time to View my castles, built so long ago;
If, alas, the gossamer foundations hold,
In dreamhouse apropos.
When I am old I shall have time for peace,
And so many ways to roam;
For all my dreams know different paths,
All leading far from home.
I shall know bluer canopy of sky
Than poet ever told,
I shall have so much time to dream,
When I am old.

Susan

This cherub to our household came
When daisies that wear her name
Were vieing with crimson heads of clover
In spreading glamor over
Meadow carpet's nap of green
To rival in luster her dark eyes' sheen.

Golden lashes soft as thistle down
Fringe eyelids untrained to hold
And entertain an embryo frown
Or plots of mischief growing bold;
If her orbs dance under silken tresses
The plan of Nemesis soon digresses.

Truthful lips, not sparkling eyes,
Gave me the happiest surprise.
At the closing of her day
Sleepily rocking, too tired for play
Her love for me thus was told:
"I hope I'm a grandma when I'm old."

When the tears cleared, we found
His tapestry hung,
And his spirit still living on!

TO GET YOUR Presto SOONER REGISTER NOW AT YOUR DEALER'S

Although the manufacturers of PRESTO COOKERS still have highly essential war work to do, they have been permitted to devote a portion of their huge production facilities to these wonder-working pressure saucepans that make cooking a pleasure.

Shipments of PRESTO COOKERS are now arriving at housewares stores. However, because the manufacturing of PRESTO COOKERS was restricted for almost four years, and because the demand for them is so tremendous, such quantities of these utensils as are being received are, and will be, far too few to supply the demand for some time to come.

The smart thing to do is to tell your dealer NOW that you want a PRESTO COOKER. In fairness to everyone, he will fill all requests in the order in which they are received. So, if you have not already done so, register your name with your dealer, and you will get your PRESTO COOKER with as little delay as possible. Leading housewares stores feature PRESTO COOKERS.

A Friendly TIP . . . If you cannot call at your PRESTO dealer's store at once, fill out and mail this coupon to him:

Just a few of the many reasons why
MILLIONS OF HOMEMAKERS WANT Presto COOKERS
"Your Best Kitchen Helper"

For better family health through more nourishing and appetizing foods . . .
PRESTO Cooked vegetables retain more of their natural vitamin and mineral content, garden-fresh colors and food flavors. Meats, poultry and game are deliciously tender. Soups and desserts excite the most listless appetites, creating an irresistible desire for complete meals.

For greater comfort, convenience and freedom from cooking drudgery...
Amazing PRESTO Cooking speed cuts cooking time from hours to minutes. For example: fresh peas and asparagus cook in 1 to 2 minutes; cauliflower; carrots and string beans, in 2 to 3 minutes; beets in 5 minutes, etc. A low-cost, 4-pound pot roast becomes delectable in 35 minutes; fried chicken, in 15 minutes; a well-done pork loin roast in 45 minutes; tomato soup, in 1 minute; cereals, in 3 minutes; date pudding, in 10 minutes. . . .

For ease and economy in cooking . . .
PRESTO COOKERS are beautiful in design; cast of special, easy-to-clean SIMALLOY, which provides an even distribution of heat, best suited for greatest cooking efficiency. Because of its amazing cooking speed, it saves fuel costs. PRESTO COOKERS are easy to operate. The exclusive HOMEC Seal requires but two simple steps: (1) The cover is placed on the Cooker, and (2) The handles are brought together. That's all there is to it. The clever indicator weight shows and controls the pressure and tells exactly when to start counting cooking time.

Presto COOKERS ARE MADE BY THE WORLD'S LARGEST MANUFACTURERS OF PRESSURE COOKING AND CANNING UTENSILS
